Nixon To Reveal Choice Tonight

Downtown Action Group Discusses Walkways, Signs

DOUG BEVINS (Herald Reporter)

Bright painting of pedestrian walkways and installation of innovative parking lot signs in downtown Manchester should wait until downtown consultant has a chance to review the plans, the Mayor's Downtown Action Committee decided Thursday.

Plans for the improvements were presented to the committee Thursday by Leo Juran, chairman of the Town Parking Authority (TPA).

Juran said the TPA wants to repaint, in a bright "visible" color, two pedestrian walkways linking Main St. with parking lots at the rear of the stores on the east side of the street.

Juran said the walkways could be dressed up easily by the use of paint. The "much-needed improvement" would cost only about $600, he said, and it could be done within two weeks.

Downtown committee members, although favoring the idea, agreed that the project should be coordinated with walkways plans being worked on by Dennis Brown,

New Parking Draws Criticism

The 800 block on the west side of downtown Main St., Manchester, is one location in which angle parking has been changed to parallel parking, and downtown businessman Robert Weinberg of Economy Electric Supply Co. is concerned about "worsening" of the parking situation. Changes in parking space lines were made this week as part of the state transportation department's revision of downtown traffic controls. (Herald photo by Pinto)

President Meets With GOP Leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon decided today on a nominee to succeed Spiro T. Agnew as vice president, and the White House said he would announce the choice in a 9 p.m. EDT television address to the nation.

The nominee himself will be advised of the selection shortly before that address, White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said.

The White House announced a wave of speculation about possible choices to succeed Agnew, who resigned Wednesday and did not contest a charge of federal income tax evasion.

Ziegler said Nixon reviewed possible candidates Thursday night at Camp David, Md., and made the final choice this morning.

Nixon also conferred with Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., the White House said. Nixon would make his announcement in an address from the East Room, before an audience of members of Congress, the Cabinet, the Supreme Court, other government officials, and diplomats.

It was a day of speculation in Washington. Friends of John B. Connally of Texas reported the former Texas governor and former Cabinet member had been offered the nomination.

But a source in the Texas congressional delegation said he would not be the nominee. Connally himself was in Texas and unavailable for comment. His Houston office would not discuss the report.

There also was speculation about House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan as a possible choice.

But Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, the Senate Republican leader, shook his head in the negative when asked whether Ford had been selected.

The President secluded himself overnight at his mountain retreat to sift through the recommendations of Republican leaders, then returned on short notice to the White House.

A spokesman who disclosed the President's helicopter return to the White House said Nixon had not conferred with anyone during his 14-hour stay at Camp David.

From all indications, the names of John B. Connally, Nelson A. Rockefeller and Ronald Reagan still rank high on Nixon's list. But sources familiar with the President's thinking cautioned against focusing exclusively on these three names — a possible sign that the President is considering a surprise pick.

The steadily growing list of long-shot possibilities.

Though Connally's stock with Nixon is unquestioned, there are growing signs that the former Democratic vice president could face a long and troublesome confirmation by Congress.

"If the President names Connally, that would split both parties," said a leading Democratic senator.

Nixon Popularity

NEW YORK (AP) — Pollster Louis Harris says 65 per cent of a cross-section of 1,475 American households again gave President Nixon a negative overall rating in late September, equalling the all-time low registered the previous month. Thirty-two per cent responded positively. In addition, Harris said, Nixon's rating on "inspiring confidence personally in the White House" fell to 77 per cent negative, 18 per cent positive, the lowest since 1969.

Fund Continues

CHICAGO (AP) — The defense fund for Spiro T. Agnew, established by insurance tycoon W. Clement Stone, is still accepting contributions. A spokesman for Stone said Thursday that calls were still coming in from persons who wanted to give money. The former vice president reportedly asked on Wednesday that money be refunded to any contributors asking for it. The fund spokesman said that any money not returned, and the new donations, would be used to help defray Agnew's legal costs.

Krogh Indicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egil Krogh, former boss of the White House plumbers, has been charged with giving false testimony to the original Watergate grand jury. A federal grand jury Thursday charged that Krogh lied under oath when asked about the activities of E. Howard Hunt and G. Gordon Liddy.

Members also agreed that the town planner, who provides similar assistance to the town's Planning and Zoning Commission and Zoning Board of Appeals, should attend Conservation Commission meetings to coordinate wetlands act implementation with planning and zoning actions.

TEL AVIV (AP) —

The Israeli state radio claimed today that an Egyptian armored troop carrier got lost in the Sinai Desert during the night and joined up with mistake with an Israeli tank column.

The Israelis notified their line had one vehicle too many, realized what had happened and "finished off" the Egyptian carrier, the radio claimed.

Syrian battalions claimed the entire front line but did not pinpoint where the battles were taking place. Israel claimed Thursday night its forces had punched six miles beyond the cease-fire lines, drawn when Israel seized the Golan Heights in 1967, and were sitting down the road to Damascus.

Damascus reported Israeli troops were strafing and bombing deep in Syria and claimed a dozen raiding warplanes were shot down in the Damascus area alone. Intelligence sources in Washington expressed belief that the Syrian claim were bloated.

The Israeli state radio reported that civilians returned to 26 of the 27 Golan settlements evacuated when hostilities erupted Saturday in the 1,250 square-mile area in Israel's northeast corner.

The tank forces were continuing to smash their way forward," the broadcast said, without saying how far they had advanced.

Parallel Parking Ires Businessman

DOUG BEVINS (Herald Reporter)

The parking situation on the west side of Main St. in downtown Manchester "is bad and it's getting worse," Robert Weinberg of Economy Electric Supply Co., 824 Main St., says.

Every major grouping of buildings in the entire downtown parking district has some form of town-operated parking adjacent to business," Weinberg said, "except the 800 block."

"We pay an eight-mill tax to the town parking authority," Weinberg said, "which is probably an unconstitutional tax anyway, and borders on the absolutely absurd."

Weinberg was reacting to a report, by Police Chief James Reardon, on changes in parking on Main St. Rearranging Thursday's meeting of the Mayor's Downtown Action Committee, said he has managed "after battling long and hard with a lot of people" to regain several downtown spaces lost in a Connecticut

In Weapons Fund Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate-House conferees have dropped specific overseas troop reductions from a $21.3-billion compromise weapons authorization bill.

A Senate-approved amendment to reduce overseas forces by 40,000 by next June 30 and by 110,000 by Dec. 31, 1975, was eliminated from the final version of the annual military procurement legislation.

Retained was a provision requiring reductions in U.S. forces in Europe by the percentages, if any, by which U.S. NATO allies fail to offset balance of payments trade deficits with the United States.

