What makes the possibility that Khe-san — or even the whole Vietnam thing — may be nothing more than a temporary madness in our minds such a horrible possibility.

Finally, The Safety Sandbank

A little patience does more than anything else to bring temporarily annoying or annoying developments out into a pattern which makes some sense and order, and the latest news about sand and highways indicates that patience may be the remedy there too.

What is now being investigated is the possible use of roadbeds bordered by a safety belt of loose sand, just loose enough and deep enough to smother down the speed and soften the impact of any errant motor vehicle which goes out of control off a paved road.

The possibility of something still in the experimental stage, and no one can say for sure, as yet, whether it will ever become standard practice along our pavements.

Khe-san As Symbol

Perhaps Khe-san is to become, after all, as much a symbol of this phase of the Vietnam as Dien Bien Phu was in the Vietnam, or French, phase of the war.

Demographic fact, of course, a military significance Khe-san will never have. It was the scene of a conclusive French defeat, culminating with a surrender. The military outcome of the battle of Khe-san has never been clearly defined or explained. No one can say with certainty, for instance, whether the apparent hitting of the enemy stage of our outpost, after weeks of preparation for a final action, was the result of voluntary enemy strategy of withdrawal or the result of the application of our superior fire power and the formidable nature of our defense.

And our own military theorists are still divided as to what the enemy really intended at Khe-san in the first place. There was a moment — one of those moments which make unhappy footnotes in the careers of generals — when General Westmoreland's offensive was a mere diversion intended to make us drop our guard at Khe-san. It may seem more logical, to later analysis, to classify Khe-san as the feat which was intended to draw so much of our interest and attention that the Tet offensive, which was the real plan, would take us by surprise.

Militarily, in any case, Khe-san was not a defeat. What it has been, however, is a miniature symbol of the whole American involvement in Vietnam.

We once moved forward to the occupation and fortification of Khe-san, considering that move an integral part of our strategy to turn our enemy in the field. When the enemy, in turn, moved around our position in the challenging attitude of siege, we proclaimed the end of our strategy of holding Khe-san, at all costs.

And now we get out of Khe-san, as if we never were there. And now we are anything essential at all, and as if our assignment of life and death importance to the holding of it had been merely a passing dream.

Now we proclaim that we don't have to be in Khe-san, we don't have to hold Khe-san, it really isn't important at all, we don't have to stay there.

And, although some amateur generalists try to raise some kind of howl about America going soft or taking defeat, there is no real substance to their protest. The fact that our policy has now downgraded Khe-san to the status of just another sector of Vietnam to be built, garrisoned and then abandoned.

Khe-san could be, in miniature, our whole experience with our involvement in Vietnam. We have gone in, under proclamation of total policy necessity, to an inconclusive military outcome. Degrading that uncertain and inconclusive military outcome, we are no longer as certain as we once were that Vietnam ever had to be the particular place we had to try to hold with American guns and American troops. And now we wonder, as we see how we can give up Khe-san, once described as so vital and important a key to our whole position in Vietnam, without having anything terribly catastrophic happen to anybody, whether we may not eventually discover that there can be a way for getting out of Vietnam itself without having that become a catastrophe.

Our experience with Khe-san — and possibly our experience with the whole Vietnam issue — may illustrate the overwhelming importance of what goes on in the minds of men. What we thought about Khe-san changed a great deal more than Khe-san, or the factual military situation around Khe-san, ever did. One month it was a must to us; four months later it is so nothing. It almost seems as if we select our memories and make our wars the way we accept this or that domestic feud, or this or that trend in television entertainment, or even from our status symbol in the boat in the yard to another like the swimming pool in the yard.

There is, of course, one difference. Fought the wars we happen to think we have to fight, holding the fortress

Wonders of the Universe Planets May Rule Sunspot Activity

By DR. I. M. LEVITT, DIRECTOR The Fraunhofer Institute A new method for predicting sunspot activity may eventually provide some safeguards for future astronauts on long-duration trips to the planets. However, the 1969 or 1970 moon flight will have to live with this hazard, for there is yet no definitive method by which high-energy solar particles from solar storms can be predicted.

The Terror At Son Tra

"What else could we do," a peasant woman said. "We were so afraid, we did not want to go outside our huts."

All told, 73 villagers were killed and 103 were wounded, military spokesmen said. Fifteen armed government pacification workers were killed in defense of the village of 4,000, a settlement for refugees taken in from the war-torn countryside in the last year.

