The Red Cross Bloodmobile collected 118 pints of blood during its visit Friday at Concord Lutheran Church. Of the 150 appointments made in advance, only 88 were kept. There were 46 walk-in donors. The next bloodmobile visit will be Nov. 26 in the conference rooms at Manchester Memorial Hospital from 11:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Making of a Loophole

WASHINGTON (UPI) — All schoolchildren know that Washington is the place where the nation's laws are made. What the civics books don't tell them is that it also is a loophole manufacturing center of the United States. Recently, President Ford signed a new law that, among other things, strictly limits campaign contributions by individuals and by organizations. Before, as they say, the ink on the President's signature was dry, the loophole industry most surely was gearing up to meet the new challenge.

Candidates For Probate Court

William E. Fitzgerald is the incumbent Democrat in the post of Manchester judge of probate. Elected two years ago to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of John Wallcut, he is seeking re-election to a four-year term.

Town Director Hillary J. Gallagher is the Republican candidate for Manchester judge of probate. He was the 1972 Republican candidate for 13th District state representative, losing by 274 votes to Democrat Francis Mahoney.

Dr. Brothers on Acting

By FRANK S. SWERTLOW
NEW YORK (UPI) — The desire to act begins at birth, says Dr. Joyce Brothers, especially if you are born after the first child.
 "Most actors are not the first born child," said Dr. Brothers. "A first born has his own identity, a responsibility and a clear picture of his place in the world."
 "When you are the first born everyone loves you. If you are the second born, two people love you, and one hates you, the first child. This is the way the world is—people will love you and hate you. So, later children are tougher, they have more reality, but they don't have a clear identity, and they have to seek adulation, approval. This leads to acting."
 Dr. Brothers, who is a psychologist, will be making her acting debut Friday night in an episode of NBC's "Police Woman."
 "Actors admit that they are more comfortable when they come to a role," she said. "Ingrid Bergman says she can do many things on a stage that she can't do in life. She hates to walk in on big parties. But if she is playing a part, she can do it. Helen Hayes gets sick to her stomach before a show. But on stage she is comfortable. If actors can be somebody else, they are usually better off. Actors have a higher average of emotional difficulty than others."

 Nevertheless, Dr. Brothers isn't going to act. "When I think of acting, I usually think of projecting," she said. "But all I did was talk. It was a conversation and only afterwards did I realize what I did. We did it in one take, too."
 Was she nervous?
 "Oh, not at all," she said. "I mean the worst thing they could have done was say I was really bad, and then got another actor. You can make life a lot easier if you think about the worst that can happen. The worst that can happen is the worst that can happen, everything else is a plus."

On Friday night's performance going to signal a new career for the syndicated columnist and media personality. "Hardly," she said, "I was a first child and I never wanted to act. Besides, I'm no spring chicken."
 In her guest spot role, Dr. Brothers plays Esther Howell, a criminologist, who advises police woman Angie Dickinson about prison life before she becomes an undercover agent.
 "I'm really pleased about the role of the police woman in this show," she said. "I think it dispels the belief that women can't handle their share of the job."
 There have been studies about this, and it has been shown that in critical situations, women keep their heads better than a man. And very often their very presence dissuades violence. Criminals are usually more aggressive toward policemen, but they seem to be less so with women. They don't feel there is a challenge."

Electrician Injured At Firearms Plant

ROCKY HILL (UPI) — An electrician working on a transformer at Colt Firearms suffered second and third degree burns over 25 percent of his body when the transformer blew up in a shower of sparks.
 Diego Mozzanica, 50, of Bloomfield was reported in fair condition in Hartford Hospital Tuesday night after the accident at the weapons factory.
 David Eaton, president of Colt Firearms division, said Mozzanica, an electrician employed by Guarantee Service Co. of West Hartford, a subcontractor, was working on the transformer when it apparently shorted out just before 3 p.m. A Colt employee was slightly burned by flying sparks and another was apparently over-entranced by the fire.

G&S Workshop Chooses 'Pirates of Penzance'

The Manchester Gilbert & Sullivan Workshop has chosen "Pirates of Penzance" for its 28th production this year. Directing the Gilbert and Sullivan dramatic production will be Sarah Katter of Manchester. William Tyler of Hebron will be musical director and conductor.

Open auditions for the five female and five male leads will be Monday at 7:30 p.m. and Wednesday, Nov. 6, at 8 p.m. in Cooper Hall of South United Methodist Church. Those interested in auditioning are reminded to bring music of their own choice. All singers are welcome to try out. New people wishing to join the chorus should also come to the tryouts for voice placement purposes. People planning for tryouts are asked to use the church's rear entrance off the driveway. "Pirates of Penzance" will be presented March 7 and 8 at East Catholic High School auditorium. Rehearsals will begin Jan. 2 and will be held every Monday and Thursday evening.

Tiger, Tiger
 MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. (UPI) — A prankster or would-be thief who cut open a display cage at the Michigan City Zoo early this week and freed one of its occupants may have gotten more than he bargained for—a tiger by the tail.
 Officers found that someone had used bolt cutters to cut the padlock on the outdoor cage, but the young tiger inside, weighing at least 50 pounds and valued at more than $700, was found tied to another cage nearby.
 Zoo Director Louis Rhodes said the animal, although young, could have put up more of a fight than expected. He said whoever took the animal probably would have been scratched in the struggle.
 The tiger, apparently unharmed by the episode, was returned to the display.

Network Provides Temporary Homes

By MALCOLM BARLOW
 Network is 16 families in town which stand ready to open their doors for a few hours or a few days to boys and girls temporarily without a home.
 The idea for it came from joint meetings of members of town social agencies two years ago. Police, school leaders, social workers and others said they often had young people on their hands with no place to go other than the street or a jail cell.
 The homeless state usually was easily solved given a little time.
 The program was set up quietly and has worked quietly now for nearly two years.
 Mrs. Jennie Talbot, a worker in the Youth Services Center at the Lincoln Center, said the system has been tried 28 times. She admits it isn't perfect.
 Most network families have been pleased with the program although some of their guests have been "light fingers," she admitted. She tries to make sure most of the guests are as good to their hosts as a boy named Bob who stayed recently for over a week at a Network home.

 Bob is a 15-year-old who found himself without a home recently. Police had no more for him than a plastic chair in their lobby to sleep on.
 Bob had not done anything wrong, he just had no place to go.
 With the Network, Mrs. Talbot found him a bed at the home of Phil and Kathy Zapadka on Hackmatack St.
 "We'll miss this one when he goes," said Mrs. Zapadka. Bob has worked around the house and played with her two young boys, one an infant.
 Bob is the fourth young person in one and a half years that has stayed with the Zapadkas. Two teenage girls stayed overnight and another boy stayed for a week.
 The Zapadkas would have had more but for having their se-

Maine Establishes Privacy Guidelines

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — Guidelines to protect the rights and privacy of students have been issued by the state and private school administrators by the Maine Department of Education and Cultural Services.
 A department spokesman said the guidelines "are just that. The school administrators do not have to implement them. We are going to see what happens."
 "The guidelines are intended to help administrators protect the rights and privacy of students and their parents, at the same time maintaining school records as a necessary education tool," according to Betty DeLaughlin, chairman of a committee formed by the department to formulate the guidelines.
 The guidelines were drafted in the wake of state and federal laws giving parents the right to review and inspect their children's records, and restricting the access of others who do not have legitimate education interests in the records, she said.
 The guidelines include:
 —Limit access to records derived from within the school, such as I.Q. scores and personality tests, to school personnel or department officials with legitimate educational interests unless parental permission is received to distribute the information to others.
 —Stop dissemination of out-of-school information, such as psychiatric reports and delinquency reports, to anyone without parental consent, except in the case of judicial orders and subpoenas.
 —Give parents and pupils the right to inspect records and challenge the validity of certain information.

 —Allow parents to refuse to let their children undergo personality testing and provide personal family information beyond that necessary for identification purposes.
 —Eliminate anonymous entries from student records.
 Mrs. DeLaughlin said the guidelines closely follow the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, a federal law which goes into effect in November and will deny federal funds to school districts that violate its provisions.
 The law was passed after alleged misuse nationally of student records which in some cases contained a variety of personal data, she added.

Work to Begin On Highland Spring

Men of the town public works department will begin work this week at the spring at the foot of Case Mountain by Spring St. in order to insure its purity, according to Jay Giles, director of the department.
 The spring water has been popular for over 100 years due to its taste and mineral content. It has been closed off when impurities showed up in tests in recent years.
 Dr. Alice J. Turek, town health director, recently ordered the spring closed until safe from impurities.
 The work crew there this week will dig to about 10 feet all around the present spring. Giles said. Then they will put in a clay which should shield the spring.
 Both the pipe where the spring water comes out and the spring itself which is a short distance from it and farther off the road are on private property not included in the town's purchase of the mountain.
 A roadway has been hacked out of the woods just east of the spring on a town right-of-way leading up to the town property beginning. Work has been done by town crews.
 A four-foot high stock fence has been put up for about 160 feet along the line between town property and the private property of the Case family heirs.
 Families have torn down this fence at many points including all places where former paths cross the fence.
 A six-foot high chain-link fence is planned by the town to run along the new roadway from Spring St. to the end of the stock fence, Giles said.
 "It's been a frustrating experience," Giles said recalling town crew efforts to set up both fences.

Manchester Evening Herald OPINION

Utility Costs Will Rise Despite Election Results

There is no doubt the court ordered delay in utility rate increases will be influencing some votes Nov. 5.

As we have stated before, it is a good pocket-book issue because it means a few extra bucks will stay in the wallet, it challenges the utility "giants" on behalf of the little guy, and slaps down the Public Utilities Commission, which is a part of the current Republican administration.

But our concern is beyond Election Day. The court delay is temporary and depending on the outcome, the extra buck or two less in the current electric bill may vanish quickly after the election.

The main reason we are quite sure this will happen is because of the difficulties facing utilities everywhere. The increase in utility rates in recent years is not limited to Connecticut.

With few exceptions, all the nation's utilities have raised rates and are seeking new rate increases. Higher fuel costs, higher interest rates and higher operation costs, are plaguing the entire industry.

Thus any state, including Connecticut, faces a dilemma in its efforts to regulate utilities.

If rates are kept down by edict, rather than on the basis of sound economics, it places the utilities serving the people in a position where they cannot compete in the money market. If they subsidize lower consumer rates, they are merely switching dollars out of the same pocket.

The problem facing the voter next Tuesday is one of looking beyond the immediate situation. Utility rates must be kept at a minimum consistent with having a service which will meet our needs. In assessing the financial situation of utilities in and out of the state, rate increases are all but inevitable, regardless of what any politician believes or claims.

If the voter will recognize that the current delay is just that and in fact, his rates will be subject to an increase regardless of who is elected, then the issue is not as important as it may now seem.

The fact of the matter is that there will be an electric rate increase for almost all of us sooner or later. The delays won't save us money but merely postpone the time when we pay it. The voter who votes on the basis of avoiding a rate increase is doomed to disappointment.