The bill now goes back to both houses for final action on the compromise.

Blue Ribbon Committee Meets

It is the consensus among members of Manchester's Blue Ribbon Government-Study Committee that, in considering what form of government is best for Manchester, the basic question is "What form of government is best suited for the obvious growth in prospect for the town?"

The 15-member committee was named in Aug. 7. It was instructed to conduct "a thorough study of our (Manchester's) form of government, to determine whether it correctly serves the best interests of Manchester."

The instructions added that the study should be "thorough and objective, non-political, and reflecting a diversity of the various interests in Manchester."

The committee is to report its findings to the Board of Directors in May 1974. Should its study indicate a need for charter revision, the board would appoint a new Charter Revision Commission, which would make a determination of whether a townwide referendum should be scheduled.

The 1972-73 Charter Revision Commission rejected any change in Manchester's form of government and its report urged a continuation of the existing council-manager form. Its report was accepted by the directors.

The committee, which meets the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month, is inviting two members of the dissolved Charter Revision Committee to its Oct. 24 meeting for comments — John FitaGerald, who was chairman of the commission and who has the council-manager form of government, and State Sen. David Olegard, who is for a change to the strong-mayor form.

In addition, the Blue Ribbon committee will conduct a public hearing Nov. 14, to hear the views of the public.

The committee tentatively agreed Wednesday that its study, basically, will be of the council-manager and strong-mayor forms of government, and the many variations of each.

Committee member Eileen Stern, who sat in on the meetings of the Charter Commission Revision Commission as an observer for the League of Women Voters, cautioned against a change in government merely to satisfy those who don't like the present town manager.

"Any change should be for a greater reason than just that," she said.

Archibald Stuart agreed. "It should be part of the democratic process and a legitimate election issue — when people want a change in the person filling the post of town manager. It shouldn't necessitate a change in the charter."

Vernon Food Stamp Program Explanation Planned

Mayor Frank McCoy has started action to have the food stamp program explained to senior citizens in an effort to clear up any confusion concerning the program as it applies to them.

The program is run by the Food and Nutrition Department of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and is designed to increase food purchasing power of those on limited incomes.

Mayor McCoy said he has contacted Cecil McCarthy, who heads the food stamp program of the state welfare department that is involved in administering the program. He said McCarthy said he will arrange to have someone from his department come to Vernon's projects for the elderly, as soon as someone is available.

Mayor McCoy expressed concern that some senior citizens who are eligible for food stamps may not be getting them because they do not understand the program.

Unlike Social Security payments, food stamps have nothing to do with the age of a person. Eligibility for the stamps is based solely on a person's income and his assets.

Francis Pitak, executive director of the Housing Authority, said he has a pamphlet at his office at Franklin Park that explain the stamp program. They are also available at the King Contractors of Bloomfield, in addition to constructing a 28-foot-wide road, installed new storm drainage pipe, placed granite curbs, and constructed a new sidewalk on the north side of the street. LTM Working On 'Fiddler'

The village of Anatevka, complete with the simple home of Fevye, Motel's tailor shop, and the town pump that pumps real water, has been constructed in the Little Theatre of Manchester (LTM) studio for rehearsal for the LTM production of "Fiddler on the Roof" which will be presented Nov. 9 and 10, 15, 16 and 17 at East Catholic High School.

Frank Minutillo, LTM vice president for production, is production chief for the play. The construction crew is headed by Nancy Chapdelaine, David Newirth and Clay Massey. Massey has been responsible for design and decor.

Among the numerous artifacts collected by Rosemarie Belcher, properties chairman, are milk pails, ewers (wide mouthed jugs), stools and ladies—all items similar to the ones used in this Russian peasant community. She has been assisted by Ann Miller, Lucille Powers and Tom Dunphy.

Others working behind the scenes are Mike Kennedy and Dusty Behrens, lighting; Sue Tukey, costumes, and Jayne Newirth, makeup.

Tickets are now on sale at Liggett's Drug Store in the Manchester Parkade, or from Erna Burgess, 39 Hudson St.

Oil Recovery Machine

As the energy crisis continues—and it may for some years—the search for new energy sources will accelerate. Attention will inevitably turn to known energy sources which are not being used.

Offshore oil deposits will be among the most tempting. Their development has been hindered somewhat by the fear of environmentalists that spills or "blow-outs" might have a very adverse effect on the ecology of the sea and nearby beaches and lagoons which are breeding places for wildlife.

One of the most notable of these was the oil spill off of Santa Barbara, Calif., several years ago which fouled the channel there and deposited oil along the beaches, killing much sea life and wild fowl.

There have been other such disasters including the massive spill off the coast of England when the Torrey Canyon tanker grounded. Pipelines, too, have ruptured spilling oil.

The fear of oil spills from offshore drilling may be lessened somewhat by a U.S. Coast Guard oil-spill cleanup machine which is presently undergoing tests in San Francisco Bay and outside the Golden Gate.

The prototype oil recovery machine was built by the Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. It has the great virtue that it is transportable by air and hence can be rushed to any scene of oil spillage off the coastal United States very quickly.

The machine is rated at recovery of 60,000 gallons of oil per hour. And in tests it has performed close to this rating.

In case of a spill, which is contained within a log boom or other containing float, the machine can work within the enclosure, seeping up oil before it has the opportunity to escape.

The machine can be towed by Coast Guard cutter to the scene of spills and can be operated by itself or from a nearby tender through an "umbilical" line, containing all controls.

Oil which is swept up can then be pumped to nearby tankers and transported to shore storage facilities for future use.

The machine looks somewhat like a paddlewheel boat, with a four-foot diameter rotating drum with vanes. The drum rotates and the vanes pick up the oil which is then wiped from the vanes and hence pumped to storage vessels and shore-side tanks.

Tests of the machine will be watched very closely by oil producers and ecologists alike. If it performs up to specifications it may open off-shore sites to oil production.

Tanker spills could also be swept up by the machine. This might obviate one of the principal objections to an oil storage depot and refinery in Maine to supply oil-hungry New England more directly than is now possible.

Perhaps an efficient sweeping machine may provide an effective compromise between an economy very short of oil and the fears of environmentalists of damage from this type of oil producing operation.

Our Air Force Bombs Again

While our attention has been diverted elsewhere, our beloved American foreign policy has been shaken to its very roots by appalling developments in Cambodia.

As you know, Congress made the fatal mistake last August of cutting off all our bombing missions in behalf of our staunch ally, General Lon Nol, who, in keeping with Cambodian custom, spells his name backwards.

