The North Congregational choir will be led tomorrow by its former chorister, W. L. Parker, of Lynn. The regular Saturday night rehearsal will be held this evening as usual at eight o'clock and a full attendance is requested.

A special town meeting has been called for next Tuesday afternoon to take action on the abatement of taxes on the Union mill property. This move is unanimously recommended by the Board of Trade and will doubtless be successful.

The town will soon resume work on the new road from the freight depot to Hilliard street. The work was temporarily stopped on account of a misunderstanding between the road commissioners, the first selectman and the railroad company. This has been removed and in a short time the road will be ready for use. Then, let us hope, the ceaseless switching across Main street will be stopped.

A Middletown historian, who is writing a history of the textile industries of the United States, has discovered that the Hilliard mill at Buckland is the oldest woolen mill in continuous operation in the United States. This establishment began operations in 1794. It was run on blankets for the soldiers of the war of 1812. It has been operated under the same firm name—E. E. Hilliard & Co.—since 1824.

The electric street lighting service at the north end is excellent and gives general satisfaction. The streets are never dark before eleven o'clock. When the moon rises late—say nine o'clock—the lights are turned on until the moon is well up; and when the moon goes down before eleven the lights are started and run until that hour. If there happens to come a cloudy night when the moon is of no use the electric lights are turned on.

The Manchester Christian Endeavor Union will hold its quarterly meeting next Tuesday evening at the Congregational Church, Glastonbury. The subject will be Temperance, and Rev. J. H. James, secretary of the Connecticut Temperance Union, will deliver an address.

The time of two trains on the South Manchester railroad will be changed next Monday. The 5.00 p. m. train will leave South Manchester at 5.10 and return at 5.25. The commuters' train will leave South Manchester at 6.10 instead of 6.06, and the last train down will leave Manchester at 6.08 instead of 6.01.

Work was begun this week on a new rectory for St. James's Catholic parish. The house will be a substantial two-story cottage and will be built on a line with the church and north of it. Sisson & Hall have the contract and expect to have the dwelling ready for occupancy by the beginning of the new year.

A new timetable takes effect on the New England road tomorrow. Few and minor changes are made at this station. The morning trains will not be changed. The evening trains to Hartford will hereafter leave at 6.00 and 6.10. The Vernon accommodation which brings out the South Manchester car will run ten minutes later than before.

A case of scarlet fever was reported in the studio building last Saturday. One of the Edgar children who live in the tenement at the south end of the building was a victim to the disease. The new school room is in the north end of the building. The board of health and the school committee decided that it would not be necessary to close the school. Disinfectants are constantly used and school children are not allowed in the vicinity of the infected tenement. About a dozen children have been withdrawn from the school.

The Manchester Water Company tested their mains Thursday, to see what effect would be produced on the pressure uptown by drawing from the main at the Union mill with an inch-and-a-half and an inch-and-a-quarter pipe. The firm who propose to lease the Union mill for wool scouring want to buy clean water from the water company, and this test was for the purpose of learning whether the consumption of the large quantity needed would materially affect the pressure on the mains. It was found that the inch-and-a-half stream reduced the pressure at Depot square about 20 pounds, and the inch-and-a-quarter stream about 10 pounds.

A large and well pleased audience saw Daniel A. Kelly and company in "The Shadow Detective" at Apel's opera house Thursday evening. The play abounds in stirring scenes and startling climaxes. It also has numerous humorous situations. The company was capable throughout. If there were many improbable happenings in the play the spectators did not seem to notice them and were liberal in their applause. The villain and the shadow detective were, of course, the principal characters, but they divided the honors with a pretty soubrette and an excellent juvenile comedian. The scenic effects were as realistic as the size and appointments of the stage would permit. Apel's starts the season with good houses, and, with careful management, will no doubt make money this winter.

Joseph Anderson, of Middletown, was in town this week. He is looking and feeling much better than when he left here last spring.

George M. Hendee, the well known bicycle rider, stopped in town on his way home from the Springfield races, and spent Sunday with his father, G. W. Hendee.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Cowles, of Chicago, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son last Tuesday. Mrs. Cowles is daughter of Mr. Knight D. Cheney of this place.

Organist Schneider Resigns.

There will be a new organist at the North Congregational church tomorrow. Organist Schneider has resigned under peculiar circumstances. When Mr. Schneider was hired by the society's committee a year ago, he stipulated that he should have exclusive control of the organ. At the Segar-Gallup wedding a cousin of the groom officiated as organist. Mr. Segar did not think it necessary, after he had secured the use of the church from the society's committee to ask Mr. Schneider (who lives at New Britain) for the use of the organ. When his friend went to practice the day before the wedding he found the organ locked. He in some way opened the organ. The next morning Mr. Schneider came up from New Britain and put on a new lock. He went back on the next train with the keys in his pocket. In order that the organ might be used at the wedding, the society's committee were obliged to force the lock. When Mr. Schneider heard what had been done, he sent in his resignation.

OBITUARY.

ELIZABETH BALL.
Mrs. Elizabeth Ball, mother of Mrs. Gardner Warren, died in the retreat at Middletown Thursday. She will be buried in Hazardville today.

MRS. SIDNEY GRANT.
Mrs. Sidney Grant died at her home on Center street last Tuesday at the advanced age of 83. She was a descendant from the old Pinney family of Ellington. She came here about 25 years ago with her husband. She became a widow several years ago. She leaves four daughters and one son, all of whom reside out of town. She was buried in Rockville.

THOMAS ROGERS.
Thomas Rogers died at the residence of his son, Thomas Rogers, Jr., on Birch street last Friday evening, after an illness of two weeks. He leaves six adult children, John, James, Thomas and George Rogers, Mrs. James Patton and Mrs. James Veitch. The eldest son, John, lives in the old country. George is pastor of the church at Orleans, Mass. Mr. Rogers came to this town about ten years ago. He was converted soon after through the preaching of Rev. Hugh Montgomery who was then assisting Rev. J. C. Gowan, the pastor, in holding revival services in the South Methodist church. He became a devout and consistent member of the church. The funeral was held at the South Methodist church Sunday afternoon. Rev. J. M. Taber preached from Rev. VIII, 6: "And I looked and behold a pale horse; and his name that sat on him was Death." Rev. George Rogers also made appropriate remarks. The pall-bearers were George Davidson, John Forsyth, James Johnston, Edward Elliott and Messrs. Hewitt and Morrow.