The voters of Manchester will make the

ANDREW TULLY Maddening Spiral

WASHINGTON — Two official announcements on the same day were enough to send a body looking for sweet success in the hemlock. The Cost of Living rose to a point 12.1 per cent above a year ago, and more than two million retired federal workers, military personnel and their families were declared eligible for a pension increase of at least 6.5 per cent.

It is a maddening spiral. Both pay and pension increases were triggered by the Consumer Price Index under a regulation which provides automatic boosts when living costs rise. The government's deficit spending, which in the past decade has added billions of dollars to the money supply, is a major cause of inflation. So government wages and pensions are increased. So government spending is increased. So more money will find its way into circulation. So prices go up. So government wages and pensions will be increased again. And so on and so forth.

There is no point in arguing the merits of the system. People on fixed pensions are hard hit by inflation. Federal workers also suffer from rising prices. But something can be done about the size of Big Government whose cost is so staggering.

One out of every six individuals in the nation's labor force works for government, federal, state and local. We are spending close to 40 per cent of the Gross National Product to support government at all levels.

That is too much Big Government. It is draining money from the only employer that produces goods and services. That is why the economy has stopped expanding.

In these circumstances, a wise nation would take logical action. It would reduce government's size by reducing the number of bodies in government. But no President since 1945 has done this. It has always been a matter of adding more bodies, not taking them away.

That's a shame. Rockefeller is a man of stamina though. If we were in his shoes, we would be inclined to tell both Congress and maybe even the White House what they could do with the job of vice president.

So the only alternative is cutting Big Government down to size by attrition. That means leaving unfilled all vacancies caused by death, resignation, retirement, or the movement of government employees to private employment. And it means all vacancies. The more the better. Cabinet members don't need all those assistant secretaries. There isn't a department in Washington that couldn't operate just as efficiently with fewer hired hands. They might operate even more efficiently if attrition reduced the federal labor force to a relatively few workers who felt their jobs were meaningful.

Quote an employee of the Interior Department: "I'm strong enough and smart enough to turn out twice the work I do. But I spend most of my day stumbling over people the table of organization says have to be involved in my job." A career State Department officer says: "I've got a staff of 25. I'd give my right arm if they'd let me cut it to an efficient dozen. We're all in one another's way around here."

And the cost of the taxpayers is not just in wages. The government, meaning you and me, also pays 92 per cent of base pay in various fringe benefits — health and hospitalization, retirement funds, paid vacations, sick pay. That 32 per cent must be added to the bill for salaries and wages.

Indeed, most federal employees will pay lower premiums for their health insurance starting in January, although premium rates for almost all plans will be higher. The reason: A change in the health benefits increases the government's (our) contribution from 50 to 60 per cent of total premiums. Postal Service workers consider the opportunity afforded them to contribute about a month's pay to their pension plan. That's about 6 1/2 per cent of total premiums and didn't increase his contribution this year. Fugh. Lead me to the bennet.

There are many improvements desperately needed in our town owned water system. Should we make improvements on the water system we have or should we project into the future to future town expansion?

Manufacturers who have registered trademarks are getting a bit sensitive these days when their products aren't capitalized.

At The Herald we received a complimentary Hula Hoop and a Frisbee because we neglected to capitalize either product in print. Both products came all the way from California so the company must possess an excellent newspaper clipping service.

The gifts brought this comment from one of our staff members: Perhaps we should run a story about J.B. Scotch and forget to capitalize the brand of Scotch.

The trademark that is perhaps neglected most often is Coke, referring to Coca Cola. Publicity representatives of clubs and organizations should keep that in mind when sending us information about a meeting or an event when Coke was served.

No, we haven't received any free Coke.

We received a pleasant letter the other day from one politician. We opened the envelope and inside was a check for $500, completely blank.

Is it possible that there is one politician that has nothing to say at this stage of the campaign?

We are certain you have received the word previously but we aren't publishing any letters to the Open Forum regarding the Nov. 5 election after today. So save your time, paper and postage. They won't be published.

We wish to avoid any last-minute issues in which candidates might not have enough time to reply. The campaign has been going on for some time so there is no need for an influx of letters as the election approaches.

One of the most disturbing things about this business is that a lot of the public think anything can be accomplished in a day or two.

As an example, people will come into the office on Tuesday morning with a story about a meeting that evening. Or we will get a letter for the Open Forum telling about an event that is a day or two away.

Adding to the problem is that some of the material comes in hand written and therefore has to be typed before it can be processed so there is an additional delay.

It's all a matter of planning. We would certainly appreciate it if people bringing or sending us stories about meetings or writing letters to the Open Forum could give us as much lead time as possible.

In the newspaper business we have had three staff sessions regarding coverage of the Nov. 5 election and the final one was Oct. 25.

Sources inside Washington report the White House is compiling a new list of vice presidential possibilities just in case Congress refuses to confirm Nelson Rockefeller.

The White House is apparently preparing for the worst. That's a shame. Rockefeller is a man of stamina though. If we were in his shoes, we would be inclined to tell both Congress and maybe even the White House what they could do with the job of vice president.

Golden Opportunity Supports Irish Concerned

To the editor: The voters of our state who are worried about the future economic welfare of Connecticut and the ominous threat of a state income tax have a golden opportunity to help themselves on Election Day, Nov. 5. They had better vote and elect only capable, responsible, unbossed candidates that to be sorry for the next four to six years.

For example, State Comptroller Nathan Agostinelli has given us all a superb performance since his first day in office back in January 1971. He is a strong, willing, live wire kind of public official who has a wealth of experience and background in the financial affairs of this state.

I call upon the voters to cast their ballots for Nathan Agostinelli for lieutenant governor Nov. 5. He will make an excellent lieutenant governor because of his great capacity to lead and his desire to render top flight service to all the people of this state. What a great team mate he will be to gubernatorial candidate Robert Steele and U.S. senatorial candidate James H. Brannen.

These young, wide-awake candidates are committed to a sensible platform of balanced budgets without resorting to any ruinous individual state income tax. They are perfectly satisfied to let the people of Connecticut do as they please.

What a contrast with their opponents whose party has produced a shameful record of repeated deficits and was voted out of office four years ago, leaving a trail of more than $240 million of red ink. Let us not allow the Bailey machine candidates with their reckless spending, political whealing and dealing, and those prone to do it to us again.

Your vote for Robert Steele for governor; Nathan Agostinelli for lieutenant governor; and James H. Brannen for U.S. senator will bring about government of the people by the people, and for the people of our state.

Yours sincerely, Frank L. Lupin 21 Sussex St. Manchester

I wish I were able to vote for Wally Irish Jr. Richard E. Jackson 69 Oak St. Manchester

Fed Cummings has served the people of Manchester well for over 20 years and deserves your support for the State Legislature. We are living in an age where special interests control our economy and are a major contributor to the inflation spiral. If oil companies, the meat packers, the grain dealers, the millinaires who pay no taxes to mention a few, are to be controlled, we have to have legislators at all levels of government who understand the problem and know how to deal with it. I believe Fed Cummings is such a candidate.

Yours sincerely, James P. Cooper 188 Ferguson Rd. Manchester

Remember Nate To the editor: I have served as Nate Agostinelli's deputy for four years. I can tell you of the many acts which Nate performed for the people of Manchester, whether it was jobs, summer work for college students, special license plates or other assists with state agencies. Nate never asked if the person who made the request was Republican, Democrat or unaffiliated.

In addition, Nate worked very hard for all of the people of Manchester to bring added benefits to the town. These benefits included such things as grants for the elderly, road improvements, and many others.

I hope that all of the people of Manchester will remember Nate on Election Day and vote for him. William J. Diana 188 Kennedy Rd. Manchester

Vote Odegrad To the editor: Honest, hard-working, a man of conviction who takes a stand. He is a full-time senator who has never abstained from voting. During the past four years, Dave Odegrad has missed only one legislative session and then because one of his children had to be taken to the hospital. His home telephone line is always open. Please vote for Dave Odegrad for state senator and re-elect him to the office he has served so well. Vivian F. Ferguson, Director, Town of Manchester 71 Forest St.

Gas Guzzlers DALLAS (UPI) — An economist advocate of free enterprise says an American who goes out and buys a gas guzzling automobile has nothing to be defensive about. "If we let the guy pay the market price for that and if he chooses to do it, that is his right as a consumer," said Dr. W. Phillip Gramm, professor of economics at Texas A&M University. Gramm said the higher present market prices for gasoline are what will in a few years relieve the country of dependence on the Arab nations and, in fact, make gas prices in this country go "down."

Chinese Hoping Silk May Solve America's Petroleum Crisis

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Chinese hope Americans will help solve the nation's oil problem by again turning to silk.

Made by the silkworm from mulberry leaves, silk is a renewable source of fiber like cotton. Nylon and the polyester fabrics, which have replaced silk in the United States in the past 35 years are derived from petroleum.

Charles Abrams, chairman of China Trade Corp., said he has received a consignment of 60 bolts of fine silk from China.

The silk will be widely distributed in textile circles. Abrams' company, in association with Bertram Turks, a textile exporter, will choose a designer to make up some garments for both women and men to exploit the best qualities of the fabrics.

Before nylon, American women by choice wore silk stockings and lingerie and silk dresses and blouses. Silk was a luxury product but reasonably priced so many ordinary folk could wear it on occasion. Men wore silk socks, pajamas, shirts and neckties. Silk sheets, pillowcases and bedspreads were much in demand.

Silk came from China and Japan. Its harvesting and manufacture were too labor intensive for Western economies. Even in Japan, there was constant complaint that silk mill labor was slave labor.

The Sino-Japanese war of the 1930s wrecked China's silk industry and World War II destroyed Japan's silk exports to the West, which once were huge.

"Today China is rebuilding her silk industry and has achieved some technological breakthroughs," Abrams said. "The industry is labor intensive but less so than in the past." Abrams said the most remarkable breakthrough is that garments made of Chinese woven silks now are washable. In the past woven silks had to be dry cleaned; only the knitted hosiery and lingerie were washable. When Abrams washed a blouse made of Chinese silk for New York garment people recently, they were astonished.

Abrams said he is confident Americans will welcome back Chinese silk. "It will cost more than nylon or polyester fabrics but it will have advantages in feel and luster," he said. "It won't have to be mixed with cotton to make it more washable as the synthetic fabrics must be, and it is capable of a great diversity of beautiful weaves and textures."

Silk was used for making parachutes in World War I.

The index measures the progress of eight sectors of the American economy ranging from unemployment to stock market prices, dropped 2.5 per cent from August to September. It was the sharpest monthly plunge since 2.9 per cent in June, 1961.

The September index showed that unemployment increased, manufacturers' orders for appliances and other durable goods declined, stock prices and building permits fell and the prices for industrial materials were lower.

In addition, manufacturers' prices for new equipment which could not be delivered and the ratio of prices to labor costs increased.