At the same time, the capital of Phnom Penh was surrounded, all major highways were cut, supplies were running short, the enemy held most of the country-side and the situation was, in a word, "Agghhhhh!"

Our military experts grimly predicted that without our B-52s and fighter bombers blasting the bejabs out of the enemy night and day, General Lon Nol (that's the correct spelling!) would be a goner in a week.

Since then, of course, the General's been winning the war hand over fist. Not once, for some reason, has he asked us to send our bombers back. What he asked instead was that we kindly airmail him the $1 million a day our bombing had been costing us.

Naturally, all this has caused consternation in Washington. The President still wants to know how he can achieve peace with honor if Congress won't let him bomb anybody. The Air Force is working on a new manual, "Defeat Through Air Power." And hardest hit has been the Bureau of War Permits in the basement of the State Department.

Actually, the Bureau hasn't had a customer in many months. American aid not being what it used to be, so Bureau Chief Homer T. Pettibone was happily surprised to look up and find the hereditary Ratt of Phynkia standing at the wicket.

"You wish to apply for a War Permit?" asked Mr. Pettibone, rubbing his hands. "Where did I put them? Ah, yes, here we are. Now, then, are you a Bastion of Democracy? The Key to all of Wherever You Are? A Domino?"

"All three," said the Ratt, "and a Bulwark of Freedom to boot."
"Good, good. Let's see. Purpose of War? I'll just stamp that. Eradicate Communism."

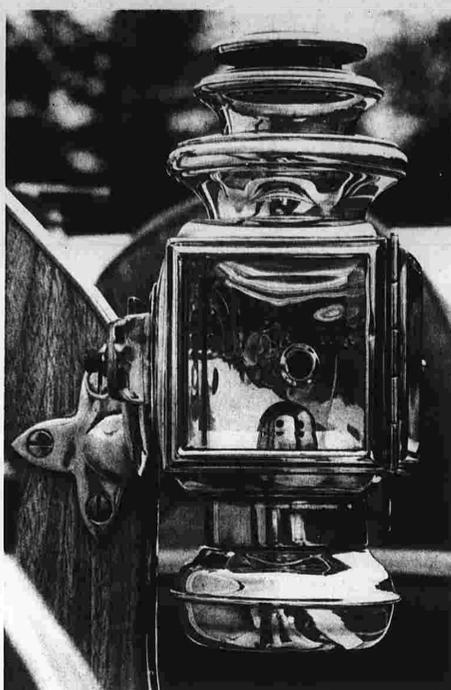

"Right," said the Ratt. "Two Princes, the ex-Ratt and my mother-in-law, who still is in. All known Communists, I know them."

"Fine, fine. Now then, would you like strategic bombing, tactical bombing or saturation bombing? Check one."
"How much will it cost you?" said the Ratt.

"Oh," said Mr. Pettibone, "I think we could give you a nice little round-the-clock bombing pattern for, say, $1.2 million a day."

Shuns Reality

WASHINGTON—On foreign aid, Congress continues to shun reality. It still refuses to give even a courtesy hearing to Arkansas Sen. Bill Fulbright, a man with an idea whose time came years ago.

For more than a decade Fulbright has been arguing against bi-lateral, or country-to-country, aid on the grounds that it is a Cold War relic and notoriously inefficient. With steely logic, Fulbright has campaigned for a system whereby the "have" countries get together and jointly contribute financial assistance to the "have-nots." The Senate snubbed him again the other day in passing a $1.2-billion foreign economic aid bill.

It is hard to understand why even those knuckledrums who still believe Uncle Sam should save the world are not moved by Fulbright's aging proposal, especially this year. Never before has the United States been under such serious economic pressure from our foreign friends and enemies. Quite literally, the United States no longer can afford to keep sending dollars to the so-called underdeveloped countries—some of which use the dough to develop the bank accounts of their rulers and kin-folks thereof.

But since foreign aid has become as much of a fixture as the Washington Monument and four-letter words in print, why not make it an international project? Almost every other country in the world is now throwing its weight around to squeeze the American dollar by currently manipulations, oil politics and anti-U.S. votes in the United Nations. If we've gotten all that big, they should

Today's Thought

The following is an appropriate prayer for our day from a man who lived in the nineteenth century.
"O my Savior, let me not fall little by little, or think myself able to bear the indulgence of any known sin because it seems so insignificant. Keep me from sinful beginnings, lest they lead me on to sorrowful endings. Amen."

Brandt's Kissinger

NEW YORK, N.Y.—It is hard to imagine two heads of government more unlike than Richard Nixon and Willy Brandt, yet they are tied to each other in mutual need.

Brandt needs Mr. Nixon's blessing for his policy of détente with Russia and Eastern Europe. He knows his own people wouldn't welcome it except within the larger frame of the Atlantic Alliance, including the continued American military presence in Europe.

Mr. Nixon needs Brandt, especially after Watergate, to give him acceptance in the highly skeptical political and intellectual community of Western Europe.

Hence, Mr. Nixon's urgent invitation to Brandt to make a special trip to Washington after his speech at the opening of the United Nations in New York. The conversation between the two men was in part about Mr. Nixon's coming visit to Europe's capitals. If it comes, as is likely, in the days when Brandt was still foreign minister and not yet head of his own government.

It was Bahr who planned the major outlines of the Ostpolitik, and Bahr who held the crucial talks with Andrei Gromyko which brought the breakthrough. Anyone speaking with him for any length of time, as I had a chance to do in Bonn after his Gromyko negotiations, is inevitably impressed with his long historic view, his understanding of power relations and his shrewd tactical sense—much the qualities that Henry Kissinger possesses. While Bahr lacks Kissinger's personal flair and presence, it has been no great secret that Schuel has been crowded by Bahr, much as Rogers felt crowded by Kissinger.

It is no surprise then to learn that Schuel is restless and that there is talk of Brandt offering him his support for the post of president of the West German republic. An article by Rudolf Augstein, head of the influential weekly, Der Spiegel, backs up the proposal to replace the distinguished but somewhat current president, Gustav Heinemann, with Schuel.

Who then would replace Schuel as foreign secretary? The answer is—Egon Bahr. If Brandt carries this through, he will have done a Nixon with his own Kissinger. The marriage of fact with form would be complete in Bonn, as in Washington. What would give the parallel even greater poignancy is the fact that Bahr is half-Jewish, on his mother's side. What a contrast to Hitler and the Nazis when—and if—Kissinger and Bahr (who know each other well) meet for the first time in their new posts.