Fatal Accident to an Old Man.
William List, 73 years old, came down from Rockville last Friday to visit his niece, Mrs. Robert McLaughlin, who lives in a tenement in McDonald's building on Main street. He went back the next day in a coffin. He had intended to go back to Rockville Friday, but finally decided to stay over night. About three o'clock Saturday morning he arose, it is supposed to get a drink of water. Being unfamiliar with the house he fell down a stair in the dark. When the family found him he was about expiring with a fractured skull. Mr. List was a well known man in Rockville. He was father of 16 children. His funeral was held Monday afternoon at the house of his daughter, Mrs. Thomas Lutton.

UNION MILL SALE.

Still in Negotiation With Strong Probability that the Frenchmen Will Get It--Board of Trade Meeting.

It seems extremely probable that the Union mill property, so long idle, will soon be in operation. Thomas Powell, a broker in French patents, of New York, has been at work industriously in the interest of French manufacturers trying to find for them a location for a wool-scouring factory in this country. He has looked at half a dozen available sites, but finds in the Union property a more complete combination of the conditions required than elsewhere. Mr. Powell has therefore been negotiating for several weeks with the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company, the owners of the property, with the transportation companies, the Manchester Water company and other concerns with which they would have large dealings should they come here. Negotiations have been so far perfected that it only needs the assent of the capitalists in France to close the deal.

Should the purchase go through, the new owners of the property would be Harmel Brothers, wool carders, combers and spinners, near Paris, and Pierre Puech, the inventor of a new process of separating wool from the hide and preparing it for the manufacturer. Harmel Brothers will be the majority capitalists and Mr. Puech will be the local manager. One of the Messrs. Harmel was here this summer and looked the property over. Mr. Puech does not speak English and it would be necessary for him to have a business manager familiar with both French and English.

The matter stands now in this form: The Connecticut Mutual company has consented to sell the mill outright for $25,000 or to lease it to the new concern for a period not to exceed three years at an interest of five per cent on $25,000. They allow Harmel Brothers to purchase the property at any time before the expiration of the lease at the stated price. At the expiration of the lease provided they do not choose to buy they must surrender the property. The Insurance company reserves the right, in case a purchaser is found before the expiration of a lease, to require the Messrs. Harmel to declare their option at any time.

Harmel Brothers want to lease the property because their process is a new one and its operation will, for a time, be experimental. They are confident, however, that the enterprise will prove successful. They are men of almost unlimited means and propose to start the new company with a capital of $250,000. At the outset they will employ fifty hands and expect, with the natural growth of the business, to employ within three years 400 to 600 hands.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETING.
A special meeting of the Board of Trade was held last Wednesday evening to consider the prospect and decide whether the Board would take action toward securing an abatement of taxes for the new concern for a term of years. The subject for discussion called out a large attendance. President W. H. Childs read the following letter:
W. H. CHILDS, Esq.

President of Board of Trade:
Dear Sir:—Having obtained a refusal for the Union Manufacturing property of Manchester, Conn., and having been compelled to secure this property to accept a much higher price than we anticipated, it becomes absolutely necessary for us to reduce our running expenses to their utmost limit, otherwise we could not locate in Manchester and would have to take our business to another town where favorable conditions are offered to us.

We know that a resolution has already been voted by which all town school and highway, etc. taxes are to be abated for five years in favor of all new manufacturing business locating in Manchester, but we hope that considering the important business we will bring in this locality, the great number of hands we will employ, you will further facilitate our locating here in abating the above said taxes for a larger number of years not only on the existing property but also on all extensions made by us in the same lapse of time.

Our manufacturing consists in washing, bleaching and scouring wool on imported and domestic hides. Our aim is to manufacture a high grade article and not only do we expect to make an extensive business but we sincerely hope that in a few years other manufacturers will be put up as a natural consequence of our original business. We feel confident that in locating in Manchester we will bring there a very important new source of prosperity.

The parties for whom I write, Messrs. Harmel Brothers, wool spinners and combers, Valdez Bois, Harne, France, are one of the oldest if not the oldest wool-firm in France.
Having to declare our option on the 30th inst, we hope to receive a favorable answer from you before that date.
Believe me Dear Sir to remain
Yours truly
For Messrs. Harmel Bros.
THOMAS POWELL.

Mr. Childs stated that he had made particular inquiry as to the class of help to be employed. He had been assured that the grade would be fully equal to that employed in manufactories which pay $1.25 to $1.75 per day. Mr. Puech, his son and his nephew would reside here. So far as possible, the help would be employed from this vicinity, regardless of nationality. It would be necessary to import from France a few workmen skilled in the process. Secretary Cheney questioned whether there might not be an objectionable odor arising from the proposed works. E. P. Bissell replied that just such a smell was what the people of Manchester had been looking after for four years. After considerable discussion the following resolution, drafted by C. W. Cowles, was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the Board of Trade of the town of Manchester recommend to a special town meeting, to be immediately called, an abatement of all taxes on the Union Manufacturing Co., so called, in excess of its present taxable valuation, during the existence of lease of said property, and upon the bona fide sale or purchase of said property, that said town of Manchester exempt the whole plant for a period of five years from such sale, upon condition of the active operation thereof.

After the adoption of the resolution, Messrs. Powell and Puech, who were at the hotel, were invited into the meeting. After an introduction, Mr. Powell addressed the meeting briefly. He thanked the Board for the action taken, which he thought was very fair. The new concern, he said, hoped to bring to the place an active and important business that would augment the prosperity of the town. The new firm hoped, within one year, to employ 150 hands, and in three years to employ 500 or 600 hands. The chance for the growth of the business was unlimited, as the process was superior to any now in use, and the market for wool in this country was large. He assured the Board that the class of help employed would be fully up to the ordinary, and that no considerable number of Frenchmen would be employed.

"The good Frenchman," he said, "does not leave his country except for very high wages." Several kinds of business would, he thought, gravitate to this place as the result of the new industry. A tannery would probably be established here as soon as the production of hides became sufficiently large. Mr. Powell spoke of the great value of the residuum from the washing process for fertilizing. In France farmers drove 20 miles and paid 40 cents a barrel for it. He thought that the chances were 99 in 100 that the company would locate here.

The full details of the proposed deal have been written to the Messrs. Harmel, with the endorsement of Messrs. Powell and Puech. Harmel Brothers will cable their reply and the matter will be settled by or before Sept. 29th, on which date their option on the property will expire.

BIRTHS, DEATHS, MARRIAGES.

Statistics Furnished by the State Board of Health.
The monthly report of the Connecticut State Board of Health for the month of August has been made public. Reports have been received from 187 towns in the state and the number of deaths for that period is 1,248. This is 51 less than in July preceding, 39 less than in August, 1890, and 30 less than the August average in the state in the past five years. The death rate was 21.4 to the thousand in the large towns during the eight months of 1891; for the small towns 17.3, and 20.1 in the state.