For the past 18 months, the indicators have not been reliable because of inflation distortion. But the depth of the September decline more than offsets any distortion from inflation, a department economist said.

He said the September decline was largely due to the falling stock market in September but the market recovered in October.

But a department economist said the "general decline in indicators suggests that there is an overwhelming indication that further declines in economic activity are ahead."

The September decline of 2.5 per cent followed an August drop of 1.6 per cent.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Commerce Department said Tuesday the index of leading economic indicators suffered its worst plunge in 23 years last month. The index seems to be delivering a message, a signal that bad times are ahead, a department economist said. Supports Grasso To the editor: Issues that concern people have always been Ella Grasso's issues during her entire political career. She has been an ardent advocate of consumer protection, veterans' benefits, education, housing, employment, social security, transportation, environmental resources protection just to name a few. In this year of Watergate, and ultimate political scandals, it is refreshing to have someone who seeks the highest office in our state who cares about people. Ella Grasso, when she is elected, will work for open government, she will work to give local governments direct assistance to lessen the already too heavy property tax (for most of us). She will establish a closer relationship between municipal governments and the office of the Governor, and by so doing will be aware of the special problems of each city and town, and will work to help with some of the most needed solutions. It is time for us to elect someone with the courage and concern for all of us. It is the time to elect Ella Grasso for governor of the State of Connecticut. Richard LaPointe 55 Wadsworth St. Manchester.

Supports Houley To the editor: Robert Houley, candidate for Senate from the 35th District, is my kind of man who we, the ordinary working people, need to represent us in the State Legislature. My kind of man is one who is honest, intelligent, hard working, a self-starter, and one who will look after the interests of his constituents. Robert Houley established a good reputation and record during his two terms in the Senate from 1968 to 1972 and was known as a man who did his homework. In other words, Bob got all of his facts ahead of time and then acted accordingly. Bob Houley is the kind of man we all need more of in politics. If all of the politicians were of Bob's caliber, we would have good, responsive government. I wholeheartedly endorse and support Bob Houley for senator, again, for he truly cares and he can be trusted. John Burakas Jr. Chairman, Toland Board of Selectmen

Re-Elect FitzGerald Dear sir: For many years Manchester was extraordinarily fortunate in having Judge Wallett serve as probate judge. Manchester political parties and voters recognized the town's good fortune with the result that only rarely was Judge Wallett proposed for Re-election. Attorney William E. FitzGerald, who was elected probate judge upon Judge Wallett's retirement, has maintained the fine tradition of full time professional competence coupled with genuine concern for the human dimension of the office. At a time when politics and politicians are suspect Judge FitzGerald stands tall as a gentleman in the old fashioned meaning of that word. I am a long time resident of Manchester, a lawyer who has practiced for almost 25 years in a variety of probate courts in Connecticut and New York and a registered Real Estate Broker. I want to preserve our tradition of excellence in our probate court. My family and friends will join me in voting for Judge FitzGerald. I respectfully urge all thoughtful Manchester voters of both parties to continue the opportunity afforded them and vote to re-elect Judge FitzGerald. Donald P. Richter 48 Boulder Rd. Manchester

Japanese, Finnish Girls Students at Tolland High

Vivian Kennesson
Correspondent
875-4704

The senior class of Tolland High School this year includes students from Japan and Finland.

Participating in the "Youth for Understanding" program are Mariko Kagaya from Japan and Tina Tuominen from Karhuna, Finland.

Mariko, 18 years old, is making her home with the program's area representative, Mrs. Glen Bonderman of Columbine Rd.

Although Mariko leaves her mother and two younger brothers in northern Japan, she has been attending school in Tokyo. While in Tolland her daily routine includes Mr. and Mrs. Bonderman and their four teen-age daughters, Sandra, Susan, Valerie and Lynn.

Mariko has studied English for five years in Tokyo. At Tolland High School she is studying typing, French, oral communications, Spanish, American literature, and United States history.

Her interests run from playing the piano, which she has studied for eight years, to knitting. She would like to play tennis and is looking forward to ice skating outdoors. In Tokyo she has skated, but only in indoor rinks.

Mariko's favorite American food is hamburgers, but she notes most popular American food is available in Tokyo. Although rural Tolland is very different for Mariko, she says her high school classmates are eager to help her adjust, often asking a teacher to "slow down" if it appears she is having difficulty following a lecture.

Tina is making her "home" with Mr. and Mrs. Glen Pfister and her older sister, Tina Marie, who lives on Stage Coach Rd., while she leaves her parents and younger sister in Finland.

She thought she was prepared for America from pictures and descriptions supplied by an American exchange student from California who spent last year with her Tuominens.

Mariko Kagaya, from Japan, and Tina Tuominen, from Finland, chat on the porch of the Glen Bonderman home in Tolland. The Bondermans are Mariko's hosts while she is a student in town. Miss Tuominen is the guest of the Glen Pfister family. (Herald photo by Kennesson)

However, she was surprised at how green everything actually was upon her arrival in August. Tina is an experienced Girl Scout and has been asked to help with a troop in Tolland. Her other interests include skiing and other outdoor activities, cooking and baking.

Tina studied English for six years at Tolland High School where she is studying art, physics, English literature, math, and problems of democracy. Tina likes our hamburgers but her enthusiasm over ice cream is causing her concern. She has been so intent on trying all favors, she finds she must exercise more to keep from gaining weight.

Tina finds people friendly in town and has brought slides and pictures of her homeland to share with new friends. Mrs. Bonderman says most host families are needed, either for a six-month program beginning in January or for next year. Any high school in the area is eligible to take a student and all that has to be done is to apply, she says.

Hi everybody! It's the middle of the week, and time for another Senior Center quickie. The important news right now is that all you folks going on the Big Trip Monday should be at the center no later than four o'clock so all the luggage can be put on the buses.

The buses will be here shortly before four for your convenience. By now, you should have received your brochure with all the latest details. If by chance you haven't, then call our office, and we'll give you a number to call to get the information. If you know of someone that has already received theirs, at least get the information from them regarding the change of departure.

Let's see, things at the center start with Friday, and after a fairly nice turnout for our kitchen social games, and our beginner's ceramic class in the morning, the action moved upstairs where we had 14 tables for our setback games.

The lucky winners were: Clara Hennigway, 136; Ber-nadette Scholz, 139; Annie Johnston, 134; Peter Frey, 131; John Gally, 130; Armand DeRooberts, 129; Paul Schuetz, 128; Helen Gavello, 124; Mary Nacowski, 122; Esther Anderson, 117; Hans Fredrickson, 115; Pete Urbarow, 111; Gladys Seierl, 114; Karl White, Cecile Benson, Elmer Swanson, and Frances Fike, 113.

On Monday we started registering for our trip to the horse races at Suffolk Downs, and to my surprise we still have about 20 seats left in the second bus. If we don't fill this bus, we can't take it.

So my thought is, where are all the horse players who have been on my back to get something going? You have the rest of this week, and through Tuesday next to sign up, so there is time. Better make up your mind today, and join us. I sure hate to turn back about 20 people because we couldn't fill that bus.

So you folks on bus number two better start talking your friends into going. You don't have to play the horses to enjoy yourself. Quite a few of our members go just to get away for the day, and enjoy just watching the beautiful horses run, and get a kick out of the action of the people.

By the way, the price for the day is $7, which includes bus fare, a grinder, and ticket to the racetrack. If you don't want the grinder, you don't have to take it, and naturally the cost drops. Everyone must buy their own dinners when we stop on the way home.

Here is a reminder to you folks that we are serving lunches here at the center. Lunches of a homemade soup, tasty sandwich, dessert, and a beverage on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. On Thursday, we serve our hot meal and meals-on-wheels. Meals are served starting at 11:00 and the menu for each week are in Saturday's "News for Senior Citizens" column.

RHS To Permit Smoking

VERNON
The policy of no smoking by students in or outside Rockville High School, was reversed on vote of the Board of Education Monday night.

The proposal to allow smoking in designated areas was presented by Mrs. Elizabeth Steele, chairman of the Public Relations Committee of the board.

It was approved by the full board with the provision that the fire marshal be asked to check the designated areas to make sure they are safe.

Receptacles will be provided in each area and between periods in the morning session, teachers will check the lavatories and in the afternoon session a service aide will check the girls' lavatories and a male teacher the boys' lavatories. Between sessions, the teachers will be assigned to check these areas.

SAVING INTEREST
CHICAGO (UPI) — The U.S. treasury would be more a gainer than a loser should $1,000 in interest on savings accounts at supervised financial institutions be made tax free, according to the U.S. League of Savings Associations.

The organization says such a step would attract $24 billion more in additional deposits to savings and loan associations, thus permitting them to provide additional mortgage loans for residential units, thus generating new jobs in construction and supplier industries and more than enough tax income to offset the savings interest losses.

Referendum Question No. 7 The Purchase of the Manchester Water Company

ED. NOTE
This is the end of a two-part series examining the Town of Manchester's proposed purchase of the Manchester Water Co.

Will townspeople be better off owning the Manchester Water Co. for $2.25 million? Town officials answer with a vigorous "yes" and go on to say...

Future Water Needs
The town's water system serving most of the southern two-thirds of the town is a "safe yield" expected to be reached by 1985. New supplies must be sought now, according to Jay Giles, director of public works. The safe yield of the water company is high enough now not to be reached by use until 2003.

If the two systems were combined, together they might have until 1995 before needing more water sources, he said. Also, company tests show the town may not need to find new supplies until well into the next century.

Water Rates

Water company customers now pay as much as 40 per cent more than town customers.

Company customer rates would have to come down to town rates according to a ruling by town counsel, says Robert Weiss, town manager.

Without the need for seeking new water sources, town rates could remain the same for several more years, Weiss added.

This means that every water customer gets a break in rates on the town purchase, he said. The company has insisted on the town's option to buy running off by Nov. 15. This is so that if the town voters turn down the offer, the company will not be free to seek higher rates right away, Weiss said.

There are 183.6 acres of forest land south of Lydell St. with two small reservoirs and two streams. Town Planner Eric Poter has prepared extensive reports and applications to the state Department of Environmental Protection and the federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation.

The value of the land is estimated at about $11 million. The state might pick up 25 per cent and the federal government another 50 per cent of that cost if the town insures its future as open space land with light recreational use.

One of the letters to Washington reads:
"Most of the site is covered with a tree cover of many varieties but a meadow exists in the vicinity of the reservoirs. The entire area, which for the greater part is a wilderness of field and fauna, will be opened to the public."

"A minimum of development is anticipated but the meadow area will be furnished for picnic purposes."