The Candidates Are Saying

Charles J. Crocini

(Crocini is a Republican candidate for the Manchester Board of Directors.)
As a candidate for the Board of Directors, I have taken the time since my nomination to take a good, hard look at those areas I am best qualified to examine.

Samuel Maltempo

(Maltempo is the Republican candidate for Manchester town treasurer.)
I have talked to many retired town employees during my travels around Manchester. One request which I seem to receive most frequently from these retirees concerns the monthly payment of their retirement checks.

Definite signs of duplication and empire building.

Did you know, for example, that at least three town departments have fully equipped grounds crews? Have you ever asked why schools were unable to open because their grounds and walks were not plowed? The answer is this: The Town Highway Department operates snow removal equipment which plow our streets and other associated areas, while the Board of Education must use its own inadequate equipment or hire an outside contractor to assist in snow removal.

Why should the town and Board of Education operate separate building maintenance departments? Is it economically sound to have the police and highway departments operate vehicle maintenance facilities, while the Board of Education vents out its repairs? Consolidation and economies run hand in hand, and I feel today's town operation is lacking in many areas.

Most of these retirees feel it would be better for them, during this period of rising costs, if they could receive their retirement checks every two weeks, like the active town employees get paid.

I am concerned, and I realize this is a very real problem. Therefore, if I am elected as Manchester's town treasurer, I will do whatever is possible to see that these retirees receive their pension checks every two weeks.

FIRE PREVENTION

Fire and terror. The words become synonymous. That sudden uncontrollable blaze can threaten lives, consume forests and wildlife, destroy a business. Completely. Irrevocably. It could have been prevented—with care. The mundane, everyday breeding areas for fire—litter and unremoved trash, inadequate wiring, cigarettes and campfires left smoldering—could be eliminated. Unexpectedly, fire prevention and anti-pollution become synonymous, too. Both affect our environment; the quality of life.

The goal is clear. The path to that goal is within each person's scope. The hazards of fire and pollution—at home or at play—must be removed. Care and concern is everyone's job. Going about the job is everyone's obligation. It is no longer a matter of choice. It's a matter of survival. Our lives are at stake.

FIRE PREVENTION IS EVERYBODY'S JOB

OLD CODGERS' CODGATIONS

Mr. Verplanck was given the nickname "ZIP" very soon after he came to Manchester. O.C. never knew whence came the name, but is certain that the recipient liked it and sometimes used it himself. Zip often came up to the School Street dump with his rifle to shoot rats with us boys. He was a good shot, too. We often wondered why his two sons, Van and Phil, didn't come with him.

One year a store in Hartford had a lot of old U.S. Army rifles. They were the 1873 issue of .45-70 single shot breech loaders that had been superseded by the .30-40 Krag bolt action repeater. We could buy old .45-70 ammunition cheap enough from Francis Bannerman in New York, so we bought it in one or multiple thousand lots. At least 10 members of the South Manchester Rifle Club had the rifles and chipped in for the ammunition. It never missed fire and was quite accurate for 200, 300 and 500 yard ranges. Trouble was the trajectory was so great it required setting the rear sight up until it was necessary to lower the stock down to a very uncomfortable position. They kicked like an Army mule.

One day several of us were firing the 30 yd. at Keeney Street range when Zip came walking across the lots. He accepted the invitation to try some shots. We were anxious to see how he could take that kick. It pushed us back plenty but hardly budged him. He liked that. The ammo was so old that the black powder had corroded the cartridge cases so much that some broke about in the middle so the bullet left the front half of the case up in the bore. It was necessary to check each shell ejected. If it was not all with the head fitted to just slide down the bore and catch on the rim of metal. Then the ram rod would tamp it out easily.

The old Ninth District School was a very long building. Mr. Hamilton Metcalf was the night watchman. He had no electric light, only a kerosene oil lamp that gave about as much light as a match. That would be an advantage in detecting a fire, and that was probably the only reason for his being there. One night someone hammered on the front door. When "Hammy" and his lantern got near it there was hammering on the door next to the St. And it went for several hours.

The next forenoon O.C. was told that Mr. Verplanck wanted to see him in his office. The conversation went like this: "O.C. last night some boys were bothering Mr. Metcalf. Were you one of them?" "Yes Sir." "Well, who was with you?" "No answer, just a shrug of the shoulders. 'Aren't you going to tell me?' 'No Sir.' 'Well, I didn't think you would. But if I said Bobbie Vetch, Desc Rogers, Jimmie Aitken, I'd be about right wouldn't I?' He knew. 'Yes Sir.' 'Now O.C. Mr. Metcalf is an old man. Patrolling that big building and climbing all those stairs from basement to top floor must tucker the poor old fellow out every night, without being made to do extra by a lot of young lads full of pep and vinegar. He is giving his best to protect our property for us and earn an honest living. Now I know you fellows didn't stop to think of it that way, but now are you willing to promise me you won't do it again?' 'Yes Sir.' 'I know you won't, and do you suppose you could explain it to the other fellows?' 'I'll try.' 'Then I won't say anything to them. Thank you.' That was Zip.

Mr. Verplanck was a busy man. There were many important things requiring his time and attention. He could have set at his desk and said "you may go." To them there was something MOST important at that moment. He arose put an arm around and hand on the boy's shoulder. They walked to the office door together without shell ejected. If it was not all with the head fitted to just slide down the bore and catch on the rim of metal. Then the ram rod would tamp it out easily.

Gardening

with FRANK ATWOOD

There are many opportunities for gardeners to see good horticulture at the University of Connecticut, a short drive from Manchester, and one of the best is scheduled this weekend. The annual Horticulture Show, put on by students, will fill the Ratzliff Hicks Arena Saturday and Sunday. The show is free and open to the public on both days from noon to 8 p.m. There is no football game at Storrs this Saturday so there will be no football traffic, and there is a large parking lot behind the College of Agriculture building, close to the show.

Many students, and their intended to be educational as well as artistic. There is also a student-run store where you can buy cider, apples, pumpkins, gourds and many kinds of small house plants. Any money the students make is used toward the cost of a spring tour for them to outstanding gardens. In the long list of students taking part are Janice Cray and Lorraine Muschko of Manchester, both involved in a display of greenhouse-grown flowers, called "What's New?"; and Mary Eldergill of Coventry co-chairman of a group showing how to landscape a hillside. The show is judged by professional horticulturists and prizes awarded to outstanding exhibits.

No Frost Yet Without waiting for the student show, a group of nearly 50 gardeners made a trip to Storrs last week arranged by the Connecticut Horticultural Society. We especially wanted to see the display gardens of annual flowers and took the chance that an early frost would not ruin the display before we got there, and we were lucky. It was reported this week from the Plant Science Department that there still has been no killing frost on the campus and, although the flowers show some of the deterioration that comes inevitably with fall, they were otherwise in excellent condition. A stroll through the garden, even now, should be very much worthwhile.