The village, covering about five city blocks, was about 85 per cent destroyed.

Some villagers, however, did flee. They swarmed toward the positions of a 14-man U.S. Marine security team about 100 yards from the village on a low hill. With their line of fire blocked by the refugees, the Marines were powerless to help, one Leatherneck said.

The attack lasted about half an hour. Reinforcements from the Army's 188th Light Infantry Brigade, landed on the Marines' hill by helicopter, arrived too late to catch any of the guerrillas.

Son Tra was one of dozens of refugee settlements attacked in the last six months.

Capt. Dennis Eilers of Luana, Iowa, a spokesman for the 196th, said Viet Cong cadre had been in Son Tra several times in the last two months looking for recruits and the villagers had not cooperated. The Viet Cong said they would burn the village, he added.

At noon today, women and children threw water from wells onto the still smoldering ruins.

"If special people came to talk to me about taxes I would say, 'no, some people don't have that kind of money,'" one girl said.

Another, an optimist, wrote: "I would help make laws and be in charge at the capitol. I hope that I wouldn't have any problems."

De Gaulle Asks Solid Majority

Sunday's second round to reach a 244-seat majority in Parliament.

Most observers believe the Gaullists would get their majority, but De Gaulle and his followers were taking no chances and called for a heavy vote.

Anti-Gaullists assailed De Gaulle's last-minute speech, saying it violated a legal ban on the use of the state-owned radio and television for election propaganda on election eve.

De Gaulle warned that his policies "will be arduous."

"We are, indeed, going to have to make a great effort for production, for productivity, and work, to compensate for, in the midst of our foreign competitors, the handicap inflicted on us by the crisis from which we are emerging: to keep the rise of prices, inflation, the fall in the value of the currency, from reducing to less than nothing the improvements in salaries and allocations to families and the aged, and (to prevent) the increase of unemployment."

De Gaulle, in his reference to currency, seemed to recognize that the franc had weakened because of effects of the crisis. But he gave no clear hint as to whether it would be formally devalued.

Plea for Sirhan Three Weeks Away

Adel Sirhan, 29, one of the defendants' four brothers, sat among front-row spectators. For Adel's protection he was escorted by several police detectives.

Sirhan entered from a door to the spectators' right. Four deputies, towering over him, closely escorted him. Two stood behind him, one to his right and one to the left of his attorney as Sirhan sat beside his lawyer at a small table facing the judge.

The indictment charges one count of murder and for the wounding of five bystanders in the volley that fatally injured Kennedy—five counts of assault with intent to commit murder.

The shooting took place early June 5 at the Ambassador Hotel as the New York senator and an exultant crowd of supporters celebrated his victory in California's Democratic presidential primary.

Still recovering from a sprained ankle suffered in his capture at the assassination scene, Sirhan was brought in a wheelchair from his cell to a point just outside the chapel courtroom.

At his arraignment June 7 in the same room he was wheeled in, but Friday he walked in, small-looking and pale.

He appeared freshly shaven. His thick, wavy, black hair, evidently freshly cut, was neatly combed. He wore no necktie.

"Your name is Sirhan Bishara Sirhan?" the judge asked.

"Yes, sir."

"You desire to substitute Mr. Parsons for the public defender?"

"Yes, sir, we do."

Union Calls Ship Strike

NEW YORK (AP) —The National Maritime Union struck at 12:01 a.m. today in a wage dispute that could tie up 70 per cent of the American merchant fleet.

The union has told its men not to establish picket lines for the time being. Early effects of the "without appeared to be minimal, but American flag ships now in port cannot sail without the unlicensed seamen represented by the union.

About 100 ships are in ports at this time on the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts. Eventually, the strike could affect 407 freighters, 188 tankers and 11 passenger-freighter ships.

The union struck on the basis of a wage-reopener clause in the four-year contract it signed in 1965. The shippers, however, contended that the union has already exercised its allotted wage-reopeners.

Officials of the 55,000-member union met with shippers at NMU headquarters Friday night for secret talks, but they broke off after 2½ hours. The shippers are represented by Maritime Service Committee and the Tanker Service Committee.

Afterwards, Joseph Curran, president of the union, sent a telegram to NMU officers in port cities saying:

"Negotiations with dry cargo and tanker operators tonight broke up with no progress. As of midnight—EDT—Friday, our members do not sail without the stoppage affects all ships in port. Committee of national officers will meet with government people on any question of clearance of military cargoes."