The deaths from zymotic diseases were 458, being 38.5 per cent. of the total mortality. There were 42 deaths from typhoid fever in Ansonia. From Danbury it is reported that nine cases occurred among some persons who had been temporary residents of Money Island, one of the group of Thimble Islands.

The whole number of births during the year 1890 is 17,394, and the birth rate per thousand is 23.3. The number of males is 8,877, of females 8,409, not stated 108. The number of births of American parentage is 7,596, of foreign 9,296, not stated 500.

The whole number of marriages is 6,428. Of this number 3,451 were both parties American. Marriages in which both parties were foreign numbered 1,719; husband American, wife foreign, 505; husband foreign, wife American, 601; not stated 8.

Good-By to the "Barn Church."
At a meeting of the official board of the South Methodist church last Monday evening it was decided to make even more extensive improvements on the church than was at first planned. An effort will be made to remove the somewhat barn-like appearance of the outside by tearing off the battens and shingling down the first story and capping the lower story. Large windows will be put in the basement to increase the light and also improve the appearance of the edifice. It is believed that covering the outside will make the church much warmer in winter.

UNEMPLOYED STATESMEN.

They are the High Toned Office Seekers - Rumored Cabinet Changes - Ohio Politics - The New Two-Dollar Bills.

[Correspondence of the Herald.]
WASHINGTON, Sept. 14, 1891.
Mr. Harrison is due at the White House to-morrow, and from present indications he will be forcibly reminded of the first few weeks of his administration before he has had an opportunity to remove the dust of travel from his person. Washington is swarming with "statesmen out of a job," and every train that arrives is adding to the number, and those of them who do not believe that they possess exactly the necessary qualifications to make a good Secretary of War are certain that they would make model judges for the new United States Circuit Court, nine of whom are to be appointed between now and the meeting of Congress. The New Yorkers among them have their eyes turned longingly toward the collectorship of customs of the port of New York, which has been resigned by Mr. Fassett, the republican nominee for governor of that state. There are also a number of other desirable positions to be filled, including two seats upon the Interstate Commerce commission and a third assistant Secretary of State.

There is one marked difference between the office hunters of the present time and those of March, 1889. Then the brass band style was the prevailing one. Every fellow that could get himself before the public by means of newspaper interviews did so, many of them to their everlasting regret. Now every one of them is on a "still hunt." You would never know from the hotel registers anything of this sudden influx of the brood political, for the very good reason that those of them who have not stopped at the private residences of personal friends have taken special pains to keep their names out of the public registers of the hotels at which they are domiciled, and have been requested the clerks, and even the waiters in some instances, under no circumstances to let any horrid newspaper men know that they were in the house. The newspaper men know it all the same, as they usually do everything of importance that is going on in Washington.

It is not probable, judging from the best information obtainable, that the public curiosity regarding the successor to Secretary Proctor will be gratified before the first of November, upon which date that gentleman will assume the "senatorial toga"—the temptation to use this time-worn expression is irresistible. There is a story here that is plausible, if not true, to the effect that Attorney General Miller is to be made one of the Circuit Court justices, and that Secretary Noble is to be made Attorney General, thus making two vacancies in the cabinet. There may be no better foundation for this than the known desire of the two men. Mr. Miller has long been credited with having judicial aspirations, although it was supposed to be a Supreme Court chair upon which his ambition was set, and it is well known that Mr. Noble would find the purely legal duties of the holder of the Attorney General's portfolio far more congenial than the manifold responsibilities and harassing duties which devolve upon the man who presides over the Department of the Interior.

Ohio politics is a subject much talked about in Washington as well as elsewhere, just now, and for that reason a rumor which has found its way here may be interesting enough to repeat: it is, most assuredly, if it be true. It says that the apparent rivalry between Senator Sherman and ex-Gov. Foraker for the Senatorship is but a sham adopted for the purpose of bringing out the full republican vote, and that there is a perfect understanding between the two that if the Republicans carry the legislature, Senator Sherman is to be re-elected and is then to resign in favor of Foraker who is to be elected Senator.

Only three members of the cabinet are now absent. They are Secretary Blaine, who is expected here by the first of October; Secretary Proctor, who is making a tour of the Western Military Posts, and Secretary Foster, who is away on a fishing trip, according to the officials under him, but who is thought to be in reality on a very important political mission, the result of which may deeply concern Mr. Harrison.

The bureau of engraving and printing is turning out a large quantity of the $2 certificates, which are to be put in circulation on the first of October, to take the place of the counterfeit Hancock certificates, which will be retired as fast as they come into possession of the Government.

THE GRANGE FAIR.

Premiums in Several Classes--A Good Exhibit Assured.

For the first time Manchester Grange will offer cash premiums, at its fair to be held at the town hall next Wednesday and Thursday. The premiums though small amount in the aggregate to something like $100. They cover exhibits of farm produce, fruits, bread and pastry, fancy work, paintings, flowers and taxidermy; besides these discretionary premiums will be awarded on exhibits of merit in other departments. The purchase of a season ticket at 55 cents gives the exhibitor the privilege of competing for a premium. Refreshments will be served each evening. Besides the general committee, announced last week, special committees have been appointed as follows: On decorating, Mrs. Frank L. Bidwell, Mrs. Joseph Albiston and Frank L. Bidwell; on farm produce, Henry Bidwell, Gardner Warren, Charles Couch; on paintings and fancy work, Mrs. William C. Keish, Miss Clara Carpenter and Miss Allena Taylor; on pastry, Mrs. John Loomis, Mrs. A. W. Hollister and Mrs. Charles Couch.

The local Grange has on several occasions shown its ability to entertain the public in fine style and The Herald can confidently assert that those who visit the town hall next Wednesday and Thursday will be well repaid for their trouble.

A Bicycling Street.

[New York Sun.]
"It would be a fine thing," said a bicyclist, "if we had one bicycling street here in New York running from the upper to the lower end of the city. I believe that if there were such a street 50,000 of the up-town people who ride down town every day on the cars would wheel down on their bicycles. The bicycling street should be kept smoothly paved, and a width of at least fifty feet should be kept clear all along for the wheelmen. Perhaps there might be a space of ten feet left at one side for wagons and carriages going up town and on the other side for those going down town, while the bicyclers got the middle of the road. What a spectacle it would be to see tens of thousands of men, and a good many women, wheeling down town in the morning and up in the evening! They would have the best kind of exercise, and it would be good for their health. They could make quick time, too. Just let your imagination loose and look at them with your mind's eye?"