Prof. Walter Harper, in charge of the display area, told us there are 200 species of annuals there this year. Each fall he writes to major seed companies asking for seeds of what they consider their best varieties. The companies know that their plant will be well displayed and carefully labeled, and they are generous with their gifts of seeds. The packets are sorted by kind and color and, toward spring, the seedlings are started in the greenhouse. "It's a picture puzzle," said Prof. Harper, "to put the colors together so the result will be harmonious and pleasing."

Students Do Work The seedlings are never transplanted to the outdoor beds until after the first of June, because the records show that the last killing frost in the spring has come, at Storrs, on the last day of May. The work is done mainly by college students of horticulture, who earn wages by the hour. A crew of students, also paid, takes care of the gardens during the summer vacation. Another crew, some new and some experienced, comes on in the fall when classes start and Prof. Harper said he had found, after several disappointments, a young student who could trim hedges properly. One of the displays in the garden is a collection of hedge plants, some common and some unusual, that were set out 20 years ago. Like Small Marigolds Prof. Harper likes the medium-sized marigolds that have resulted from crossing tall flowers with dwarf plants, finds they "make a great show" and do not blow over when there is a windstorm. He noted, too, that Japanese beetles like the big, large-flowered marigolds better than the smaller kinds. He pointed several times to beds of flowers that he said have been developed by a Japanese seed company and predicted that the Japanese will soon have a begonia that will blossom in full sun instead of the partial shade that most begonias require. Our group made a long day of it, going to a college cafeteria for lunch, then seeing the greenhouses under the guidance of Dr. G. A. L. Melquist, professor of plant breeding, and touring the beautiful garden at Dr. Melquist's home. A final stop on the way home was the garden of Miss Mill-cent Jones on Tolland Rd., Bolton. We learned that the general public is welcome at the university greenhouses as well as the annual garden, during regular working hours for the staff. We also learned that the pot plants

The final session is scheduled for Oct. 27 from 10 a.m. to noon at the London Park Water Company Pumping Station. Rain date is Oct. 28, also from 10 a.m. to noon. Residents unable to attend the session in their area are most welcome to attend any of the other sessions. There will be no charge for the registration. According to Warren McGuinness and Robert Croston, the two constables in charge of the sessions, the program is aimed at safety and safe equipment but also has a two-fold purpose. This will be to record serial numbers of bicycles and to keep an up-to-date file to aid in the recovery of lost, misplaced or stolen bicycles. Each registration card issued will show serial number, make and color of bicycle and owners name and address. The constables realize that recovery of stolen or lost property is a monumental task and by knowing the information Person and what to look for could be a major factor in recovery. They urge resident and their children to come and register their bicycles.

Andover School Talks Set By 4-H Visitor

ANNE EMT Correspondent Tel. 228-3971 In conjunction with National 4-H Week and this year's theme of "4-H Gets It All Together," Norris Laidley, an International Farm Youth Exchange member, will speak to 5th and 6th Grade students Monday morning at the Andover Elementary School. Laidley is from Portland, Jamaica, B.W.I. and is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Keller of Coventry after spending ten weeks in Ohio before coming to Connecticut. Laidley, age 22, is an agricultural extension officer for the Ministry of Agriculture in Jamaica. During his tour of this country, he has been advising farmers on improving their level of living and increasing production. His own specific interests while here include learning more about 4-H youth programs, horticultural production, livestock programs and community organizations. The farm he grew up on in Jamaica was a 4-H member. Locally, Jane Hawkins of Andover recently visited Waukesha County, Wisconsin for a week through an exchange program sponsored by the Tolland County 4-H Advisory Committee.

While there, Miss Hawkins lived with another exchange family in a dairy farm and visited a milk processing plant, a cheese factory and 4-H fairgrounds. Membership in 4-H is open to all on a non-discriminating basis and presently Andover is attempting to organize various 4-H clubs throughout town. Posters encouraging participation are displayed in the school and anyone interested should contact Mrs. Richard Person of Pine Ridge Dr. Mrs. Person is Tolland County 4-H Advisory Committee chairman.

Election Reforms Face Legislature

ORANGE (AP) — Election law reform will be a prime topic of the 1974 state legislature, House Majority Leader Gerald F. Stevens, R-Milford, told the Robert-Shaw management club Thursday. Stevens also said the General Assembly would be "taking a hard look at existing tax rates." He further predicted that the session would be orderly and not require the full three months allotted for it.

Meskill Lists Three Choices For Vice President

HARTFORD (AP) — Gov. Thomas J. Meskill has proposed U.S. Rep. Gerald Ford, R-Mich.; West Virginia Gov. Arch Moore and Michigan Gov. William Milliken as possible replacements for Vice President Agnew. Meskill sent his choices from Switzerland to GOP National Chairman George Bush.

With most new cars performance problems have taken the fun out of driving. But with Mazda's rotary-engine the thrill is back.

It used to be a kick to show your friends how much snap your new car had. But not anymore. At least, not for many new cars. For smog control devices are making them drive, says one automotive writer, "like they have a permanent case of the blues."

Mazda is different. It's alive, well and kicking. In fact, it beats a lot of cars that cost a lot more. The Mercedes 456SL, for example, in a 0 to 60 acceleration race. Or the Thunderbird, in a 50 to 80 high-speed passing test. What's Mazda's secret?

The rotary engine, because it's so small and powerful, it can team up with an advanced ternator reactor system to control emissions. No other car has this team. That's why no other car performs like Mazda. The thrill is back.

Holtzman to Start In Series Opener

OAKLAND (AP) — Hard throwing left-hander Ken Holtzman finds himself in the same position today as he was a year ago—scheduled to pitch the opening World Series game for the Oakland A's against the National League champions.

This time the New York Mets oppose him Saturday at the Oakland Coliseum and the former Chicago Cubs hurler says, "I pitched against them a lot of years and they gave me a lot of trouble. But I feel super about getting the chance to pitch against them again."

Holtzman beat Cincinnati 3-2 in last year's opener and in his last outing he lost 11 innings to best Baltimore 2-1 in the third game of the American League playoffs. The defending world champion A's wrapped up their second straight pennant Thursday as right-hander Jim Hunter blanked the Orioles 3-0 in the finale of their best-of-five playoff series. "I was getting tired but no way I'm coming out of that game," declared the 27-year-old Hunter who posted a 21.3 regular season record and best Baltimore twice in the playoffs. "I was just trying to keep the ball low," he said of his five-hit shutout performance. "They didn't get a home run off me in two games, isn't that a switch?"