Curran said vessels carrying military cargoes to the Vietnam war theater would not be struck.

Most of the ships that are affected by the strike are in Atlantic and Gulf ports. Ships manned by NMU members that operate on the Great Lakes and principal rivers of the country are not involved.

The union is demanding increases of about five per cent in straight pay and overtime rates and 15 more days of vacation. The current vacation schedule is 60 days a year.

Current wages were given by the union as $423 a month for able bodied seamen, with average earnings increased about 50 per cent over that figure on the basis of overtime.

Warnings Issued In Two Crashes

A Wapping youth was issued a written warning for making an improper turn at 11:58 p.m. yesterday, after allegedly driving his car into the path of another at W. Middle Tpk. and Broad St.

The youth, Richard Lawrence, 17, was making a left turn onto Broad St. after traveling east on W. Middle Tpk. and was in the middle of the intersection, according to police, when his car was struck by a car operated by James I. Reagan, 36, of East Hartford. There were no injuries, according to police.

A Manchester girl received a written warning for failure to obey a traffic signal at 12:20 a.m. today, after driving her car in the front of a car at E. Center and Porter Sts. caroming her vehicle into a town-owned street sign and a chain link fence owned by Alexander Jarvis.

The girl, Linda A. E. Patten, 19, of 33 Mather St., according to police, drove her car into the intersection against the light and struck a car operated by Jack J. Oliva, 37, of East Hampton.

Her car, then out of control, struck the sign and fence at Lenox and E. Center Sts., coming to rest 180 feet from the point of impact. No one was injured.

Chester J. Barcia Jr., 18, of Rockville drove his car into the rear of a parked car owned by Lawrence Bagley of 28 Garden Dr. at 12:15 a.m. today in the parking lot of Deel's Drive-In on Center St. The collision was minor, police said.

At 1:50 a.m. Thomas J. Boyle, 20, of 34 Woodbridge St. backed his car into a car operated by Gilles J. Rouleau, 23, of 482 Adams St. in the same parking lot.

At 10:55 a.m. yesterday, Peter N. Soffron, 54, of Ipswich, Mass. drove his car into the rear of a car operated by Marie N. LaGrange, 80, of Augusta, Maine, near exit 94 of the Wilbur Cross Highway.

Cong Blasts Village Huts

Five Americans were killed and 12 wounded.

The enemy toll raised to 159 the number of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese reported killed by American infantrymen in three battles in the area in the last week.

The U.S. 9th Division has been using "people sniffers"—body odor detectors mounted on helicopters—to hunt down the enemy troops as part of the allied effort to head off the threat of another attack on Saigon.

In the aerial phase of the campaign, U.S. B-52 bombers dropped about two-million pounds of bombs on suspected enemy bases 22 to 32 miles north and east of Saigon Friday night and today.

Parsons asked that Sirhan receive a general psychiatric examination "as expeditiously as can be done."

McCarthy Backers Quit Convention

Two young men, who remained behind to shout against the allocation of the votes, were ejected bodily from the meeting. One of them termed the session "a farce and an insult."

The McCarthy adherents charged that some of the delegates selected to cast their large votes were only nominal McCarthy backers.

"It was the fact that they appointed only a few sure McCarthy backers that really hurt," said Sarah Kevner of the McCarthy group. But she added: "We'll now have to make a greater effort to persuade convention delegates this summer (in Chicago) to turn to McCarthy."

Among those named as McCarthy delegates was Eugene H. Nickerson, Nassau County Executive defeated by O'Dwyer in the senatorial primary. O'Dwyer, in staging his upset victory to gain the nomination, also defeated Rep. Joseph Y. Resnick.

Wallace Confident Of Ballot Places

opportunities all are threats to civil order, Humphrey said.

Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, Humphrey's rival for the nomination, also planned to woo the Iowa Democrats today. Although he trails Humphrey in delegates, he said Friday the campaign is young yet.

At an interview in Oklahoma City McCarthy renewed his pledge, if elected, to fire J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"He's been in there too long and he's come to believe that he's an institution," McCarthy said. "I think we ought to have a change."

McCarthy and Republican contender Nelson A. Rockefeller met by chance when their planes shared the same path of pavement at the airport in Oklahoma City. They had time only for handshakes and a few friendly words.

Gov. Rockefeller sounded out Oklahoma delegates to the GOP national convention and told newsmen later he felt most would vote on the first ballot for Richard M. Nixon or California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

"I was just looking for votes further down the line," he explained.