Pat Maloney's Comedy company had a fair audience at Apell's opera house Tuesday evening. The entertainment consisted of a few character sketches, a fair exhibition of tumbling, a number of the popular songs of the day and some clog dancing. The audience was somewhat disappointed in the entertainment and had it not been for the comic appearance of Pat Maloney, the best actor of the company, who was full of mirth, the show would have been a dead failure.

Prohibition Caucus.

The Prohibitionists of Manchester are hereby notified to meet at the Town Hall, on Tuesday evening, Sept. 22, 1891, at a quarter before eight o'clock, to put in nomination a town ticket, and to transact any other business proper to be considered at said meeting.
Per Order of Town Committee.

In England the craze among horse breeders has been to raise hunters just as in America today the desire of every breeder is to produce fast trotters.

The folly of the eighth school district in not providing a suitable building for the overflowing primary departments has been proven already.

HOW'S THIS MR. CHILDS?
The Eighth District Committee Want to Know about the Water Pressure.

EDITOR OF THE HERALD:
Dear Sir:—In your edition of Sept. 5 under the title "Testing the Water Pressure," I find some expressions by the Herald and also by Mr. Childs which do not clearly understand and would like very much to have them explained.

While Mr. Childs is unwilling to allow what he terms outsiders to make a test and choose their own conditions for so doing the Herald says that the measure, according to Mr. Childs's test is all right, in fact more than the contract calls for and how pray were these tests made; did not Mr. Childs choose his own conditions?

To sum the whole matter up, why is it, if the Manchester Water Co. are fulfilling their contract with the eighth school district committee outsiders; or does Mr. Childs mean to be understood that they are outside of the Water Co?

In reply to Mr. Johnson, so far as The Herald is concerned no attempt was made to "belittle" the work of the district committee. We stated the facts without comment and gave Mr. Childs's statement regarding the tests he had made.

MILLIONS IN IT.
Census of the Great Tobacco Crop --Connecticut's Large Figures.

A dispatch dated Springfield, Mass., Sept. 4th, says: "A complete census of tobacco grown in the Connecticut and Housatonic valleys and intervening territory has been taken during the past ten days.

Two-thirds of the crop will be harvested by Saturday night, and is of the best quality and weight ever grown. The cured leaf will be the finest ever produced in this section.

The market for the new crop is already excited and fully 15 per cent. of the product in the Connecticut and Housatonic valleys has been contracted for at prices ranging from 14 to 30 cents per pound for cured leaf.

South Windsor's New Quarry.

Good progress has been made this season in developing the new quarry east of Rye street station. This quarry is situated on the Podunk river (only a lively brook at that point), and is part of the old Bissell farm and a 400 acre tract in South Windsor belonging to Thomas H. Bissell, of Hartford.

NOTES FROM THE FAIRS.

Fine Weather Brings Success to Them All.

Five thousand people were present at the Windham county fair at Brooklyn Wednesday.

Gov. Bulkeley and staff attended the state fair at Meriden Wednesday.

The Pomfret stock farm had an extensive exhibit at the Brooklyn fair.

A balloon ascension and parachute leap was one of the features of the Brooklyn fair Thursday.

There was an extensive exhibit of poultry at the Woodstock fair. One man exhibited 59 coops.

Edgar Brown, of Hockanum, exhibited at the state fair a cow 17 years old, giving twelve to fifteen quarts of milk a day.

Treasurer Frank Grant, of the Tolland County Agricultural society, states that the attendance at the Rockville fair Thursday was the largest in the history of the society, which has held thirty-nine annual fairs.

The Rockville House was hardly able to accommodate all of the guests during the days of the fair, and cot beds were in demand.

Frank Robinson met with a severe accident in attempting a balloon ascension at Meriden Thursday. When his balloon had risen a dozen feet or more, the ropes took fire.

SEGAR--GALLUP.
Large Wedding at the North Cong. Church--Wedding Gifts.

Probably the largest-attended wedding that ever took place in Manchester was that of Mr. Edward E. Segar, purchasing agent for the Mather Electric company and Miss Jennie Gallup, daughter of Mr. J. D. Gallup, of Buckland.

The bride wore a gown of cream nun's veiling and carried a bouquet of white roses and the bridesmaid was attired in white cashmere and carried yellow roses. The ceremony was brief and at its close the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride.

Prominent among the wedding gifts were a piano, the gift of the groom to the bride, and a decorated dinner set of 165 pieces, from the employees of the Mather factory.

HOW ABOUT THE WHEAT?

A GREAT QUESTION IN WHICH THE WORLD IS NOW INTERESTED.

America Has Produced an Enormous Crop and There Is a Shortage in Europe—The Situation Carefully Reviewed.

Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association.

THE year 1891 is destined to be noted in history for a combination of accidents and incidents in the grain markets which probably never occurred before and is not likely to ever occur again. There have been very large crops in one country at the same time with failure in other countries, but never a year when so large an area in America yielded so great a general average, and very few years of such general failure in Europe. Nevertheless, the evidences multiply daily that the results so confidently predicted cannot all be realized, and that within the last ten or fifteen years new factors have come in to render all old time calculations of no effect.

Let us note briefly the extent of failure in Europe and the amount of the American surplus, and then go on to consider the new elements in the calculation. And first let it be noted that the extension of wheat culture has been so rapid since 1870 that the fluctuations in price common before that time can never again be expected. Only once in the century ending with 1870 did flour reach $16 per barrel (gold) in New York, and that was in 1797, when a limited yield in the New World was coincident with blight, unusual cold and almost universal war in Europe.

It is worth noting that in the next year came the first financial panic of note in the United States, and that foreign war has ever since been closely succeeded by panic at tolerably regular periods, the sequences being as follows: Waterloo, campaign 1815—panic of 1819-22; Crimean war, 1854-6—panic of 1867; Austria-Prussian war, 1866—semi-panic or "depression" of 1867; Franco-German war, 1870—great panic of 1873. In 1817 flour reached $14 per barrel, and in 1847 it once reached $10 in London and $3.75 in New York. It is the popular error to attribute this to the Irish famine, but as Ireland's total population was but 6,000,000 the mistake is evident.