During the regular season, the Orioles slammed eight homers from Hunter during his last start as he was 3-0 against them. The A's, who held a 4-0 lead on Wednesday and lost 4-2, took a 1-0 lead in the third inning of the decider. Ray Fosse was safe on an error by Brooks Robinson who slipped while fielding a grounder. Dick Green laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt and Joe Rudi singled the runner home. In the fourth with two out, Gene Tenace, the hero of the 1972 World Series, singled. Little Vic Davalillo tripled off the 37-foot sign in right center and Jesus Alou singled him home. That was plenty of insurance for Hunter as the A's won the series three games to two.

Doyle Alexander, the Orioles' 23-year-old right-hander, started the game, but left after Alou's hit, and Jim Palmer made only his second relief appearance in four years. Palmer, the Baltimore ace who was blasted out in the second inning Wednesday, shut out the A's the rest of the way Thursday.

The A's go into the World Series with three 30-game pitching winners—Hunter, Holtzman, 21-13, and Vida Blue, 20-9. Williams said Blue would face the Mets on Sunday and Hunter would go on Tuesday when the clubs play game No. 3 in New York's Shea Stadium.

As the champagne corks popped in the A's quarters, Hunter said that until the playoffs he didn't think this season was as good as 1972 when he was 21-7.

"But beating Baltimore twice in the playoffs was better than all of last year," commented the man who pitched two victories in the 1972 World Series.

The Mets left New York immediately at the conclusion of the game in Oakland and Williams said he wouldn't work out today "because they've had enough working out this week."

The A's opener is scheduled for 4 p.m. EDT and Sunday's game starts at 4:30.

The A's are considered the favorites this season, will open against the Yankees, who surprised everybody in 1969 by beating a heavily favored Baltimore team five games to one in that World Series.

Ace Was Too Good Hunter Must Wait for Mets

OAKLAND (AP) — One of these years, the Oakland A's may enjoy the luxury of having Jim "Cattfish" Hunter as their opening pitcher for the World Series.

But the mustached right-hander from North Carolina won't appear until game No. 3 against the New York Mets in this season's baseball classic. He was needed Thursday and ended another tough American League playoff by beating the Baltimore Orioles 3-0 on a five-hitter.

"He's one of the greatest athletes in America," A's owner Charles O. Finley said after Hunter took away the unpleasant possibility that thousands of Oakland World Series tickets and programs would go unused.

Hunter, a 21-game winner three straight seasons, proved again that he's best in the clutch.

He gave up 38 home runs in the regular season but none in his two playoff victories. Orioles Manager Earl Weaver admitted Thursday, "We didn't even get a real hard hit."

As usual, the hitters knew exactly what Hunter would be throwing—fast balls over various parts of the plate.

Hunter struck out just one batter and walked two. Orioles hitters singled him down throughout the game after hitting popups, including five caught in fly territory. "I was making them hit my pitches. That's why they were popping up," the pitcher said.

Southpaw Ken Holtzman, who also won 21 games for Oakland this season, will open against the Mets here Saturday, and 20-game winner Vida Blue will start for the A's Sunday. Hunter will pitch next Tuesday night when the World Series moves to New York's Shea Stadium.

Hunter, who got to bat only once this season because of the American League's designated hitter rule, is looking forward to batting in the World Series.

"The Mets' Tom Seaver had two doubles in the playoffs, I think," Hunter said. "I'd like to break that record in the World Series."

Hunter singled in his one plate appearance this year and batted 302 three years ago when American League pitchers were still included in batting orders.

To rebuild "but not make change for the sake of change."

Those are Ralph Houk's primary aims as he takes over a Detroit Tiger baseball team characterized by many critics as being too old, too slow and on its way downhill.

Houk was named as the new manager of the Tigers on Thursday by General Manager Jim Campbell, agreeing to a team record three-year contract for a team record amount of money.

He replaces Billy Martin, who was fired from the job Sept. 2.

A's Seek Second Straight Series

OAKLAND (AP) — The A's attempt to garner their second consecutive World Series championship and the Mets go after their second world title ever Saturday when American League champion Oakland and National League champion New York meet in Game One of the 1973 World Series.

The Mets, considered a gift of miracle workers when they won the best-of-seven Series in 1969, catapulted from last place near the end of the 1973 season into the National League playoffs and then defeated Cincinnati for the right to play for the championship of professional baseball.

The newest addition to the Mets' starting trio is 23-year-old 1973 Rookie of the Year Jon Matlack. Matlack recovered from an early-season slump and hairline skull fracture suffered when he was hit by a live drive in early May to post a 14-10 record.

The Mets starters are backed up by reliever Tug McGraw, who coined the phrase "You Gotta Believe," which was shared by Mets fans as they watched their team race to the league pennant.

Clean Jones, John Milner and Rusty Staub provide the Mets' batting punch. On defense, the Mets are strong with the double-play combination of shortstop Bud Harrelson and second baseman Felix Millan.

Right-hander Jim "Cattfish" Hunter, 21-5 with a 3.34 ERA, who won the A's pennant-clinching game against Baltimore Thursday, heads the Oakland pitching staff. The other starters are Vida Blue, 20-9 and 3.28, and Ken Holtzman, 21-13 and 2.97.

The bullpen reserves include Darold Knowles, Willie Fingers and Paul Lindblad. Jackson, who slugged out 32 homers and drove in 117 runs in 1973, is the mainstay in the hitting department along with Gene Tenace, Joe Rudi and Bert Campanaris.

The A's also boast a strong combination up the middle of Campanaris and Dick Green.

Shea Stadium was no place for a woman or child for the Mets' latest conquest.

While Shea Stadium will be buzzing with excitement next week for two and possible three World Series games, across town the sounds of heavy equipment can be heard at Yankee Stadium which is undergoing a complete facelift.

Meanwhile, all 6,500 seats are up for sale. To date, more than 40,000 have been sold for between $5 and $20 per seat. All the seats and restaurant equipment were sold by the Yanks to Phil Sweeder, New Haven auctioneer.

The New York Yankees are operating from their new offices, just across the street from Shea Stadium in a one-time World's Fair building. Jim DeWitt, varsity sports department, is the public relations director for the Yankees in the game at Miami in New York City.

George Ducharme, tub-thumper for the Hartford Knights, reports that 65 per cent of the 7,000 fans for the last home Atlantic Coast Football Conference game at Dillon Stadium purchased their tickets at the gate. Next home start for the Knights will be against Fred Wallner's Western Massachusetts Pioneers one week from tomorrow night.