Though vacationing in Florida, Nixon had some harsh words for Humphrey, calling him the administration's "second man and chief publicist."

Nixon, who served as vice president in the Eisenhower administration of the 1950s, was irked by Humphrey's statement in Bismarck, N.D., that the peace he seeks is not "the peace of silence or the peace of emptiness or the peace of just not doing anything for eight years. We had enough of that in the 1950s."

And William H. Chartner, assistant secretary of commerce for economic affairs, said business statistics which usually move up or down before the economy in general indicate a slowdown in economic growth during the second half of this year.

He said this trend will be reinforced by the surcharge. The surcharge, at 6 per cent, was first proposed by Johnson in January of 1967 but was later raised to 10 per cent last August. As originally submitted it would have gone into effect last Oct. 1 for individuals and last July 1 for corporations.

But this timetable was shifted when Congress failed to act last year. The government will end the current fiscal year at midnight Sunday with a deficit of about $25 billion—the fourth largest in history.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department reported Friday another increase in the cost of living of three-tenths of one per cent during May. The surcharge is designed to stem this type of inflation.

The tax is retroactive for corporations to last Jan. 1 and also includes a speedup of all tax payments for them.

Another section continues the excise tax on automobiles at 7 per cent and the telephone service tax at 10 per cent, instead of permitting them to drop to 2 per cent and 1 per cent respectively.

The tax package will increase federal revenues by more than $18 billion in the new fiscal year which begins July 1. Coupled with the spending cut it will reduce a potentially large budget deficit by more than $20 billion.

This could mean a deficit next year of as little as $25 billion if present budget estimates hold.

paid when income tax returns are filed by next April 15.

Only exemptions for individuals are for single people earning $1,000 or less and married couples earning $2,000 or less.

The tax increase will expire June 30 next year unless the administration elected in November decides to extend it and Congress agrees.

Happy Season On Television

By LAWRENCE LAURENT
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — This is the happy season in television. It is a time when the present is filled with re-runs of last season's problems and a time of preparation for next autumn's certain successes.

When a series is being prepared and when episodes are being completed for future showings, each cast and every crew is certain of winning high acceptance and a certain spot in the ten most popular programs.

We are in the top half of a cycle that begins with each performer declaring loudly that the producer is a fellow with lofty ideals; the director is filled with artistic achievement, and the writers, "unlike most Hollywood hacks," are determined that something of profound social significance shall be said.

The bottom half of the cycle usually comes in November with the issuance of the second national Nielsen ratings report. Cancellations usually follow. But this is a national election year, with many pre-empted programs.

This means the cancellation notices—usually for one-third of all new programs—will be delayed until December. That will bring the bottom of the cycle and, just as certain as an agent's ten per cent, one will hear the cour comments about producers who cared for nothing but stingy budgets; of directors who were interested only in maintaining a shooting schedule, and of writers who hoard their best thoughts for the novels they're planning.

In this happy season, even the journalists of the electronic media are filled with euphoria. (TV's reporters aren't really more emotional than TV's actors, singers or comedians. The journalists happen to work with words and, thus, are more capable of articulating their gripes with greater force.

Network reporters are even more happy about this election year than usual. Each is assured of full employment and since broadcasting insists on an insane payments schedule that is geared to the number of appearances a reporter makes on TV, political activity can lead to the ownership of a new boat or, at worst, to cleaning up debts piled up in non-election years.

ABC-TV has made this season even more euphoric. ABC News changed the game when, after 18 years of three network head-to-head competition at nominating conventions, it decided some new rules were in order. ABC-TV declined to compete in the usual terms, simply by declaring that it would have nightly summary of the activities, at a convention.

This makes the competition between CBS News and NBC News even more intense with a resultant heavier commitment by each to men, money and management.

Many newsmen concede that ABC-TV is going to pick up many ratings points during convention days, but none will admit that regular nighttime programs are going to win more of the public's attention than the reality drama of a party's choosing a presidential candidate.

Even broadcasting's lobbyists, who have had a busy spring, are pleased with the heightened political activity of this season. Some of congress's most active investigations of

Greg Morris: More Than a 'Negro Part'

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Greg Morris was fortunate to come along in what he terms the age of realization. It wasn't as easy for Sidney Poitier, James Edwards, Harry Belafonte and other Negro actors who preceded him.

Until two or three years ago, Negroes found little work in films and television except as: 1. a singer or dancer; or, 2. as the victim of racial prejudice in problem dramas.