In the "greenback era" four in New York city once rose to $11.75, and in 1866 it was again at $11.70. In 1877 it was once $3, and in 1893 $3.75, and in reality it was much higher in the latter year than in the first named, for the $11.75 of 1864 was in coin but half as much. The point I wish to enforce, however, is that the fluctuations are all the time growing less, and of late very rapidly, the cause of which will presently appear. When the Dutch patriots on the Hudson framed those famous long leases which led to the riots of 1844, etc., the payment was to be in sound wheat or its equivalent on Jan. 1, and the records of the Van Rensselaer family show that only five times in the sixty-one years did wheat reach $3 per bushel, while the average for the whole lease was $1.83. So it appears that even then wheat was, for long periods, the steadiest of all products, and it is all the time growing steadier.

In the year 1855 the price of breadstuffs of all kinds averaged higher the world over than in any other year of this century except 1817, but in 1856 there was a general decline. Then the grain buyers of Europe made an exhaustive study of the subject, and arrived at these conclusions: "The world consumes nearly the same quantity of grain year by year of all kinds; the normal cost averages very near fifty cents a bushel, and no possible combination of capitalists or speculators can raise or lower the selling price except for very short periods of time in limited areas. Nobody is big enough to corner the world."

It is obvious that the world is commercially much bigger than then and the consumption of grain much greater, but the production has increased still faster, and it is this which has in effect forced an increased consumption. This year for the first time since 1870 consumption has almost overtaken production; but has it quite? Let us see. The largest crop of wheat ever produced in the United States hitherto was (1884) 512,763,500 bushels and the same year witnessed the largest crop of corn down to that time, viz., 1,765,592,425 bushels, but the latter was exceeded in 1888. A conservative estimate of this year's wheat puts it at 600,000,000 bushels and it is all saved.

Now, what is Europe's deficit—how much must she have? All here is wheat and she has less wheat than we. A deficit on the grain she depends on the United States as low as 150,000,000 bushels; a great "bull" operator is positive it will reach 800,000,000 bushels. Both include all kinds of grain. Others content themselves with declaring in general terms that Europe wants all the corn and wheat we can spare at good prices. The last year of general foreign deficit was 1881, when wheat in New York ranged from $1.14 to $1.56. In 1873 it ranged from $1.55 to $2.25, and in 1867 from $2.30 to $3.40. Note the decrease in the range of fluctuations. Now, the European deficit being far greater this year than in either of those years, it would at first view seem that the price should rise accordingly; but has any new factor come in to prevent it? There has.

As late as 1870 the grain operator knew just what he had to depend on—a defined belt in the north temperate zone, the chief surplus countries being the United States, Russia and Hungary. The harvest was completed in September, and the world knew to a bushel just how much wheat it must make last till the next July. That condition has passed forever. England chafed at her dependence on the United States and exploited the world for new grain fields. The result is that the south temperate zone and even the tropics yield an enormous surplus. The harvest month in one country is the sowing month in another, and vice versa. Grain is pouring into England every month of the year, wheat is being harvested somewhere almost continuously from February to November, and corn, rice, rye, oats, barley and millet from August till June, so that the "world's visible supply" in September is no longer a proof of what it will be in March.

Some of the figures are quite surprising. The first and merely experimental export from India was some 800,000 bushels. It ran up rapidly to 80,000,000, and some claim it will this year reach 45,000,000. The traveler may there start in the south while the February harvest is in progress and watch the harvesting week after week as he goes leisurely northward till it ends on the great northern plateau in September, by which time the harvest of another grain has begun in some sections of the south. In Australia the wheat range is from 25 to 37 degs. south latitude, the sowing and harvesting varying in like degree, and the Argentine Republic reproduces in inverse order (January for July, etc.) the best conditions of the middle belt of the United States.

And what can the effect be for the year ending Dec. 31, 1891? The Financial Times, of London, which has made the best September estimates for two years, says: "The European wheat yield for this year is 263,000,000 bushels less than that of 1890, and that of South America 12,000,000 less; that of Australia and Africa the same; that of Asia (India principally) 38,000,000 more than in 1890, and that of North America 66,000,000 bushels more. Net deficit for the world, 78,000,000 bushels. The net requirements for the importing countries are 468,000,000 bushels and the net surpluses of the exporting countries are 390,000,000 bushels. Add the greater deficit of rye and deduct the possible but as yet unknown increase for corn and the final net deficit is—well, the 'bulls and bears' differ again, but it is considerable."

So far The Financial Times, but in the face of its figures wheat declined. It is not here presumed that any one can tell what the real demand will be, or how far other articles of food can be substituted for wheat and rye; the point aimed at is to show why fluctuations in the price of wheat are steadily growing less, why they must continue to grow less, and how it may come to pass in a few years that the yield of wheat, taking all the zones and divisions of zones together, may be almost exactly the same year by year, increasing only as population increases, and so wheat may be as stable in value as gold.

MEN WHO DON'T LIKE WHEAT BREAD.

A queer story comes from Russia to the effect that the expulsion of the Jews has prevented the full harvesting of the crops. The Jew loaned money to the farmer early in the season on the security of the crop and the latter paid the money for harvesting; this year the Jew could not advance the money, and so, in many districts, more than half the grain rotted in the field. From Germany also comes the report that because Russia does not export rye the German soldiers are "compelled to eat wheat bread" and are greatly disgusted. It sounds queer to an American, but what one people doesn't know about another people would make a big show.

A Petrified Horse Found.

There was recently taken from a small creek near Springtown, L. T., a genuine curiosity in the shape of a petrified horse, which had beyond doubt been lying in the bed of the stream for many years. The creek, which is known as Mason's Ford, has been dwindling away for some time, owing to the failure of the springs by which it is fed, and it is now but a shallow rivulet, and a number of Indian relics, human bones, etc., have been taken from its bed.

The horse was nearly covered by a deposit of sand and loose limestone, and was discovered only by chance, some boys wading in the creek catching sight of a portion of one leg. Examining this, it was found to have turned entirely to stone, which led to the whole being dug out and carried to shore. The horse, a large, white one, seems to be the work of a cunning sculptor, so completely has the petrification been, even the hairs of the mane and tail being converted into stone.

In the neck and piercing one of the largest veins is an arrow, in all probability the cause of its death, and which probably struck it as it stood on the banks of the creek, into which it rolled in its death agony. Its sides still show the marks of a saddle and its flanks are cut as by spurs used with desperation, but no brand or other mark gives a clue to its rider.