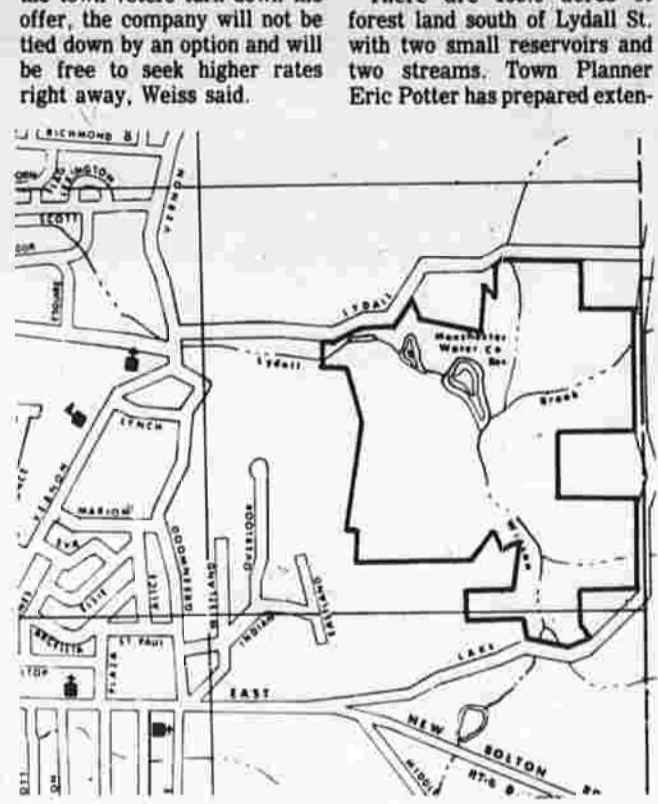

"There are cultivated trout ponds in this area and these will be maintained, stocked, etc., for the benefit of the elderly and infirm."
"The cottages will be renovated and used in conjunction with supervised recreation programs for the elderly and infirm."

"The reservoirs will be maintained and nature trails will be designed."

The town's chances of getting federal funds appear good, according to some town officials. But state funds may not be available now, one said. If the funds all came, it might mean as much as $750,000 more than town customer rates would have to come down to town rates according to a ruling by town counsel, says Robert Weiss, town manager.

Without the need for seeking new water sources, town rates could remain the same for Company customers in the western end of the system need not fear getting the "notorious" water of the town system coming from the Cooper Hill water treatment plant, Giles said.

Even in the ultimate design, Cooper Hill water would not go into that area, Giles said.

Giles noted the Cooper Hill water has been vastly improved in recent months with the completion of the renovations at that plant. But even its reputation might scare company users.

Weist stressed that only the mortgages are certain at this point.

Bipartisan Support
Mayor John Thompson, a Democrat who is not running for any office this fall, said the water company purchase has bipartisan support.

"It's an essential public resource," he said.
Thompson recalled the ice storm in December, 1973 noting that another private water firm, the L&M Co., serving the Redwood Farms area, failed and the town could not help them.

He added that the board has not taken a stand for or against the town's purchase of the company. Not enough has been known about the implications of the purchase for the district and North Enders, he said.

"The residents there might not have experienced the bad time they did if the town owned the system. If they get the rate increase they are now applying for, they'd better be able to supply services in an emergency and not abandon ship."

"With a resource as basic as water, it's in our best interest to have control," he said.
Thompson fully agrees with town officials on two main points favoring the purchase of the company.

First, it will save the town having to search for more water sources for many years. Next, the open space land will be a great asset to the town for many years, he said.

Eighth District
Gordon B. Lassow, a director on the district's board, noted the board recently voted to give up its condemnation rights on the water company in order to allow the Nov. 5 town vote on the company purchase.

Transitional changes aren't easy, particularly for those going from an institutional world to the "real" world. For offenders, bridging the gap successfully depends on two factors - preparation and people. The former becomes a concern of the Department of Correction when the time a person enters the correctional system, the latter relates to the responsibility of citizens in aiding the reintegration process.

During the period of incarceration, inmates are encouraged to participate in previously described programs which assist towards personal growth and change. Within a prescribed period prior to release, inmates (on a selective basis) may take advantage of the Department's community release programs.

These take several forms - work release, educational release, halfway house living, or furlough; the purpose of all is to help the inmate accustom himself to community living once more. Under the community release system, inmates enter the community each day for jobs, vocational or educational programs, returning to the correctional facility at night to work with counselors.

Those assigned to halfway houses are, in addition, able to experience the interpersonal dynamics and day-to-day problem solving situations which serve as a consultant living. Furloughs permit the inmate to spend short periods of time at home periodically, renewing his role as a family member. In effect, all such programs offer the offender the chance to "wet his feet" before he plunges into the mainstream of society.

The benefits of these trial efforts are clearly illustrated by the Department of Correction's work release program. Starting in 1969 with 112 participants, the program now involves nearly 900 inmates who leave correctional facilities each day for productive employment... (as opposed to the old "Bogart scenario" of prisoners sitting idly in their cells planning the next day's riot!) Work releases hold down jobs ranging from optometrist and nurses aides to bookkeepers, data processors, machinists and skilled tradesmen.

Gross earnings for inmate job holders recently surpassed the $1 million mark, a significant figure in terms of their taxpayer dollars. Salaries earned enable inmates to reimburse the state for portions of room and board costs during incarceration, aid them in supporting their families, to pay taxes as you do, to reimburse welfare if their families have been on welfare, save money for other needs, and pay for their own way as much as possible.

The intangible benefits are equally important. "Dignity" responded one inmate when asked what he gained from the program, an all-encompassing word which echoed the phrases of many; what the community gains is a productive person, one better able to meet the expectations of society. What society ultimately gains is a responsible offender who is less likely to return to the correctional system.

Equally successful have been the other community release programs mentioned. A marked number of inmates have pursued degrees or strengthened their work skills through educational/vocational community release programs. At the present time, a group of inmates are winding up an campus summer at the University of New Haven where they've learned business skills toward the total company price of $2.25 million.

The Ultimate Design
Few changes are seen as needed for several years after the purchase, according to Giles and Weiss.

The town would need several years to blend the systems together. Details like using a common billing system, working in the 10 younger employees of the company into the town (the four employees over 65 could not be hired), and making a few water main connections for fire protection may take a long time.

Mortgages
A minor benefit of the company at "a rate low by today's standard" for over $200,000. A second mortgage with higher rates is for $250,000.

The town has the option of paying off the mortgages or continuing the payments.

Weist said decisions on bond interests, length of pay periods and other financial details will have to wait until after the purchase vision approval and the closing date is near. The money market is too unpredictable to say what is best today.

Between the mortgages and state and federal funding, the town may not have to seek much over $1 million in bonds to pay for the company.

Weist stressed that only the mortgages are certain at this point.

Two Old Timers Comment

"There's a lot of sentiment on both sides of the turnpike (E. and W. Middle Tpk.) that the town should own both systems," said Fred E. Thrall, general manager of the Manchester Water Co.

He noted an "element of unfairness" which began in 1933 when the town bought the South End water system from the Cheney Bros. mills. That company, and therefore its customers, stopped paying town taxes.

The higher company rates partly reflect taxes, he said. He also cited the confusion, townspeople often call the wrong office to straighten out their water problems.

Stockholders
Ernest Morse, most recent company president, noted an "overwhelming willingness to sell to the town" on the part of the 86 stockholders of the firm.

There are now 8 per cent dividends and four rate hikes, should be able to continue getting them. The company appears much more solid than anything on Wall St., especially since much of the value is in land and the company has a monopoly.

"The stockholders are being generous," Morse said. "Most of them are townspeople."

Customers of the Town Water Department pay by the cubic foot.
Comparing prices is difficult, the men said. But the average company customer pays about $16 a quarter. The average town customer pays about 30 to 40 per cent less, although the bill may appear higher due to the sewer charge, now 90 per cent of the water bill.

Company customers would pay town rates if the purchase is approved Nov. 5.

Company Employees
There are now 14 people working for the firm. Four of them are over 65 and would be forced to retire if working for the town's water department.

Town officials say all the rest would be asked to remain as town employees.

The old Cheney water systems, the town system, and the company system have had basically the same guiding energies behind them for many years. The company sale will surely spell their departure from the front scene.

Morse helped build some of the Cheney system before World War I. He began working for the company as a maintenance man in 1936. He rose steadily to become president in 1965.

Morse retired in 1972 but is on the board of directors and serves as a consultant. Thrall worked for the Cheneyes on their water system beginning in 1917. He joined the town department in 1940 and became superintendent of the town water and sewer department in 1957. He had been sole man in charge since 1946 but did not have the title.

Thrall retired in 1962 and went to work for the Gravel Engineering firm here. It was as an employee of Griswold's that Thrall helped the study of the company for the town in 1970.

Another retiree active today with the company is Graydon F. Lockwood. He works some weekends part time to keep the system flowing well.

Lockwood, like Thrall, was forced to retire at age 65 as superintendent of the town water and sewer department in 1971.

Thrall and Morse explained how they once had to lower a large water main using hand tools.

"We go a long time back, Ernie."
"You betcha, Fred."

Good Corrections

Release Programs Hinge on Two Factors

Have you ever spent time in the service, or away at college? Remember the feeling of being "out of touch" when you finally returned home? Maybe there was a time when you were unemployed, or perhaps tried to start a new start by uprooting your family and moving to another community. Can you recall the frustrations you met, the adjustments you had to make? Then sympathize for a moment with the men and women who try to rebuild and re-establish their lives after being released from correctional institutions.

Transitional changes aren't easy, particularly for those going from an institutional world to the "real" world. Foresaw Fuel Crisis 50 Years Ago

By KATHLEEN PALM
HARBORSIDE, Maine (UPI) — Scott Nearing saw the fuel crisis 50 years before intercontinental "oil politics" became a way of life. He decided it was just another part of western civilization's decline, so he and Helen learned how to grow food and build stone houses in a rocky Vermont valley.

Nearing had been an economist, an assistant professor at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Finance and later dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Toledo. He was a socialist. He believed western society was rotting, and he said so. He lost his job and couldn't find another one.

Nearing is 91 now, and Helen is 70. They

ON SECOND THOUGHT

By JAN WARREN

Go Easy On The Red!

The other day when my son came home from school with a painting of a green fire engine, I knew something was up. "Let's see," I said to him. "This must be a surrealistic engine. I'll bet it's green because it only goes to grass fires."

John eyed me with disbelief from his position next to the cookie jar. "You're funny, ma."

O.K., I'll bet that fire engine is green-with-envy because the other fire engines are getting all the really good fires. "The fire engine is green," said John, because my art teacher told us to go easy on the red paint. Don't you know there's a shortage of red paint? We may not be able to get any more this year. Big deal!; Obviously John wasn't perturbed by this at all, but at his age you don't see the long reaching effect of things.

Just think about it! What would children's art work be like without red? No more red cheeks, red lips, red burns, red ketchup, red apples or red lollipops. No more red sails in the sunset, or ladies in red. And what color, pray tell me, would you paint the town if you couldn't paint it red?

Most of the current shortages I can adapt to. I can live without paper bags, aluminum foil, sugar...yes, even gas. But a world without red — that would be a dull world indeed! Red is robust, racy and very relevant.