The Pioneers are owned by four local men and one from Coventry.

Virginia is a jinx city for Coach Al Bianchi of the ABA Squires. For the third time in three years he's lost one of his top players. First it was Rick Barry, then Charlie Scott and now Julius Erving. Delaware's football team has been averaging better than 500 yards this season after five games. UConn will think it ran into a buzz-saw when the two clubs meet in Delaware's Homecoming Day game Saturday.

The New York Jets will have played 11 straight road games before they can return to Shea Stadium. Six pre-season starters were on the road and the club's first five regular scheduled NFL tilts will be on foreign soil due to the Mets' success in baseball.

Illing, Rham Frosh Tie

No decision could be reached yesterday afternoon as Illing and the Rham Frosh played to a 1-1 double overtime soccer tie in Helron.

Illing's record shows five wins, no losses and one tie. Rham scored in the first period and the locals tied the count in the fourth quarter when Maurice Galt tallied on an assist from Matt Schardt.

Vernon Downs Bennett Runners

Paced by Daran Walton's individual effort, Vernon defeated Bennett's cross country team yesterday by a 19-9 margin. Walton covered the hill by two and one-half mile course in 13:28.

Bennet's Bret Jones was second, and Vernon garnered the next six spots before Kevin Godin just missed a go-ahead goal in the second overtime when his shot hit the post. Bill Meier, Frank Lay, Eric Thomas, Scott Hyde, Rich Anderson, Bob Terry, Paul Hart and Dale Mathews played well for Illing.

Wednesday, Illing hosts Coventry Frosh with a big game against Bennett Saturday at 10:30 at Memorial Field.

Disgraceful Exhibition

That, in one word, best describes the scene at Shea Stadium Wednesday afternoon when the New York Mets whipped Cincinnati, 7-2, in the fifth and deciding game for the National League playoff crown.

Cincinnati and National League officials, sitting in box seats adjacent to the Redleg dugout and along the third base and leftfield lines had to literally run for their lives when the young animal acting youths stormed the area in the eighth inning.

Anyone wearing Red Cincinnati colors in the area was a target for the Bowery-type dressed young men and women. Box seat occupants were forced to vacate their chairs and the uniformed park police were as ineffective as Steve Blass was pitching for Pittsburgh this season. The men in blue appeared to be more concerned with the game than crowd control.

When play was finally restored, and the final out recorded, the fans swarmed onto the playing field like bees around their nest.

There wasn't any question, the security at Shea Stadium was not geared for the possible eruption.

The situation was far worse than in 1969 when the Mets clinched the World Series against Baltimore. True, the Mets playing field took a beating four years ago, but the fans then were more celebrating than destructive.

Baseball, and New York, was given a black eye on Wednesday.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn had a ringside seat for the uncalculated action as well as President Chub Feen of the National League. It will be interesting to see what safety measures will be taken for the three possible World Series games Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday night at Shea.

Seats for Sale

While Shea Stadium will be buzzing with excitement next week for two and possible three World Series games, across town the sounds of heavy equipment can be heard at Yankee Stadium which is undergoing a complete facelift.

Meanwhile, all 6,500 seats are up for sale. To date, more than 40,000 have been sold for between $5 and $20 per seat. All the seats and restaurant equipment were sold by the Yanks to Phil Sweeder, New Haven auctioneer.

The New York Yankees are operating from their new offices, just across the street from Shea Stadium in a one-time World's Fair building. Jim DeWitt, varsity sports department, is the public relations director for the Yankees in the game at Miami in New York City.

George Ducharme, tub-thumper for the Hartford Knights, reports that 65 per cent of the 7,000 fans for the last home Atlantic Coast Football Conference game at Dillon Stadium purchased their tickets at the gate. Next home start for the Knights will be against Fred Wallner's Western Massachusetts Pioneers one week from tomorrow night.

The Pioneers are owned by four local men and one from Coventry.

Defense Features In Soccer Victory

With the defense limiting Bristol Eastern to just six shots on goal, Manchester High's undefeated and talented soccer team blanked the Bell Towers yesterday afternoon, 3-0.

The success in the CCLL was the ninth for Coach Dick Danielson's squad. Ray Sullivan and Duffy Leone shared the goal duties and accomplished the shutout.

Once again the local scoring was turned in by the brother act of Werner and Reiner Casaca. The former tallied twice. The locals had 21 shots at the Eastern goal.

Promoted from the jayvees for this game, Don Gedick turned in a top performance at halfback.

Two home games are on next week's slate, both at Memorial Field starting at 7:30. Windham comes to town Tuesday and Bristol Central on Friday, both hoop skirmishes.

The advisory committee was created in June to study the state's Inland Wetlands and Water Courses Act and make a recommendation to the Board of Environmental Control.

The act, encouraging municipal participation, specifies a July 1, 1974, deadline for local implementation. If a municipality doesn't act by then, the DEP would assume control.

Talcottville Site For Tennis Courts

Final details are being worked out to construct tennis courts in the Talcottville section of Vernon.

The Britton fund presently contains more than $1,000 in a savings account plus several thousand in stock certificates, the mayor said.

If the plan goes through, the court construction will go out to bid, but the parking area will probably be constructed by the town's public works department, the mayor said.

McGoy said the extensive use of the new courts at Henry Park and the use of those at the high school would be relieved if the Talcottville courts are built to serve that area.

Connecticut's other senator, Republican Lowell Weicker, said "I served in the House of Representatives for two years with Jerry Ford and I have great affection and respect for the man and I wish him all the best."

Gov. Thomas Meskill, who was in Europe, and J. Brian Gaffney, Republican state chairman, were unavailable for comment.

John Bailey, Connecticut Democratic chairman, said "I hope that this matter is disposed of. We've had enough problems over the last few months and I hope that Congress acts quickly on the Ford nomination."

He said the selection of Ford will have the effect of making the President's legislative program, shows that Nixon is putting a priority on working with Congress.

The appeals court gave the President until next Friday to ask the Supreme Court to review its decision.

The President "is not above the law's commands," the court said in rejecting Nixon's contention that the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers prohibits one branch of government from forcing another branch to obey its commands.

There was no immediate comment from the White House, where attention was focused Friday night on the presidential nomination of Rep. Gerald R. Ford, R-Mich., for vice president.

Special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, who had subpoenaed pages of nine presidential conversations about Watergate, said through a spokesman, "We are very pleased with the decision, which on first reading of the opinion appears fully to sustain our position."