That has been changed with the emergency of Poitier as a box-office star of films in which his race is incidental and with the casting of Negroes as co-stars in television series. In the CBS series, "Mission Impossible," Greg Morris plays operative Barney Collier with little if any reference to race.

"I don't like to be called a 'Negro actor,'" he remarked. "I am proud of being a man, an actor, and a Negro, but when I am referred to as a 'Negro actor,' that immediately places the connotation that I can only play Negro parts."

"But Barney Collier isn't a 'Negro part.' The next actor who was up for consideration for the role happened to be a blue-eyed Scandinavian. Of the 40 actors who were considered for Barney, only three or four were Negro.

"That's healthy. I think films and television have entered the age of realization, when producers realize that Negroes can play doctors, lawyers, dentists —yes, and villains, too. I've done them all.

"Of the 50-55 roles I've played in television and movies, most of them didn't concern the color of my skin. The most notable exception was a 'Ben Casey' in which I played a black nationalist who hated both Vince Edwards for being white and Sammy Davis for playing along with the whites. That's all right, too; such viewpoints should be aired so that people can try to understand them."

Greg Morris had an unsettled childhood, being the son of a broken family. He was born in Cleveland and graduated from high school there. After two years in the Army, mostly in West Germany, he went to Ohio State and the University of Iowa, hoping to develop his basketball skill to become a player for the Boston Celtics.

A theater arts course intervened. Married and with one child—he now has three—Morris left college in his third year to support his family. He landed in Seattle and worked as a waiter in the Hotel Olympia while trying to develop his acting in the daytime. He played the Poitier role in a little-theater version of "A Raisin in the Sun," then repeated the role in Long Beach, Calif., where a Hollywood agent saw him.

A local theater presentation of "Purlie Victorious" was the turning point for Morris. It was seen by Carl Reiner, who cast him for the memorable "Dick Van Dyke Show" in which Dick feared his baby had been switched with another in the hospital; it turned out the other parents were a Negro couple. The Director of the show was John Rich, who cast Morris in his first movie, "The New Interns."

"Mission Impossible" brought Morris to prominence, and the rewards are plenty. He has recorded an album for Dot and is considering offers for commercials. He had to turn down a costarring role in a Rosalind Russell movie because of the series schedule; other film deals are in the works. Well-built, clean-featured and with dramatic intensity, he appears to have an unlimited career as an actor.

The only limits, he feels, will be those imposed by producers, and he believes that more enlightenment is needed.

"Much more remains to be done in the portrayal of Negroes," he argued. "There is a great necessity for Negro children to have black heroes on the screen. My son must see black heroes in order to have someone to look up to. And it is just as important for white children to know that there are black heroes.

"Black villains are necessary, too. Often we are exposed to statistics showing the large number of Negro criminals in this country. If a Negro child is aware of this and sees only blacks portrayed as being pure and wholesome, then he knows there is a lie somewhere."

The recent portrayals of Sidney Poitier have drawn scorn from both white and Negro critics who claim that he plays a black superman who bears little resemblance to the average Negro.

"Some of the indictments against Sidney are just plain silly," said Morris. "People claim that the characters he plays are too good to be true and that he is trying to get away from being a negro. Hell, no, he isn't doing that."

"Does Pat O'Brien always have to play a priest Does Anthony Quinn have to be typed as a savage? Should Henry Fonda, who played in some great Westerns, be criticized because he appears in well-dressed roles? Of course not. Nor does Sidney always have to portray Negro problems. He is serving a good radio and TV, have been forced to concentrate attention on personal re-election and on working for the national party. Congress, as a result, is rather quiet.

The happy season, unhappily never lasts very long in television.

"I DIDN'T KNOW THAT"

CBS News begins its seven part series, "Of Black America" on Tuesday with an episode called, "Black History: Lost, Stolen or Strayed." George Foster will be the anchorman for the series with Bill Cosby as the narrator for the premiere telecast.

Associate producer Wardell Gaynor, quite properly, points out: "Many history books written by whites have ignored or distorted the Negro American's contributions to this country. Many black school children don't even know they have this heritage."

The seven telecasts, he adds, "will show some of that heritage, highlighting significant Negro contributions that have been overlooked."

"I'll be satisfied," he concludes, "if after the broadcast the audience says, simply, 'Gee, I didn't know that.' They may begin to question ideas that had been based on faulty assumptions."