Somewhere there's probably an Organization For The Preservation Of The Color Red. I'd like to join it. In fact, I'd be proud to be a card carrying member.

Today it may be a simple matter of green fire engines. But tomorrow it may be a yellow Santa Claus. How would you like to live with that?

Emblem Club To Honor President

Mrs. Lucille Mahoney of Juneau, Alaska, president of the Supreme Emblem Club of the United States, will be honored Thursday by the Manchester Emblem Club with a dinner at 7:30 p.m. at the Elks Home on Bissell St.

Mrs. Mahoney, who will make a six-day visit to Connecticut, with her first stop in Manchester, will also install officers of the Danbury and Fairfield Emblem Clubs during her visit.

Guests from 19 Emblem Clubs in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island will attend Friday night's dinner. Past supreme presidents planning to attend the event are Mrs. John Shea, Mrs. Philip Garcia, and Mrs. William Nolan.

The guests will also include Mrs. Joan Quinn, supreme third vice president; Mrs. Theodore Ventura, supreme treasurer; George Metcalf, exalted ruler of Manchester Lodge of Elks; Alan Rog, district deputy; and Arthur Rog, special deputy. Mrs. Alfred Ritter is in charge of Friday night's event. She is being assisted by Mrs. Kenneth Hodges, hostess to the supreme president; Mrs. Stanley Baldwin and Mrs. Alfred Ponzicelli, decorations; Mrs. Samuel Vacanto, Mrs. George Meixal, Mrs. Edward Bayliss, dinner tickets; and Mrs. John Carson, guest book. All past presidents of Manchester Emblem Club will serve as hostesses.

Churchwomen To Mark World Community Day

Church Women United of Manchester will celebrate World Community Day Friday noon at Second Congregational Church.

Those planning to attend the observance are asked to bring a sandwich for the noon luncheon. Dessert and beverages will be provided. Baby-sitting will also be provided, but the children should be fed before the meeting.

During the worship service, which begins at 1 p.m., the Rev. Felix Davis, pastor of Second Congregational Church, will lead the devotional theme, "Discover the Aspiring Majority."

Assisting with the service will be Mrs. Windrop Reed, organist; Mrs. Irene Goss, Miss Jean Lee, Mrs. Beverly Fuss, Mrs. Lena Hill, Mrs. Lena Schubert, Mrs. Marjorie Bradley, Mrs. Jean Carroll, and Mrs. Elaine Holcomb. Mrs. Schubert is chairman of the local celebration.

DePrato-White

Deborah Ann White and Daniel Joseph DePrato, both of Manchester, exchanged wedding vows Sept. 21 at South United Methodist Church, Manchester.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward White of 45 Tracy Dr. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Williams of 42 Arnold Rd.

The Rev. Wayne Kendall of South United Methodist Church performed the double-ring ceremony. The church was decorated with white and yellow gladioli.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a candlelight satin gown designed with high sheer neckline and bodice trimmed with lace. Long Bishop sleeves, Empire waist, satin skirt trimmed with lace and seed pearls terminating in a court train trimmed with lace. Her cathedral-length mantilla veil was edged with lace and she carried a bouquet of white daisies and yellow roses with baby's breath.

Miss Susan Adler of Manchester was maid of honor. She wore a pale yellow jersey halter gown with matching hooded long-sleeved jacket and carried yellow daisies and baby's breath.

Bridesmaids were Miss Beth Harrison and Miss Nancy Gilbert, both of Manchester. They wore gowns similar to that worn by the bride, attendant except in sky blue. They carried bouquets of white daisies.

Miss Lynn Williams of Lee's Summit, Mo., the bridegroom's niece, was flower girl. She wore a white gown with baby blue flowers designed with Empire waist, blue sash, and a matching blue ribbon head-piece. She carried a basket of daisies, and white and blue carnations.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have had a nervous stomach since World War II which resulted in a duodenal ulcer. The ulcer perforated and I had a sub-total gastrectomy in 1964. I still have a dumping syndrome.

Two years ago I had a pulmonary attack and was hospitalized for 30 days. The diagnosis was emphysema and chronic bronchitis. This December I developed a swollen stomach and hemorrhoids. The swelling was diagnosed as "aerophagia." It continues, at times more pronounced than usual. I think my lack of breathing, due to emphysema and chronic bronchitis, is made worse by the aerophagia, and I feel close to suffocation, which is terrifying. I believe my nervous condition is increased to the point of extreme hysteria and am fearful, not only for myself but also for anyone I am in contact with. Will you please advise me as to my suspicions and what course to follow?

DEAR READER — Starting from the beginning for our other readers, the dumping syndrome is a complication of surgically removing much of the stomach. Since the normal storage action of the stomach is impossible, large amounts of completely undigested foods are dumped intestine. Foods are normally predigested in the stomach into a liquid or at least semi-solid state. The stomach, by controlling how much food passes into the intestine for absorption, even affects such functions as blood sugar level. It's important in your case because I may make the accumulation of gas in the abdomen more likely and more severe.

Aerophagia means swallowing air. Most of us do it to some extent. When you are nervous it happens more

The Miracle of Karen

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
HAMILTON, Bermuda (UPI) — Her name is Karen Breisky. She is nine, attends regular school, runs, jumps rope, swims and in most instances can do all the things any other 9-year-old can do.

It wasn't always so. Karen was a normal child until the age of two when she developed a rare virus infection of the epiglottis, the lid of the voice box. The infection caused Karen's epiglottis to swell quickly, closing off her windpipe altogether. She had suffocated and her heartbeat had been arrested for how long nobody can say.

Rushed to a Hartford, Conn., hospital, she ultimately resumed breathing through emergency procedures and a tracheotomy, making an opening in her windpipe so she could breathe easily.

But she had suffered massive brain injury when the oxygen supply to her brain was cut off. Karen could no longer talk or see. She could scarcely move. But there were a few signs of consciousness.

Karen's comeback is told simply in a new book, "I Think I Can" (Doubleday) by her father, William. He takes the title from the child's story of the Little Engine.

The Breiskys (wife Barbara, oldest child John, and youngest Gretchen) lived in Thompsonville, Conn., when Karen was stricken. Breisky was editor and publisher of the weekly Thompsonville Press.

But three years ago, the family moved to Bermuda's capital because they had been advised that as part of Karen's rehabilitation, learning to crawl all over again, wet sand was "the best possible medium."

And Bermuda's beaches offered the ideal year-round weather where a child could crawl in light clothing.

Breisky had become manager of the Bermuda News Bureau and told me he did most of the writing about Karen on the commutation ferry from Somerset to Hamilton.

There were several keys to recovery of the brain-damaged child — her own courage, the determination and patience of her parents, the Institutes for the Achievement of Human Potential in Philadelphia, and the thousands of hours volunteers gave to carry out the institute's daily program. This included working on the floor and on "patterning tables" — three persons doing for Karen the leg, arm and head manipulation, approximating the first crawling motion a baby normally makes.

Said Breisky, "Since her brain was damaged in such a way that it was unable to send out sophisticated signals telling her to move her arms and legs, we would send those signals back to the brain by manipulating her limbs, hopefully the healthy cells of the brain would register the activity and establish new pathways for the signals that would direct these (crawling) movements."

The progress was slow — from creep, to crawl, to the first uncertain steps, and especially slow in recovery of sight (exercises, special glasses), but Breisky said that now the playground, equipped for Karen's programming, sits idle much of the time while Karen practices "just being a kid."

Breisky tells those parents with brain-damaged children that starting a rehabilitation program early is paramount — "brain maturation is nearly complete when a child starts school, and the more years of growth the brain has ahead of it after it has been injured, the better."

Of Karen today, the father said, "She's on her way. Not to average but to super-styler," even though she still has trouble with normal use of her left hand — "Lefty," she calls it.

"I'm afraid she may never drive a car," said her father.

Hearing of Karen's determination, I'd bet on still another miracle there one day.

Karen Breisky

Others keep a record of all prescriptions filled for each customer, which helps the pharmacist spot undesirable combinations of medicines.

Before storing medicines, consumers should read the label carefully for special instructions. Some medicines should be placed in the refrigerator. Others should not be placed in the bathroom medicine cabinet. If the label says, "Keep in cool, dry place," then the bathroom will be too warm and steamy.

These and many other hints about the proper use of medicines are in the article, "A Primer on Medicines." To get a single free copy, write your local Consumer Affairs Officer.

FDA Cautions Consumers On Non-prescription Drugs

Do you know what information is always on the labels of non-prescription medicines? Or what you should consider when you select a pharmacy to fill your prescription? Or what special precautions you should take when you store medicines in your home?

These and other questions are discussed in an article recently printed in the official magazine of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, FDA Consumer, is printed 10 times a year. To subscribe, send $5.30 to Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20540.

The article points out that Federal law requires the following information on the labels of non-prescription medicines:

- the name of the product, and the name and address of the manufacturer, packer or distributor
- the active ingredients
- directions for safe use
- cautions or warnings

This information is required for protection of the consumer. But, the article points out, this information is useless unless consumers read the labels carefully before using a medicine.

In selecting a pharmacy, the article says, consumers may be able to save money on prescriptions by shopping comparatively — that is, checking various stores to find the lowest price. But consumers should remember that some pharmacies provide more services than others. For example, some pharmacies deliver prescriptions.

The perm of tomorrow is here today.

If you're into the new, natural look in hair fashions you probably think perms are not for you. Not true! Redken has created a system of perming without free ammonia (and its harsh results!). Formulated for today's hair fashions, the Redken Trichoperm System has protein polypeptides and a low pH (close to your hair's natural pH). The combination of a low pH, no free ammonia and protein polypeptides results in a perm that comes out better, is much more natural looking. If you want your hairstyle to last without the frizzy, me-too look of yesterday's perms, you want the Redken Trichoperm System. Available in a formula specifically suited to your type of hair. Make an appointment for the perm of tomorrow today!

Andover Woman, 72, Fulfills Life Dream

Donna Holland
Correspondent

Mrs. Ann VanDeusen of Andover at age 72 has fulfilled a life-long dream of joining a literary group and successfully writing. In 1973 Mrs. VanDeusen enrolled in The Institute of Children's Literature. In September she was awarded her diploma in recognition of satisfactory completion of the required course of study. In October Mrs. VanDeusen received first prize in the East Central Pomona Grange for her historical scrapbook on Nathan Hale. When her scrapbook entered at the state level she once again received first prize. When you meet Mrs. VanDeusen there is no lack of conversation for she could tell you her mother, grandmother or best friend and she has led such an active life there is no lack in the conversation.