In removing it from the stream one hoof was unfortunately broken off, but with this exception it is perfect. It is now on exhibition in Springtown, but is shortly to be presented to the Smithsonian institution, though several agents for dime museums have endeavored to secure it for their enterprises.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Smuggled Chinese Strangely Caught. Wednesday evening a furious thunderstorm prevailed in Montana, accompanied by heavy rain and hail. Sam Herron was coming into Benton from his ranch with a team and was caught in the shower about four miles from town. A blinding flash of lightning lit up the prairie, and Herron was appalled to see a thunderbolt strike a wagon at some distance ahead of him on the trail. He rode up to the spot, where he found the driver of the vehicle dead and nine Chinamen crouching down in the wagon. Taking in the situation at a glance, Herron rode rapidly into Benton and notified Collector Sullivan, who immediately summoned assistance, and went out in the storm and took the Chinamen prisoners. They left the dead body of the teamster on the range, and brought the Chinamen into town, where they were secured. Under a recent decision all Chinamen captured by the officers must be returned to China, and the nine now in custody at Benton will undoubtedly be sent direct to San Francisco in charge of officers, and be sent thence to Hong Kong.—Cor. St. Paul Globe.

The Artist and the Child. Mr. Burne-Jones has so far recovered from the effects of his recent fall that he has been able to paint for several hours during the last few weeks. One of the earliest exercises of his art after his recovery was characteristic. Being at the house of a friend he found himself in the nursery, and there the child daughter of the house was for some nursery rhyme undergoing solitary confinement in a corner. When the authorities came to release the tiny prisoner they found the walls of her cell covered with beautiful pencil drawings of flights of birds and all sorts of scenes of "faery lands forlorn." Half frightened and half proud the little one exclaimed, perhaps unnecessarily, "Please, it wasn't I, was Mr. Burne-Jones that did it."—Vanity Fair.

The Singular Fate of a Rat. In the warehouse of Tilton & Co., rice dealers, is stored a quantity of rice in bags and barrels and in bulk. The rat family is numerous there. On a shelf near the door are placed conveniently a dozen ordinary iron paper files for filing dry tickets. On opening the doors of the warehouse a morning or two ago a fine, sleek and fat rat was found impaled on one of the files, pierced through and through, resting on the dry tickets, wriggling head and feet and tail in endeavors to free himself. It was believed that in attempting to walk along the projecting ledge of bricks near the ceiling to get under the floor the rat missed his footing and fell, and trying, catlike, to alight on his feet, struck on the file.—Savannah News.

In Memory of Halliwell-Phillips. A memorial to the devoted Shakespearean scholar and biographer, the late Mr. Halliwell-Phillips, has been raised in the chancel of the Collegiate church of Stratford-on-Avon in the form of a stained glass window. The subject is, "Elijah's Sacrifice on Mount Carmel." The window is situated immediately behind Shakespeare's monument and within a few feet of the poet's grave.—London Telegraph.

Delay in a Florida Sawmill. A negro mill hand at Inwood ran his head against the cut-off saw Thursday afternoon while the saw was in full motion. Result: The teeth of the saw will have to be rounded up and the saw hammered before the latter may be used again. The negro only stopped work long enough to dress an inch long cut in his scalp, the result of the collision on his side.—Pensacola News.

Tidal Wave. It is reported that the tidal wave caused by earthquakes in the Coochop region, Arizona, reached a height of 100 feet. Near Lerdo the Colorado river bed was divided by a chasm over ten feet wide into which the waters poured with thundering noise, and many figures of less width and twenty to thirty feet long were suddenly made in the sun dried earth.—Exchange.

PHILADELPHIA'S QUEER BOOKSELLER

He Sits Day After Day Almost by the Side of Franklin's Tomb.

If Dickens were alive today he would find a character worthy of his pen in

THE AGED BOOKSELLER.

Philadelphia. It is a queer old bookseller, who has his stand on a little wheelbarrow by Franklin's tomb, against the wall of old Christ Church burying ground, on Arch street below Fifth. Every day, rain or shine, for the past ten years he has appeared at the corner at 7 o'clock in the morning and remained there until 6 in the evening. His stock of books is unpromising and meager—less than forty volumes in all. Several copies of "Poor Richard's Almanac" figure prominently in the little collection, which never grows less. Many of the books are without covers, and those that possess bindings are as shabby and rusty looking as the faded, worn out suit of broadcloth worn by their simple hearted owner.

No one thinks of purchasing the books and no one is ever seen to look at them. How the quaint old man is able to secure the necessities of life has always been a mystery to the thousands of busy persons that hourly pass the corner. Day after day the old man sits gazing at his antiquated stock, silent and uncomplaining.

Not long ago a number of newspaper men became interested in the old man and raised a small purse with which to purchase him a few of the comforts of life. One of them tells the following incident in the life of the venerable bookseller:

FRANKLIN'S TOMB.

"One day not long since, as he was hurrying to get his books into the blacksmith shop, where he keeps them over night, and to get out of the way of a coming shower, he staggered and fell to the sidewalk, where he laid until raised by a passerby. He was scarcely able to speak, but said he felt 'numb and cold on one side and couldn't walk.' 'The Pennsylvania hospital ambulance was summoned and the old man taken away, the doctor pronouncing the case to be a slight stroke of paralysis.' After remaining at the hospital for about an hour he induced the doctor to let him leave for home, which he reached with the aid of kind hearted pedestrians. 'A day or two after he returned to his old stand, walking a little slower than before, and too feeble to push the wheelbarrow which formerly held his stock, but which he now spreads upon a broken chair.'"

Nothing can induce him to give up his occupation, which seems to have become his very existence. Daily he continues his vigil over his little batch of discolored books. They are his life and his treasures, and the thought of discontinuing his daily routine fills him with dread.

His physical condition is very much enfeebled, but his wistful smile contains a sort of hopeless hope that is pathetic in the extreme. Since his last serious illness a number of local philanthropists have become interested in his history, and they propose that the frugal needs of the "poor old bookseller by Franklin's tomb" shall be looked after in the future.

One of Them Was Enough. A recent decision of a Paris court is commended to the consideration of American landlords. A justice of the peace declared a lease canceled because the lessee produced before the court a single bedbug, captured in a bed hired for the tenant's convenience by the lessor. The court held, in accordance with its construction of article 1,719, that by the fact of the presence of that one insect peaceable occupation and enjoyment of the leased premises was thereby sufficiently interrupted to impair the validity of the lease.

The Last Waterloo Officer. General Wichote, the last English officer who fought at Waterloo, is dead, aged ninety-seven. He fought at Bugby for Macredy, the actor. After serving on the Peninsula he was ordered with his regiment to New Orleans and actually sailed, but his ship was overtaken by a faster one with orders to return in preparation for the struggle of the allies. He also was at the ball at Brussels before the battle of Waterloo. Really gilt edged tea keeps going up. A parcel of "golden tips" grown on the Mahabettys estate, Ceylon, has been sold in London for £175 a pound.