Cox had contended that the tapes were essential to the grand jury's attempt to determine the extent of the conspiracy to obstruct the probe of the June 17, 1972 break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters.

Charles Alan Wright, lawyer for the President, had argued that the doctrine of executive privilege and the Constitution gave Nixon sole authority to decide if presidential documents could be turned over either to the courts or to Congress.

In asking the appeals court to reverse Sirica's decision, Wright had argued that ordering release of the tapes would breach the trust and confidentiality of presidential discussions with his aides, and "from that moment on would be simply impossible for any president of the United States to function."

Cox had contended that not even the President was above the law and that the tapes were unique in that they were evidence in a grand jury investigation of possible criminal activity.

The dissenters, both Nixon appointees, were Judges George MacKinnon and William Wilkie.

Nixon Picks Ford For Vice President

State Politicians Pleased With Ford

Confirmation Anticipated In Both Houses

WASHINGTON (AP) - Urging Americans to put aside old obsessions for a new beginning, President Nixon sent a receptive Democratic Congress today his vice presidential nomination of House Republican leader Gerald R. Ford.

Both the House and Senate were poised to vote the swift confirmation the President sought in the name of national unity.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield today called the choice of Ford "excellent" and said he hoped the Senate will confirm him by the end of October.

Nixon announced his choice Friday night in a nationally televised ceremony marked by a festive air of state celebration - and only a faint mention of the corruption scandal that forced Spiro T. Agnew's resignation Wednesday from the nation's second highest office.

Within hours, it was clear Ford was headed toward easy confirmation, perhaps within a week or two, barring adverse disclosures during congressional hearings.

An Associated Press survey found Ford with 52 votes, one more than needed for confirmation. None of the senators initially contacted were opposed, but nine said they were reserving judgment pending the hearings.

At the same time, 131 House members said they would vote for Ford, two more than needed for confirmation.

The certainty of congressional confirmation figured heavily in Ford's selection by Nixon, who wanted to avoid a major partisan confrontation at a time he is seeking to recover from the Watergate scandal.

The President clearly had the Watergate and Agnew scandals in mind when he turned to Ford, who had served as Agnew's successor in 1969.

Nixon narrowed the list of possible nominees to five Thursday night, aides said, then decided upon Ford at dawn Friday while at his Camp David retreat.

Ford didn't learn of his selection, however, until 90 minutes before he was to be named.

Nixon's speech disclosing his choice was structured for drama. He talked for nine minutes before mentioning Ford's name, using the occasion to discuss national achievements, national problems and the need for unity.

He said the nation is at peace for the first time in 12 years - but that the Midwest war threatens world peace. He said economic expansion has given Americans better jobs at higher pay - but inflation still is a problem.

"Never in our history has the world more needed a strong America, a united America, with both the power and the will to act in the spirit that made this a great country, and that has kept it a free country," he said.

Ford, in brief comments, said "I hope I have some assets that might be helpful in working with the Congress in doing what I can throughout our country to make America a united America. I pledge to you my full efforts..."

Record Crops WASHINGTON (AP) - Record crops of corn and soybeans are being harvested this fall, the Agriculture Department said, but the output is not quite as high as was predicted a month ago. The prospects that the bumper harvest will result in lower food prices as export demands, an impending fertilizer shortage and a possible fuel scarcity.

Moderate Stance WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration has decided that a moderate attitude toward the Soviet Union's role in the Middle East is the best approach in settling the Arab-Israeli conflict. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger interposed a veto Wednesday on the prospect that the United States would stand firm if irresponsible acts occurred.

Court Orders Nixon To Give Up Tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon appears certain to appeal to the Supreme Court a federal appeals court ruling demanding surrender of White House tapes for judicial examination.

In a 2 to 1 decision Friday, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia upheld U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica's decision ordering the tapes turned over to him.

The appeals court gave the President until next Friday to ask the Supreme Court to review its decision.

The President "is not above the law's commands," the court said in rejecting Nixon's contention that the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers prohibits one branch of government from forcing another branch to obey its commands.

There was no immediate comment from the White House, where attention was focused Friday night on the presidential nomination of Rep. Gerald R. Ford, R-Mich., for vice president.

Special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, who had subpoenaed pages of nine presidential conversations about Watergate, said through a spokesman, "We are very pleased with the decision, which on first reading of the opinion appears fully to sustain our position."

Cox had contended that the tapes were essential to the grand jury's attempt to determine the extent of the conspiracy to obstruct the probe of the June 17, 1972 break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters.

Charles Alan Wright, lawyer for the President, had argued that the doctrine of executive privilege and the Constitution gave Nixon sole authority to decide if presidential documents could be turned over either to the courts or to Congress.

In asking the appeals court to reverse Sirica's decision, Wright had argued that ordering release of the tapes would breach the trust and confidentiality of presidential discussions with his aides, and "from that moment on would be simply impossible for any president of the United States to function."

Cox had contended that not even the President was above the law and that the tapes were unique in that they were evidence in a grand jury investigation of possible criminal activity.

The dissenters, both Nixon appointees, were Judges George MacKinnon and William Wilkie.

Mandatory Fuel Allocation Plan Effective Nov. 1

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mandatory fuel allocation takes effect on Nov. 1 in an administration bid to ease the pain of an winter shortage of home heating oil.

After five months of insisting that petroleum could be distributed fairly through voluntary industry cooperation, the administration issued regulations Friday making an allocation system at the wholesale level mandatory.

The aim, the White House said earlier, was to make sure that homes and hospitals are heated this winter.

Administration experts have said a heating oil shortage of anywhere from 100,000 to 400,000 barrels per day is possible this winter, depending on such factors as the weather and the ability of refineries to keep on producing near capacity.

But the new Middle East war has thrown new uncertainty into the situation, raising the possibility of interruption of oil supplies from Arab states in retaliation for U.S. support of Israel.

Charles J. DiLona, deputy director of the White House Energy Policy Office, told newsmen Friday that a cutoff of Arab oil would raise problems but could be dealt with, he said.

U.S. Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., said "I think that Jerry Ford will slide through both Congress and the executive branch."

U.S. Rep. Charles T. Alfano, D-Suffield, said "Jerry Ford will have no problem whatsoever in being approved by Congress."

State Rep. Francis Collins, House speaker, said "I think this was a wise decision by the President. I think it is one that will be approved rather speedily by Congress...It's a sincere effort by the President to avoid any type of confrontation with the Congress, perhaps to try to get the country back together again."

State Sen. Lewis B. Home, R-Bloomfield, Senate majority leader, said "It's a great selection. He's very well known by both Democrats and Republicans."
