Royalists Hit Capital Of Yemen

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - A Royalist Yemeni spokesman in Beirut asserted today that Royforces were bombarding the Yemen's capital of San'a, and the Republicans have been given 40 hours "to surrender or

A statement by the Royalist social affairs minister, Hashem ben Hashem, said 300 Republifighting around San'a, which was reported cut off from the rest of Yemen. Hashem said he had received a message today from the Roy-alist military commander, Moalist military commander, Mo-hammed ben Hussein, leader of the forces in the San's. There was no direct confirmation from Yemen and the ambassador of the Republican government of Yemen in Beirut, Abdel Rahman Baydani, denied the Royalist reports. He said he had heard no news of fighting around the capital. Hashem said the head of the Republican council in Yemen. Abdel Rahman Iriani, had fled to Cairo from the Red Sea port Baydani, however, said Irinani had planned to go to Cairo "for political reasons connected with the forthcoming Arab summit conference." He could not confirm whether Iriani had flown to Cairo. Ben Hussein was reported to have given Republicans in San'a 40 hours to surrender the city. All shops and public places in San'a were reported shuttered with life at a standstill.

That Kind Of Game

There is something of an air of senationalism—as if its disclosures were remarkable and unexpected-about the existence of a document over in the American embassy in Saigon which reports on the attitudes of the South Vietnamese toward their big allies in the

But it is hard, really, to concede the status of sensational to something that is almost automatic and routine. What the report in question appears to have done is to collect some of the reactions inevitable in the current Vietnamese situation.

There is, for instance, the South Vietnamese politician who, commenting on the recent lowering of the draft age in South Vietnam, asked, with nationalities reversed, of course, precisely the same question some American politicians ask about the war: "Why should our young men be draft ed to serve U.S. interests?" Another observation, by the Americans preparing this report for their own Vietnamese believe that Americans in Vietnam have been so dominant, especially in the direction of the war, that the very sovereignty of Vietnam is That, given the circumstances, has to be a natural reaction. So does the statement attributed to "Our country is a guinea pig for the testing of new U.S. and Russian weapreport call "a strange drift from reality This "strange drift from reality" translates into "anti-Americanism," which the report finds on the increase among the people and in the press of

It is possible to have some kind of blind faith that such trends of sentiment and feeling can somehow be reversedthat some combination of better demonstration of America's altruistic intentions plus more intelligent understanding on the part of the South Vietnamese will lead to a better relationship between the great American presence and the country it is designed to help. But such a wistful hope comes against old and perhaps unalterable laws. We have the power there, and cannot quite manage to behave as if we didn't. The greater the power we bring to bear on the effort to win the war, the more it seems our war and the more we alienate the very people we say we are trying to win it for. If we are saving South Vietnam from North Vietnam, we are doing so in such a manner and in such a situation that the final result may be to unite all Vietnam in one common enmity to ourselves, just as Vietnam's greatest previous unity was achieved in opposition to the Chinese, the Japanese, and, before us, the French. Such possibilities appear, in the document in which American officials in Vietnam are surveying the situation there, as if they were as startling as they are regrettable, as strange as they

But they have all, in reality, been almost irrevocably in the cards from the moment we first locked ourselves into the game. It is a game we lose if we

Nader The Crusader

Americans might as well face it-Ralph Nader, the crusader, is all set to make a career and a living out of a never ending series of alarms about the dangers and perils we all face. He began by finding faults in the auemobiles we drive. He shifted, for another campaign, to the dangers of transmitting gas through underground pipes. He is currently hot on the trail of inferior meat. And such crusades are, of course, merely the beginning. For Nader the Crusader has made the sensational discovery that if you scratch hard enough from enough different directions you can discover some kind of flaw in everything.

surface of his present and future live lihood. The clothing we wear, the pillows and mattresses we sleep on, the cosmetics we use, the gadgets we buy the ships and trains and planes we travel on, the toys we put in the hands of our children,—all and any of these and many other items in our living could, with a little mixture of investigation and alarmism, provide a new

In time it will become enough of a recognized business, a commercial activity, to be subjected "itself to some analytical appraisal, and we, if we turn the performance over enough and scratch at it from enough different angles, may begin to discover a danger ous flaw or two in the Crusader.

f We Don't Somebody Else Will" Most of the evil that good men do in world is committed on the alibi theory that if they don't do it, somebody else will. The latest reminder of this came when, the other day, a prominent company recruiting talent on our college campuses provided, through a spokesman, its defense for manufacturing an item which has qualities of horror-shock for the pacifists of the land.

The particular item, the company rep esentative said, is not hard to make If the company didn't make it for the army, the army could very well make t for itself.