She was born in Pennsylvania and moved to Connecticut at age 5. She has lived in Andover since 1940. She retired in 1967 after teaching in Coventry School system for 19 years. Mrs. VanDeusen, a widow, has a daughter, Mrs. Betty Lou Cardini of Andover, and a son, Charles S. of Petersburg, Fla. She has eight grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren and one granddaughter. She has six sisters and a brother, who though not close geographically are "very close." Mrs. VanDeusen earned her first money from writing at age 12 when she wrote an essay for the Women's Christian Temperance Union of the National Retired Teachers Association. As her husband left a woman's place in the home she stayed home while the children were growing up. After they were grown up she accepted a job as a substitute teacher and remained teaching for 19 years. Mrs. VanDeusen said her philosophy is, "to live so that my world is a little better place to live in because I lived there and to help others in any way I can, making their life and mine one of mutual happiness." Dodd is keeping a book for posterity on the group's activities. Mrs. VanDeusen said another part of her philosophy is that when something happens and you can do something about it, do it and do it well, but when something happens that you can't do anything about, go on to the next minute of your life.

Dodd: Free Postage

Christopher J. Dodd, Democratic candidate in the Second Congressional District, said he plans to introduce legislation which would allow citizens free postage on letters to their congressmen and senators. He said if he is elected Nov. 5 he would hold well-publicized citizen meetings on a regular basis. Concerning the postal proposal, Dodd said, "Representatives and senators are now allowed free postage on letters to their constituents, and I think the constituents should have the same privilege." The citizen meetings, the congressional assistant said, will be held in strategic locations in each district in eastern Connecticut.

Dodd has also promised the chief officials in the Second District's 60 towns that, if elected, he will provide at least one person on his staff to have the sole responsibility to assist them in locating and applying for federal grants for sewers, water, and roads for industrial parks. He also said his office would work closely with the State Department of Commerce to steer potential developers to Eastern Connecticut.

"As I see it, the dedication and help of this area's congressman can go a long way toward helping the district provide balanced programs of long-term economic growth," Dodd said. He said one of the most important things economic development means is in-

Agency Requests More Staff

HARTFORD (UPI) — The state Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities says it wants to hire 12 more investigators next year, but it really needs 46 more to probe all the complaints it receives. In its annual report released Monday, the commission said its 24 investigators have a "staggering workload because complaints have risen 50 percent in the past year. About 70 properly would be needed to properly handle the probes, the report said.

The commission has asked for a $1.1 million fiscal 1976 budget, $100,000 more than its present allocation, with which it plans to hire 12 additional investigators. The commission's report also urged legislative approval of regulations requiring employers found guilty of discrimination to pay up to two years in back pay to workers who have suffered because of the discrimination. Discrimination on the basis of marital status, primarily against women, also should be made illegal, and higher penalties should be enacted for all violators of anti-discrimination laws, the report recommended. Commission Director Arthur Green said Monday he hopes to make a final determination in six weeks on two-year-old complaints of discrimination against minority groups by 77 firms and agencies in the construction field. The complaints were filed in 1972 against four private contractors, seven labor unions, seven contractors' associations, five apprenticeship programs and the state education, labor and public works department and Apprenticeship Council.

Mrs. VanDeusen said another part of her philosophy is that when something happens and you can do something about it, do it and do it well, but when something happens that you can't do anything about, go on to the next minute of your life.

Theft Proof Television Set

For Sale? "I doubt there's anyone who would purchase this television if it was stolen," said John Morianos, owner-operator of Three J's Restaurant in Bolton. Morianos "scratched" stolen from Three J's on the top of the latest console television he put in the restaurant. Why did Morianos do it? "I had two televisions stolen from here in the last seven months," he said. (Herald photo by Holland)

Cape Cod Trip Approved

COLUMBIA

The Board of Education has unanimously approved the Cape Cod ecology trip.

In September the board had turned down the trip. Members were concerned the trip would be discriminatory, as only half the class would be able to go to the Cape since facilities there can only accommodate 32 students and eight chaperones. However, a second trip has been scheduled for the other half of the class for the end of March. The first group has already left.

Bolton Library Under Construction

Construction is visibly under way for the new Bentley Memorial Library in Bolton by the DMC Construction Co. in Glastonbury which was awarded the $271,000 job. Construction is expected to be completed in the spring of 1975. Seen in the background is the present Bentley Memorial Library which, upon completion of the new library, will probably be used for town offices.

THE CANDIDATES ARE SAYING

Dooley Backs Houley

The election of Bob Houley to the State Senate (35th District) will again provide the district with first-rate representation which marked his four years in office, "State Rep. Thomas Dooley (D-56th District) said.

Dooley said, "In 1972 when Bob decided not to seek reelection, Democrats, Republicans and independents alike expressed deep disappointment. He added, "Through the press, by word of mouth, and in correspondence to both Bob and myself, they stated their realization that a rare commodity in political life, a hardworking, honest guy, who was there when they needed him, was leaving the legislative scene."

Dooley said Houley's decision to again seek elective office is the best thing to happen to the region for a long time.

He said, "It signals a return to the time that citizens throughout the district will receive the kind of responsible and responsive voice at the General Assembly to which they are entitled."

Hellier: Favorable Poll

Sam Hellier, Republican candidate for Second District congress, said a telephone poll of some 1,500 voters in four areas of his district, including Vernon, shows him with a 41 per cent favorable rating on his candidacy.

He said a total of 44 per cent declared themselves to be still undecided and 16 per cent of the voters contacted reacted unfavorably to him.

Besides Vernon, the poll was conducted in Norwich, Portland and the Windham area. He said in all areas polled registered Democrats outnumbered Republicans.

School Budget Strained By Special Education

VERNON
The board of education budget could be over-expanded by $25,000 to $30,000, Albert Kerkin, assistant superintendent of schools, told the board Monday night, "because we have to respond to the educational needs of all youngsters."

Kerkin said 12 students are in private placement because of special needs. He said this area of the budget is almost impossible to predict because state agencies can recommend placement of a child, outside the school system, for other reasons other than educational ones.

Kerkin told the board, at the present time six additional placements are anticipated and present placements already exceed the budgeted amount.

Board member Robert Dubeau commented, "A couple of years ago we beefed up our staff to care for the special educational needs and we were told not to make special placements."

He added, "Now the state is saying we're going to shift these students around and you have to pay the bill."

Kerkin explained that the school system is covering the educational needs of these students but now placement is being requested for other than educational problems.

Kerkin said he has been told that in "future" planning the state will pay for these special placements but meanwhile the Board of Education has to foot the bills.

He said there are certain types of problems that school system is geared to handle. He said there are certain types of handicaps where there might be only one child involved and the town could not afford to hire enough staff to handle them.

"I don't see how we could ever totally avoid outside placements," Kerkin commented.

Dubeau, repeating his concern about the beefed up staff, called for an executive session to discuss particular cases and Kerkin agreed.

School To Hold Costume Parade

ANDOVER
Donna Holland
Correspondent

The Andover Elementary School traditional costume parade will be held Thursday at 1:15 p.m. at the school.

The entire community is invited to attend and anyone may come dressed in costume.

Hot chocolate and cake will be served immediately following the parade in all purpose room.

The tradition began in 1952 when the staff met and decided it would be fun for the children to have a costume parade.

Prior to 1952 all townspeople who wanted would meet at the little red schoolhouse dressed in costumes and parade in the evening. There would be parties in different places in town for different age groups.

The Andover Lake Owner's Association will sponsor a Halloween Party Thursday from 6:30 until 8:30 p.m. at the town hall.

All children of elementary school age are invited.

There will be games, prizes, apple cider and cupcakes.

Live Christmas Tree Use Rules Studied

MERIDEN (UPI) — State Police Commissioner Cleveland B. Fuesenich, who is also the state fire marshal, will decide within two weeks on the use of live Christmas trees in Connecticut.

Fuesenich presided over a private meeting Tuesday where about 10 fire officials from various communities opposed a proposed regulation permitting live trees in public buildings and apartment houses under certain conditions.

However, members of the Connecticut Christmas Tree Growers' association, showed up in force to support the regulations they helped State Police draw up.

One and two family dwellings are excluded from the regulations.

Opponents at the meeting in the State Police Academy said Fuesenich's proposals to conditionally permit live trees in apartments and public places would be unenforceable and normal carelessness by the public would make the live trees a continuing hazard.

The growers said a live Christmas tree would be adequately safe and not support combustion as long as it is purchased fresh and kept moist during the display period.

The regulations would require certification that all trees sold in the state were fresh and moist. Display in public places would be limited to 10 days with two gallons of water required around the base. In addition to other safety precautions, trees would be limited to 21 days display in apartments, with one gallon of water around the base.

Fuesenich enacted similar regulations last year but they were not enforced because of the public uproar that it caused.

Hicks School Polls

On Tuesday, the polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. in the Hicks School gymnasium.

In addition to the constitutional amendment questions, residents will be asked to vote for the approval or disapproval of a $17,000 bond for the construction of a fire house. A yes vote is for approval and a no vote is for disapproval.

The town clerk and Board of Admision of Electors will be in session Monday from 3 to 5 p.m. to examine the qualifications of persons whose citizenship and age have been reached since Oct. 13. Those found qualified will be made voters.

There are 4,290 registered voters eligible to vote, to date. Registered Democrats number 1,261; Republicans, 1,187, and unaffiliated voters, 1,746.

Local Jaycees Endorse Storm Sewer, Water Plans

Manchester Jaycees have endorsed referendum Question 6, a $2 million program for townwide storm sewer improvements; and Question 7, purchase of the Manchester Water Co. for $2.25 million. The endorsements follow presentation of the proposals by Jay Giles, director of public works.

Earlier this year, the Jaycees had endorsed Question 5, a $14 million Regional Occupational Training Center at Manchester Community College Campus, on 12 acres deeded to the town for that purpose.

It was the consensus of the Manchester Water Co. will not only preserve many acres of valuable watershed property and possible future well-sites, but also will increase the adequacy of water supply to Manchester by approximately 10 years — to 1985.

Endorsement of the $2 million for storm drainage was on the basis, "This inadequacy has been pointed out in summer storms in recent years — the washout of both the Olcott St. and Woodbridge St. bridges and repeated flooding at the rear of the Parkade."

"The proposed bond issue would allow for enlarging the system in the areas throughout town where trouble has or could easily occur, and to provide for controlled drainage in areas where it is now needed and does not exist."

Town Man Given Education Award

Howard W. Gold of Manchester was recognized recently as the 1974 Outstanding Connecticut Business Educator of the year.

The award was made last Friday at the Connecticut Business Educators' Association conference at Lebanon, where 200 business educators attended.

Gold is chairman of business education in the West Hartford school system.

The award honors an outstanding business educator and indicates appreciation of service. Qualifications for the award are leadership, improvement of school-community relations, consideration for student and staff, and professional contributions.

Gold serves on the state advisory committee for business education, and he has had articles published in professional journals on the state and national level.

He is principal of the high school division of the West Hartford summer school.

He also serves as president of the Manchester Lions Club.

He lives with his wife and four daughters at 59 Barry Rd.

Religious Harassment Is Charged

PLAINVILLE (UPI) — A Jehovah's Witnesses couple has filed law suits totaling $2 million on behalf of their son against the local school board and teachers on grounds of religious harassment and negligence.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Campochiare charged in the suits disclosed Tuesday their son, Edward, 8, has a learning disability which school officials failed to diagnose, blaming the "problem" instead on his religious training.