BELIEVES IN HEREDITY.

GENERAL BUTLER THINKS TRYING TIMES PRODUCE STRONG MEN.

The Children of Those Who Fought the French and Indians Were the Heroes of the Revolution--The General's Early Training.

B. F. Butler is now a wrinkled old man of seventy-three, and few who have looked upon him or seen his picture--and who has not--can imagine him ever a slender youth of eighteen, weighing less than 100 pounds.

BUTLER AT THE AGE OF TWENTY-ONE. and soldier. Over his eyes is prominent that immense development of the perceptive powers, which give him the breadth of comprehension and facility for mastering detail that have always distinguished him.

General Butler himself is a strong believer in heredity, and contends that a strong and virile ancestry is necessary to produce a man of ability.

Those whose fathers had fought in the French and Indian wars were born to fight the mother country. Then, too, he argues, the intermingling of the blood of temperamental different people is highly productive of ability.

His grandfather, Zephaniah Butler, fought with Wolfe on the plains of Quebec and in the Revolution, and his old powder horn, bearing date of 1758, now hangs in Butler's library.

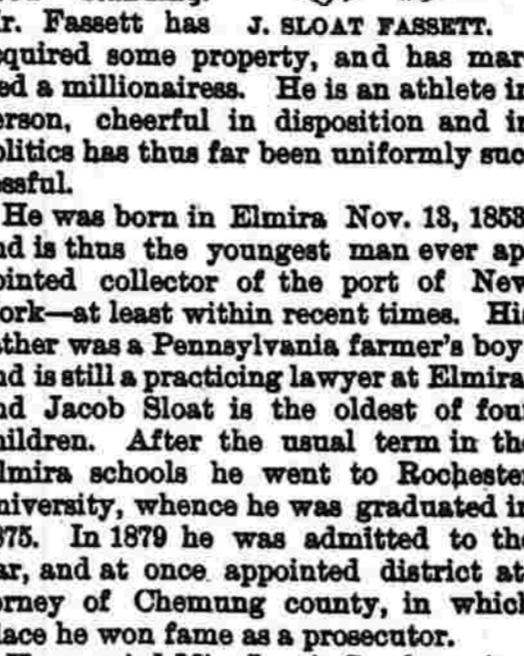

In 1840 she married Ariel C. Harris, a lawyer. They removed to Adrian, Mich., but when President Taylor died and her brother succeeded him Mrs. Harris went to Washington and assisted Mrs. Fillmore in the White House.

It is said that California redwood comes nearer being fireproof than many other materials of which buildings are constructed. The assertion is made that redwood used as shingles in some peculiar manner smother flames and prevents its breaking forth.

THE NEW YORK REPUBLICANS.

Sketch of the Man They Have Chosen for Standard Bearer.

Jacob Sloat Fassett, who leads the Republican hosts of New York in the campaign of 1891, is one of the few to whom fortune has been kind.

He was born in Elmira Nov. 13, 1853, and is thus the youngest man ever appointed collector of the port of New York--at least within recent times.

well considered her decidedly the most talented member of it. It appears, however, that her talent consisted largely of activity, and this continued till within a few weeks of her death.

In 1864 she married Ariel C. Harris, a lawyer. They removed to Adrian, Mich., but when President Taylor died and her brother succeeded him Mrs. Harris went to Washington and assisted Mrs. Fillmore in the White House.

A Wedding and a Honeymoon.

Rev. Henry Wunder was marrying Dr. L. P. Ehrman and Miss Adelaide Crafton at the Leland when the groom exclaimed:

"Stop the deal!" "What's the matter?" asked the preacher.

"We will have to postpone this for a while--I hate that blue dress that Adelaide is wearing. If she can't be married in her steel gray I will disturb the peace."

The minister was led out of the room by the eccentric physician, and the bride changed her dress. When she was ready a knock was heard on the door, and the men entered. The doctor wanted to go on just where the minister left off, but the latter objected.

"That's better," he asked of Clerk Squires. "Please call a cab. We will now take our honeymoon."

A New Motor Engine.

A new method of working motor engines with hot gases and steam is now creating no little interest in English circles.

First, the chamber having supplied a charge of mixture to the working cylinder and been afterward open to an exhaust, hot gases are passed through to clean and dry it, and while the chamber is still full of hot, dry gases it is closed.

SUMMER GIRLS IN TOWN.

THEY ARE BUSY TRYING ON THEIR NEW FALL GOWNS.

Oliver Harper Thinks There Never Was a Finer Variety of Goods to Choose From--Read Her Letter and You Will Agree with Her.

[Special Correspondence.] NEW YORK, Sept. 17.--Last week the last of the summer girls returned to New York. This week they are buying fall gowns.

I know what pretty gowns there are to choose from. One is of drab cheviot in shepherd check, the check being moss green. The skirt is walking length (which means that it just clears the ground), and has a simple hem, and a few upturned plaits at the waist and fawn plaits at the back.

Another elegant fall walking costume is of striped camel's hair in palest biscuit color, the stripes being only due to shading produced by the weave. The skirt apparently opens in front over brown faille, and the side draperies (as well as the bottom, and, indeed, every edge) are bordered with a narrow, brown silk gimp.

In being thus careful to give all the details, I hope that those who see the pictures will have no difficulty in making a garment like either of these if they please. Any reasonable goods is adapted to these styles, and it requires about five yards of material forty-four inches wide, aside from the trimming for each.

It does not take a minute to untie the tapes and make the skirt into a neat walking dress again. Perhaps one of the softest waists now worn so much would be the most suitable, but it should match the costume, and all should be of dark color. Gray is really the best color for bicycling, as the mud spots which are bound to get on show less than on dark blue or black.

UNFORTUNATE IN OLD AGE.

The Late Ex-President Grevy Had a Disreputable Son-in-law.

Francois Jules Pole Grevy, recently deceased, was at once the most fortunate and unfortunate of French statesmen. He passed through three revolutions with honor, and reached the highest place in the republic only to be utterly cast down by his own son-in-law, husband of the daughter whom he loved more than all else in the world.

M. GREVY.

He was born Aug. 15, 1807, at Mont Soms Vaudrey, in the Jura, among the foothills of the mountains. His father was a very humble citizen, who volunteered as a soldier in 1792, won some distinction and became an uncompromising republican, in which last his son followed him.

He began the practice of law in Paris in 1837, and soon became noted, and when the revolution of 1848 broke out he converted the Jura mountaineers to the support of the new republic. They elected him to the constituent assembly, of which he was made vice president, and in which he took radical republican ground, advocating the choice of a president removable at the will of the people.

