Private E. G. Anderson Dies of War Wounds

Local Soldier Boy Makes Supreme Sacrifice

BOUND TO SERVE IN ARMY

Tried Again and Again to Enlist

Died Today at the Direction of the Illinois State Commission

Private Ernest G. Anderson of Glen Ridge in the 148th Illinois Infantry was killed April 5. He was the second Manchester boy to die from wounds sustained in action.

Before he was accepted, he had tried to enlist 11 times, but had been rejected each time. After his last trial he was accepted, but was sent back the same day because he was not over 5 feet 9 inches. He was finally accepted on the 20th of last month

Anderson was a plucky boy, and had worked his way through school, but was not graduated. He was 21 years old.

The NEW LOAN DRIVE...
The Time to Buy Bonds is Now—Remember the Rock of Almost $60,000,000.00 in bonds is needed in the new loan drive, which will close in a few weeks. Connecticut money is needed, and the banks and insurance companies are doing their part, but every Connecticut man and woman must do his or her bit, too, if we are to raise the $37,500,000,000 needed.

MORE THAN $2,300,000
IN BONDS ON HAND NOW

As many as 80,000 people have bought in the last few weeks, and the list is
still growing.

CHARGE for BONDS...$1.25

No one who has not yet bought should delay. It is going to be a close race, and every Connecticut
person must do his bit.

The standards of value of the United States are changing, and so are our ways of living. People are not as rich as they were before the war, and are willing to contribute less, or a smaller portion of their income, toward
the national efforts.

The Allies may not have as
much money to spend as before,
but they are not fighting for their freedom any more. They are fighting to maintain the status quo, and
are not fighting altogether because
of any threat to their lives.

A man who earns $25.00 a week is just as rich as he was before the war, and should contribute
as much toward the national efforts as he is able.

Don't let us be content with less;
let us do our share, and do it
now. It is the least we can do for our country, and the least we can do for ourselves.

DO YOU WANT TO HELP?

Don't let us be content to say that we are not
rich enough to contribute.
We are rich enough to
help, and we are rich
enough to give more.

Gardens suffer from the ravages of insect pests. Two of the most serious ones are: (1) aphids that attack flower buds and (2) cutworms that cut and eat the roots of young plants. The former can be controlled by spraying with a 10% mixture of copper sulfate or Bordeaux mixture. The latter can be controlled by planting the crop in a nursery bed and then移除ing the shoots of the young plants from the soil before they have time to get established. A third method is to plant the crop in a field where no other plants have been grown for a year or more. This practice is known as "rotation," and it is most effective in controlling cutworms.

Hopper-dozers,—Many forms of grasshoppers and hoppers are troublesome to gardeners. The first step in controlling them is to sweep the lawn to remove the adults. If the lawn is infested, a 10% mixture of copper sulfate or Bordeaux mixture should be applied. The second step is to dig a trench around the perimeter of the garden and then to cover it with a 10% mixture of copper sulfate or Bordeaux mixture. The third step is to apply a 10% mixture of copper sulfate or Bordeaux mixture to the edge of the garden every week until the grasshoppers have been controlled.

Breaking Methods,—Different methods of breaking up the soil are effective against grasshoppers and hoppers. The first step is to dig a trench around the perimeter of the garden and then to cover it with a 10% mixture of copper sulfate or Bordeaux mixture. The second step is to apply a 10% mixture of copper sulfate or Bordeaux mixture to the edge of the garden every week until the grasshoppers have been controlled.

bicidal.—There are many forms of grasshoppers and hoppers, and each one has its own peculiar habits. Some are active during the day and are attracted to light, while others are active at night and are attracted to plant substances. The grasshopper is a nocturnal insect, and it is most effective to control it at night. The hopper is a diurnal insect, and it is most effective to control it during the day.

Field Marshals of Major Leagues—Clarence Rowland.

New York, April 5.—"Had only 10,000 fans.

This was the greeting the White Sox heard when they arrived at the White Sox Park in Chicago on Friday. But it wasn't the only greeting the White Sox heard. They also heard from the Chicago fans, who were more than happy to welcome the White Sox to their home town.

But Rowland's team was a different story. The Sox had a tough time attracting fans. And Rowland knew it. He had to be creative to keep the fans coming. So he thought of a clever idea: he held a "fan day."

"It was a huge success," Rowland said. "We drew more than 10,000 fans. And the best part was that they liked the Sox. They really got into the game."

Rowland's idea worked. The Sox began to draw more fans. And soon they were drawing more than 20,000 fans per game.

This was the start of a new era for the White Sox. They began to win more games. And soon they were one of the top teams in the league.

"I'm proud of what we've accomplished," Rowland said. "We've come a long way since that first fan day. And we're just getting started."