A Superior Court suit seeks $500,000 in damages against the Plainville Board of Education, four teachers at the Toffin School and its principal. The federal suit seeks $1.5 million in damages.

The Superior Court suit also asked for an injunction requiring defendants to test the boy for learning problems, neurological impairment, and provide special education.

Ali Proves Point After Long 7½ Year Wait That He's the World's Heavyweight Champ

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — It took Muhammad Ali 7½ years before he could prove his point.

But prove it he did Wednesday morning, and dramatically, when he knocked out titleholder George Foreman at 2:58 of the eighth round in this central African nation to become only the second man in history to regain the world heavyweight championship.

Ali earned $5 million for the fight but not even the record purse in the richest fight in history could compare with the satisfaction he got in regaining the title stripped from him in April, 1967, for refusing induction into the Armed Forces.

"I told you all I was the greatest of all time," belted Ali in his dressing room after once again confounding both his critics and the odds-makers who listed the previously unbeaten Foreman a 3-1 favorite.

"Never again say I'll be defeated. Never make me the underdog until I'm 50."

The 21½ pound Ali had every reason to gloat.

Observers said the 32-year-old Ali, seven years older than Foreman, left his best fighting years from 1967-70 in the courts when the only fighting he did was to keep out of jail for refusing military induction.

That seemed the case when Ali, after finally being upheld by the Supreme Court, got his first crack at the crown and lost a 15-round decision to then champion Joe Frazier in March, 1971.

But Ali wasn't finished—he proved that conclusively by giving the seemingly invincible Foreman a boxing lesson before ending class with starting swiftness near the end of the eighth round.

"They told me he was strong," said Ali, referring to Foreman's 40 consecutive victories, 37 of them by knockout, including the last 24 in a row. "Didn't I look stronger than him?"

Not really, but all of Foreman's strength, which was so evident in his stunning two round knockout of Frazier when he gained the title in Jan. 1973, proved useless. The resourceful Ali diverged from his announced pre-fight strategy of "dancing, dancing all night." Instead, Ali conserved his energy in the early hot and muggy morning hours by making good use of the ropes, continually resting against them and catching most of Foreman's punches on his forearms which he always held high to protect his face.

Foreman was so arm weary from the fifth round on that many of his blows were nothing more than ineffectual taps. The beginning of the end for the 220-pound Foreman began when Ali caught him with a right to the chin. That was followed by a left to the head and Foreman was now off balance.

Ali, sensing the kill, followed up with a left to the chin and then a murderous right hand sent Foreman hurtling towards the canvas. Referee Zack Clayton, after checking to see if Ali was in a neutral corner, picked up the count and just reached 10 before Foreman could fully regain his feet.

"The victory, the 45th in 47 fights for Ali, enabled him to join Floyd Patterson as the only heavyweights to regain the crown. Patterson lost it in 1959 when he was knocked out by Ingemar Johansson but reclaimed it by knocking out the Swede in 1960.

What makes Ali's triumph even more remarkable was that it came more than seven years after he was stripped of the title. It also came exactly 14 years after the day after Ali began his professional career.

"I'm the true champion," said Ali only hours before the fight. "There's nothing to keep me in the ring once I get my title back."

All changed his tune after the fight, however, saying he would fight again but only if he was offered $10 million.

A dejected Foreman, with his face puffy around the eyes and sporting a bruise on his forehead, said he never saw the punch that put him down.

"I guess when any fighter is knocked down, he doesn't see the punch," said Foreman. "I think he (Ali) should be respected. He's a true American, a great gentleman and he should be called the champion."

The fight attracted a crowd of 50,000 to the 20th of May Stadium and was shown in some 400 closed circuit outlets in the United States, Canada, Great Britain and West Germany. It was also shown on home television in some 100 countries and the promoters, with each fighter guaranteed $5 million, were hoping for a total gross of between $25-30 million, exceeding the previous high of $20 million from the first Ali-Frazier fight in March, 1971.

Champ Will Defend for $10 Million

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — Muhammad Ali, once again the heavyweight champion of the world, told his delirious supporters Wednesday he would fight again but only if he was offered $10 million.

Before his fight with George Foreman, whom he knocked out at 2:58 of the eighth round to regain the title he never lost in the ring, Ali said the fight, and the $5 million paycheck, would be his last.

But as he savored the fruits of victory, the 32-year-old champion, said, "yes, I'll fight again but only if they pay me $10 million. Otherwise I'll hold the title for six months. They took it away unjustly and now I'm going to hold it for a few months."

All won the title on Feb. 25, 1964, by knocking out Sonny Liston and made nine successful defenses before he was stripped of the crown in April, 1967, when he refused to be inducted into the armed forces.

"They told me he was strong," said Ali, his right eye bloodshot and a slight puffiness around his cheek. "But didn't I look stronger?"

All, who entered the ring a 3-to-1 underdog, turned on his critics and said: "I told you all I was the greatest of all time. Never again say I'll be defeated. Never make me the underdog until I'm 50."

"He was humiliated. I did it. I told you he was nothing but did you listen? I told you he had no skill. He's no fighter."

Asked why he had spent so much time on the ropes, Ali said: "Standing on the ropes is a beautiful thing, especially when you make him take his best shots and he's missing."

Zaire's fight fans gave him a thunderous ovation after he left the ring with great difficulty because of the swarm of humanity which engulfed him seconds after his electrifying knockout victory.

Acknowledging their cheers of "Ali, boom-aye-al!" — "kill him, Ali!" — the new champion raised his right fist aloft and strode purposefully towards his dressing room, growing apprehensive now and then when the idolatrous Zairians nearly threatened to overwhelm him with their adulation.

His brother, Rahman, walked at his side constantly as Ali toured the distance from the ring to the dressing room.

All was asked how he downed Foreman in the eighth.

"You'll have to get the film. I don't know," he said. "I think a left hook, a right hand and a left hook put him down. He was bewildered. Any heavyweight who fights me is bewildered."

After several times scoring Foreman's punching power, Ali did admit at one point "George is a strong fighter. He shook me a couple of times. But I'm just a little too experienced. George hasn't had 10 rounds of fighting in the last eight years and that hurt him."

Greatest Fight Ever Claim of Ali's Fans

NEW YORK (UPI) — Muhammad Ali's fans were dancing outside Madison Square Garden, already calling the fight the greatest ever.

"All boom at aye. All boom at aye." "I don't believe it. He fooled me, he fooled the world. He made Foreman look like a fool."

"All boom at aye. All boom at aye." "You'll have to get the film. I don't know," he said. "I think a left hook, a right hand and a left hook put him down. He was bewildered. Any heavyweight who fights me is bewildered."

Man emammad Ali's stunning left-right, knockout of George Foreman in the eighth round to regain the championship once stripped from him for his religion and politics was so unexpected, so dramatic, the people who wanted him to win but felt he wouldn't were surprised and amazed.

All turned magician two nights before Halloween. He lay against the ropes, absorbing Foreman's power like a steam bending in the wind and after letting Foreman punch himself out, he unleashed a combination of punches like a tent-show performer pulling a chicken from his pocket.

"He played possum, he did," said former champion Gene Tunney, a supporter of Foreman. "Tunney was carefully led away from the crowd which viewed the fight on four giant screens on a closed circuit telecast by a friend who was afraid he'd be knocked over in the thrum. "He's an actor, alright, fooled everyone."

Tunney was not ready to call Ali the greatest ever, as Ali demanded after his victory but Muhammad's people were convinced.

They had watched a 45-minute film of the most talked about fights of all time: the long-count Tunney-Dempsey bout; Max Schmeling's victory by foot over Jack Sharkey; Max Baer's whipping of big, clumsy Primo Carnera; Joe Louis' devastating knockout of Jim Braddock, his kayo of Billy Conn after Conn had stunned him; Rocky Marciano like a fighting stag against Ezzard Charles; Floyd Patterson leap-punching Archie Moore then being belted to the canvas repeatedly by Ingemar Johansson. They saw Patterson become the first heavyweight champion to regain his title by outboxing the bigger Johansson and then watched Sonny Liston drive him seven times to the mat to take the title away.

When they saw young, lean, cocky Cassius Clay rain his quick lists into Liston's face, the crowd erupted in shouts. Foreman's destruction of Frazier drew respectful oohs and aahs.

This was truly a fight crowd, roaring at the sight of torn skin and spilled blood, and the air was thick with cigar smoke and the smell of beer. If there was a Foreman fan in the crowd, he was as silent as the stone-faced 25-year old was just

Due Respect

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — For a man who had lost his world heavyweight title and been knocked out for the first time in his professional career, George Foreman took defeat calmly and gracefully.

"A true champion never complains, never had mouths an opponent," said Foreman in his dressing room. "I think he (Ali) should be respected. He's a true American, a great gentleman and he should be called the champion."

before the fight when the combatants were finally led into the ring. "All boom at aye" cascaded through the room concrete building just as it swept through the stadium in Kinshasa.

When it was all over, the fans, who had just seen all the great bouts of the century, were ranking this match with the best for drama and power.

They were stunned because on the big screens, without the benefit of intelligible sound, Ali seemed to be taking a beating without hurting Foreman much.

"How many of those body punches can Ali take?" asked one man as early as the second round when Ali, so uncharacteristically, stood flat-footed against the ropes while Foreman flailed away.

"All isn't worried about body punches," said another. "But he's not scoring either."

The crowd was cautious, afraid they were going to see their champion, the self-proclaimed but legitimate "People's Champion," crushed by the power of Foreman. Then, every so often, Ali would land a flurry of jabs to the head and the nervous murmurs became quiet cheers.

Baseball Talk With Bob Montgomery

Warren DeMartin, Sports Night Chairman, listens, as Guest Speaker Talks with Earl Yost, Sports Editor, Roger Ather, Manchester Lodge Master, is at right.

Monty and White Spice Sports Night

By Earl Yost

Once again the annual Masonic Sports Night was a success last night with a capacity crowd on hand to hear inside baseball from Bob Montgomery of the Boston Red Sox and Roy White of the New York Yankees.

Montgomery won the oratorical honors in definite Red Sox country with the two guests all in the popular 30-minute question and answer period which followed.

White, realizing that he was in 'enemy' territory, by the response when the pair were introduced by Roger Ather, Manchester Lodge Master at the Masonic Temple, made a host of new admirers with his candid and frank answers.

The Red Sox catcher, who stepped in and did a great job when Carlton Fisk was injured, appeared as much at home behind the mike as working behind the plate in the American League.

One observation which Montgomery made, which had to make many of the fathers in attendance happy, was the conduct of the youngsters in the hall and the manners they exhibited.

Frankly, it was a class night, and when the guests remained after the program to autograph baseballs for all youngsters present—and many adults, too—plus pictures of the two men in the White of the New Year program, this added just that little extra personal touch.