Louis Napoleon's election and coup d'etat followed, and one of the first acts of the new emperor was to have M. Grevy arrested. He remained some months in prison and came out more radical than ever.

The disasters of 1870 brought him again to the front. He was elected president of the national assembly in February, 1871, and after many valuable services in various capacities was, on Jan. 30, 1879, chosen president of the republic for seven years.

His son-in-law, Daniel Wilson, traded on official secrets, and secured fraudulent badges of the legion of honor, etc., and thus President Grevy, who had been re-elected, was ruined and compelled to resign in December, 1887. A few weeks later he was stricken with apoplexy. He never entirely recovered his faculties, but retired to his native place and died there.

IT WAS A QUIET WEDDING.

It was a quiet wedding, as the friends and relatives of the bride and groom would have it, when all fashionable London was out of town, and for the place the parish church of Brompton, which is almost unknown to people in society.

MRS. C. E. BHAM.

Another reason for privacy was the fact that the family had been in mourning for a year on account of the death of her brother, young Abraham. Thus it came about that the granddaughter of Abraham Lincoln and of ex-Senator and ex-Secretary of the Interior Harlan, of Iowa, and the daughter of the chief of American diplomats abroad, was married with much less ceremony than is usual.

Mr. Bham is a Chicago boy and the attachment began in that city, when Miss Lincoln was a schoolgirl. The marriage was postponed on account of her youth and the lover went to London as private secretary to Minister Lincoln. He is a cousin of the minister's law partner and himself a lawyer, and it is his intention to practice in New York.

A Yankee Prince No More.

The personality of the Hawaiian government is made up by a very curious combination of native Sandwich islanders, Americans, Englishmen and, perhaps, other foreigners. The leading financial official for some time has been a Canadian, and he succeeded in gaining very important concessions for the Canadian Pacific.

His rank was officially that of prince consort; that is, he was the husband of Queen Liliuokalani, whom he married Sept. 16, 1863, when she was only Princess Liliuokalani. When she became queen on the death of her brother Kalakaua a few months ago her rank was necessarily above that of her husband, but their relations were unaffected, for she loved him devotedly and is greatly protracted by his death.

He reached Honolulu when a mere boy and soon became a citizen and successful merchant. In politics he took a high rank, and was at one time governor of Oahu. They have had no children, and on the death of Liliuokalani the crown will pass to Princess Kaiulani Cleghorn, only daughter of the late Princess Liliuokalani, sister of the present queen.

The Planet Jupiter.

A radiant star will adorn the sky for several months to come. It is Jupiter, the largest and grandest planet of the solar system.

He is now in opposition with the sun, being at sunset, reaching the meridian at midnight and setting at sunrise, being visible through the whole night.

Jupiter in opposition, or opposite the sun, as the word implies, is at his greatest distance from the sun and nearest to the earth, which accounts for his superb appearance.

This majestic planet is equal in volume to 1,800 worlds like ours, and casts a shadow that extends 50,000,000 of miles in space. He is called a planet, but is more like a sun, and probably gives out some light and heat. The rapid changes visible on his surface through the telescope indicate the action of mighty forces, and a possible condition approaching incandescence.

Countless ages must pass before the planet's fires grow low, and are succeeded by periods of development, perfection and decay, the three processes that rule the material universe.

Observers, therefore, may watch the progress of world-making on this stately member of the sun's family, as the telescope reveals the varying belts, the rifts, the bright spots, and especially the famous red spot, showing that fierce forces are raging within and beneath the cloud atmosphere that envelops the planet.

Those who are familiar with the planet's story will take a deeper interest in watching the course of the bright star that reigns supreme, and that may be recognized at a glance as, looming above the southeastern horizon like a young moon, he makes his way toward the zenith.—Youth's Companion.

Snow That Did Not Reach the Ground.

Possibly the most novel feature of two balloon voyages near Denver, and the one mostly commented upon, was the experience of the Eagle Eyrie and its occupants in the snowstorm. Not a flake of the "beautiful" dropped in Denver or on the crowds of people who gazed on the air ship directly above them. The sun shone brightly and oppressively hot, and yet in five minutes after the great gas bag had left the earth it was in a raging snowstorm, almost directly over the point where the balloon was out from its moorings.

It was blowing a perfect fury, the great flakes swirling and flying in blinding profusion into the faces of the voyagers, filling the basket and covering the top with a sheet fully three inches thick. No such occurrence has ever been recorded in the history of ballooning, and the chances are not favorable to its ever occurring again. But the space of 100 feet and the occupants of the balloon were protected from the blowing snow.—Denver Post.

Sight Restored to Ninety-year-old.

The Welsh newspapers report a remarkable event at the village of Llanon, Cardiganshire, where the Rev. William Herbert, late rector of the parish, entertained 500 of his parishioners at tea in commemoration of the restoration of his eyesight in his ninety-fifth year. The reverend gentleman, who is the oldest clergyman in the principality, had held the living of Llanon for half a century. Six years ago, however, he lost his sight and resigned the rectoryship in consequence. During the last few months he has been under the treatment of an eminent Manchester oculist, and the cataracts being removed from his eyes, his sight has been completely restored, and he is now enabled to read the service in church.—London Globe.

A Dog's Descent in a Parachute.

Quite a novelty in the way of a balloon ascension occurred at Reed Lake recently. Mr. Charles Godfrey, proprietor of a lake hotel, owns a big mastiff, weighing 150 pounds, which has always evinced a great interest in balloon ascensions, and a double parachute was arranged, one for the dog and one for the man. Both went up, and when at an altitude of about 2,000 feet, the dog was swung off. His parachute was slow in opening, but came around all right, and he fell in the middle of the lake, from whence he was rescued by a steamboat. He howled, but was not hurt, and dog ascensions will be a feature hereafter. The Humane society threatens prosecution.—Grand Rapids Cor. Detroit Free Press.

Sun Spots.

The period of maximum is approaching and amateur and professional astronomers in all quarters of the globe are directing their telescopes to the orb of day in hopes that his smallest appearance will be more than usually interesting. There is an excellent chance for amateurs in this class of observation. The comparison of solar disturbances with the variations of the magnetic needle forms an abundant field for useful work. The owner of the smallest telescope may discover something which will send his name down to posterity in the astronomy text books.—New York Recorder.

Sharpsighted observers can see on moonless nights several thousand stars. Jupiter is the brightest of them all. The telescope brings out 50,000,000 stars. Not one can compare with Jupiter. Venus is his only rival, and she is now hidden in the sun's rays, so that he reigns alone.