The argument is easily recognized and duplicated. It is the argument of the atomic scientist who makes the bomb. Since it is an argument which disdains morality, it lends itself out rather indiscriminately. It can be the alibi for smashing the window and taking out the television set, for rifling the pockets of the drunk, for taking advantage of secret or privileged information, for making the off-color business deal, for buying the politician. Curiously enough, however, this kind of alibi, this formula of somebody else will do it if we don't, is never applied to any of the clearly positive possibilities in human affairs and relationships. We don't say that we will stop manufacturing some instrument of death because if we don't stop manufacturing it somebody else may stop doing it first. We don't rush to make our own exit from the affairs of some small country for fear some other big country may

Somehow we never have any great fear that somebody will beat us to the noble, generous act. We are not frightened or stimulated by the possibility that somebody will climb to some higher morality than we. To tell the truth, it is only when we see somebody about to go lower than we have gone that we are suddenly full of resolve that we nust do likewise, or worse.

One sweeping, rash, over-all judgment seems worth attempting. If we could rid the world of that "if we don't do it,

Why McCarthy Stands Up

A lot of people have wondered: "What makes Eugene run?" Why has Sen. Eugene McCarthy, a quiet intellectual from Minnesota, chosen to stand forth as a Democratic presidential candidate, stepping out ahead of the formidable Robert Kennedy to oppose the equally formidable Lyndon Johnson? Surely he does not overestimate his success pros-

But here is an idealist, a Roman Catholic loner, a thoughtful Stevenson-type individual who declares himself ready to sacrifice for an issue. His running is due to more than pique at President Johnson's failure to select him as his vice presidential running-mate in 1964. Senator McCarthy argues that the Vietnam war is not only wrong tactics but bad policy for the United States. He believes that it is draining away support for vital antipoverty programs, and is depleting the United States morally. He holds there should be some candidate available next November who so believes. Additionally he opposes

President Johnson for allegedly pursung power too relentlessly. There is indeed a new element of alienation in American politics. Some well-publicized youths burn draft car in. Other Americans are ready to join any anti-Johnson crusade. Senator McCarthy, commendably, would rather see this alienation find expression within the nation's political processes-in ballots for a committed candidate—than in the anarchy of riots and flag-burnings. His candidacy will give the ardent peace proponents somewhere to turn, if the Democratic nominee is LBJ and the Republicans choose a non-dovish candi-Offhand there seems no chance that Senator McCarthy will become president, Sen. Robert Kennedy looms as the only viable Democratic alternative to Lyndon Johnson and he says he will support the President if he is renominated. Almost certainly, Senator Mc-Carthy is not Bobby Kennedy's opiniontesting "front man." Conceivably Senator Kennedy would plunge for the nomination if McCarthy's early soundings showed that President Johnson would be a disastrous candidate for his party. But that isn't likely to be shown. Senator McCarthy plans to run in several primaries, possibly omitting New Hampshire. His bid will likely embarrass a few liberal Democratic senators, who would prefer to run on a platform of support for LBJ's domestic program but avoid Vietnam. Senator McCarthy which pleased no one. will make it much more difficult for liberals to avoid mentioning Vietnam. This talented but detached Senator could stir things up in the Democratic orral, but only if the Vietnam war were to take a serious turn for the worse. Otherwise, his candidacy will would be the last meeting not mainly serve to channel the frustraunder their direct control. Indeed, it is difficult to see tions of the Vietnam peace-seekers, who how Lowenstein's organization can be much help to McCarthy may discover later that they are still unhappy because, being a minority, in the months ahead. Zelmo Beaty Bounces Back

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Zelmo "And the knee would get sore
Beaty has the bounce back in to have a sort of diathermy

Beaty has the bounce back in his knee and he's putting wings on the soaring St. Louis Hawks of the National Basketball Association.

The 6-foot-9 center from Prairie View A&M College says he is "not even concerned about the knee now." Beaty missed 33 games last year when he underwent an operation on ligaments in his right knee. He came back to play in 48 games and had the second best scoring average of hils career, but admitted the knee gave him concern, mentally and physically.

"If think I had a mental problem after that," the Hawks' "Big Z" admitted. "I was probably afraid the knee would give way, though I had been reassured by the doctor that it wouldn't.

"And the knee would get sore after each game last year. I had to have a sort of diathermy treatment on it. The only problem I have with it now is a minor sprain, and that's not associated with the operation."

A year later Beaty, 27, is peppering the basket at a 22.8 average, highest of his six-year NBA career. And the Hawks are leading the Western Division with a 22-7 mark.

Beaty, who scored a career high 42 points against Seattle Sunday, credits teammate Lenny Wilkens with helping him become the club's top scorer.

"I get the ball a lot from Lenny. Probably two-thirds of my points come off Wilkens' passes," Zelmo observed. "He knows where I want to go and what I want to do. If he doesn't get the ball in to me, then I know it's just not coming."