Some of the questions to which we like this: "I was shocked when Elliott Maddox called me and asked if I had heard the news," White said. "Where am I going? I asked, because I have asked several times to be traded. No, it's Murcer, he's going to San Francisco for Bobby Bonds."

White felt the three un-touchables with the Yankees were the M-Men — Bobby Murcer, Thurman Munson and Reggie Smith, but he described Bonds as "one super player."

The addition of Rudy May to the pitching staff and Sandy Alomar, who plugged up the second-base hole, which added defense and offense, were keys in the Yankees late drive which just fell short, plus the fact that Hank Aaron, if obtained by Boston, would not hit that many home runs at Fenway Park. "He hits line drives, not towering fly balls. The Red Sox would probably have to give Kenmore Square to get Aaron," he said.

There was no question who was the fastest pitcher in baseball. White and Montgomery answered simultaneously — Nolan Ryan of California. Monty batted only three times against the fireballer and struck out each time.

Montgomery indicated that Rico Petrocelli may be serious about retiring. Also, it's easier for a catcher to catch left-handed pitchers.

Warren DeMartin served as general chairman. Guests included Dave Wichman of Temple Beth Shalom, Jerry Williams, Knights of Columbus grand knight, Fred Gaal and William Sandberg. The writer served as master of ceremonies.

Cougars Tire in Stretch And Houston Triumphs

CHICAGO (UPI) — Gordie Howe, star of the Houston Aeros, said Tuesday night the Chicago Cougars "seemed to go downhill in the third period," allowing Houston the 4-2 World Hockey Association victory.

"Chicago skated even with us through two periods," Howe said, "then they seemed to go downhill in the third period. I don't know why but I sure enjoyed it."

"The Cougars are basically a darn good club and I was surprised we outshot them in every period. Some of their goals didn't get going tonight but I'm sure they'll be a threat in their division this year. We're glad to take these road victories as often as we can."

Third period play by Larry Lund and Gordon Labossiere gave Houston the win. The Minnesota Fighting Saints 4-3 on Danny Green's goal at 4:22 of overtime.

Green took a pass from center Steve West in the overtime and skated in alone on Mike Curran, beating him with a back-hander from the right side of the net.

The victories raised Houston's record to 3-4 and Michigan's to 2-4.

Amateur Golf Looks Ahead

LA ROMANA, Dominican Republic (UPI) — The folks running the World Amateur Golf championship believe it may be a forerunner for the possible expansion of the U.S. PGA tour to foreign lands.

At least that's what architect Pete Dye thinks could happen once people get a look at the beauty of the Cajascales course he carved here on the edge of the Caribbean Sea.

"You may never see a more beautiful golf course," said Wake Forest's Curtis Strange, the NCAA champion and youngest member of the four-man U.S. team, favored to win the four-day tournament that began today.

Dye, conceding he speaks "with absolutely no modesty," is high on the television potential of his new course, which would help to make a pro tournament a reality.

"TV could come up with some absolutely beautiful visual scenes here — like they get at Pebble Beach," he said.

Two of the seven seaside holes here are being compared to the famed 18th at Pebble Beach, and Dye admits he borrowed liberally from some other famous courses in designing Cajascales.

The amateurs, here from 35 nations to compete for the Eisenhower Trophy, won five of the eight previous titles by the United States, and have been awed by the splendor—and the difficulty—of this 6,774-yard course.

But the pros are another matter.

"To have a good golf course and get it recognized, you have to have the top pros play it," says Dye, whose Harbour Town links at Hilton Head Island, S.C., is one of the toughest courses on the U.S. pro tour.

"If the pros don't show up, it will be in the background forever."

Yale Tops in New England

BOSTON (UPI) — Not since the days of Calvin Hill and Brian Bowling has the Yale football team generated so much excitement and so many first-place votes by New England coaches.

The Eli, barreling toward an undefeated season, received 14 of the 18 top votes cast in the weekly UPI poll to lead the region's major college teams with 85 points.

Connecticut left from eighth last week to fourth after nipping Massachusetts, 10-9. The Huskies received 33 points. Massachusetts picked up 12 points to finish a distant fifth.

Points are awarded on a descending scale, with a first-place vote worth five points.

Defense along with an overdue offensive outburst moved Boston College back into second place in the ratings. The Eagles, who decimated Villanova, 55-7, collected the other four first-place votes among their 67 points.

Harvard dipped from second to third, despite a win at Dartmouth. The Crimson gathered 60 points.

Connecticut left from eighth last week to fourth after nipping Massachusetts, 10-9. The Huskies received 33 points. Massachusetts picked up 12 points to finish a distant fifth.

Borg, Vilas Top-Seeded

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Bjorn Borg of Sweden and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, the two top seeded players, face two Inglin Davis Cuppers in the first round of the annual $100,000 Stockholm Open tennis tournament Nov. 4-10.

Borg, the teenage wonder, faces Anand Amritraj while Vilas, the current Grand Prix leader, is scheduled to play V. Singh in his first match.

Tom Gorman of Seattle, Wash., although the defending champion, is seeded eighth and will open against Swedish veteran Jan-Erik Lundqvist, an opponent who might prove harder than the 28-year-old American.

Arthur Ashe of Gum Springs, Va., winner of the tournament in 1971, is seeded fourth — the highest of the 32 American players involved. He will face Vilas' German ally of New York in his first match.

The winner of the singles will earn $15,000 and 80 points in the Grand Prix standings.

The doubles champions have to split $7,500 and 32 Grand Prix points. Tom Okker of the Netherlands is seeded third. Marty Riessen of Evanston Ill. is fifth, Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia is sixth, Manuel Orantes of Spain is seventh, Harold Solomon of Silver Springs, Md., is ninth, Eddie Dibbs of Miami Beach, Fla., is 10th and Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., is 14th.

Candidate '74 Profiles Mrs. Grasso Seeks To Be First Woman To Become Governor in Her Own Right

By ED BUTLER
HARTFORD (UPI) — Rep. Ella T. Grasso, D-Conn., is entering the final week of her campaign for governor with the assurance of someone convinced of certain victory.

If there were ever any serious doubts about her becoming the nation's first woman governor elected in her own right, they seemed to evaporate last week when her opponent was rebuffed by Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn., for using alleged Watergate-tactics against her.

The day after Weicker's stunning statement, Mrs. Grasso seemed relaxed and jovial as she toured Connecticut campaigning against Rep. Robert H. Steele, R-Conn.

Jotul Stove Efficient Woodburner

PORTLAND, Maine (UPI) — Six years ago, before the energy crisis, a young couple moved into an old Maine farmhouse with no central heat and bought a 75-year-old wood-burning cookstove for a junkman for $15.

Last spring, another couple, worried about the rising cost of heating their old farmhouse with oil, paid $750 for a stove just like it.

The old woodburning Home Comforts, Queen Atlantics and Home Comforts, once so easy to find and fix up in Maine have disappeared. Those that are left command prices well beyond the reach of people who want safe, cheap wood heat and are not willing to rely on the often cracked and rusted Victorian models.

So when Eva Horton and her husband wanted a wood stove for their old farmhouse last winter, she said "Let's send away to Norway and get a stove that really works."

Mrs. Horton, a native Norwegian, sent away for a Jotul. Her husband was so impressed with it he persuaded her to ask its manufacturers for the only American franchise.

The Jotul, pronounced "Yodle," will consume just half as much wood as other woodburning stoves.

"Its baffles system is designed so that the air goes in an S-shape and allows no oxygen to the back," Mrs. Horton explained. "It holds the fire for up to 10 hours. Most American stoves can only give you four to six hours. Norwegians call them 'round-burners' because they burn round the clock with only two stockings."

A customer has a choice of black or enameled green cast iron. He may choose a box-style stove, a Franklin type, a cookstove or a fireplace design.

And he will be required to pay from $200 to $600 for his stove, depending on the model.

It says for itself in fuel savings and reliability," Mrs. Horton said. "And it uses only half as much wood, which is no small consideration now when wood costs from $50 to $65 for a cord."

UMW Bargaining Council Sets Up Friday Meeting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United Mine Workers Union has called its Bargaining Council to meet Nov. 1 to advise them of the "progress we've made to that point."

A UMW spokesman said that union president Arnold Miller called for the Bargaining Council to meet Nov. 1 to advise them of the "progress we've made to that point."

The current contract expires Nov. 12 and negotiators for 120,000 union miners and 1,200 mines were at work on negotiations today.

The Views of the Candidates

The Questions

Each candidate for state senator and state representative was asked the following four questions by the League of Women Voters:

1. How can the state ease the burden on the local property tax?
2. Please list the state programs to which you would give the highest funding priorities in the next two years.
3. What do you expect to do about equalizing educational funding in Connecticut?
4. What should be the state's role in land use decisions?

Each candidate for U.S. representative was asked the following three questions:

1. What do you propose to do about inflation and unemployment?
2. What legislation would you back to make more housing available for low and moderate income people?
3. What campaign reform measures do you support for national office?

COMPILED BY SOL R. COHEN

First Congressional District Buckley

F. Mac Buckley

F. Mac Buckley of Newington is the Republican candidate for First District congressman. Prior to accepting the GOP nomination, he was the special attorney in charge of the Federal Drug Strike Force for Connecticut.

Buckley, 31, is a graduate of College of the Holy Cross and Georgetown University Law School. He was a law clerk to Supreme Court Justice John Colter 1967-68, associated with a Stamford law firm 1968-69, assistant U.S. attorney in Connecticut 1969-71, and acting federal public defender in Connecticut 1971-72.

He has been an amateur and professional boxer and, for the past three years, has organized, coached and trained the Hartford Police Athletic League (PAL) boxing team.

Buckley said, "My experience as law clerk for Supreme Court Justice John Colter, as assistant U.S. attorney, federal public defender and special attorney-in-charge of the Drug Strike Force, the federal agency spearheading the drive on drug pushers, I believe qualifies me for seeking the office of congressman."

His answers to the LWV questions:

1. I favor selected cuts in federal spending, reforming budget procedures to establish a unified, balanced budget, measures to provide incentives for greater productivity and alternatives to tight monetary policies. I would oppose wage and price controls, unless imposed selectively in a manner fair to the wage earner and profit producer. We need programs to speed the conversion to a peacetime economy in this district, and should be prepared to initiate a massive, socially, productive program of public employment.
2. I support expanded federal housing programs, with an emphasis on conversion and rehabilitation of existing units, and would seek measures to make mortgage money more available, so that the low and middle-income family is not forced to rent.
3. Limitations on contributions and expenditures, so long as they don't provide the incumbent with an advantage, and a strong ethics bill requiring disclosure of personal assets, liabilities and sources of income.

Burke

Charlie A. Burke

Charlie A. Burke of East Hartford is the George Wallace Party candidate for First District congressman. A Greensboro, N.C. native, he is 33 years of age and has resided in Connecticut for 18 years, the past 10 in East Hartford.

Burke is a barber, with a shop on Burnside Ave., East Hartford, and dabbles in his own world in real estate. He recently was divorced and was given custody of the Burke's one child.

In listing his qualifications for the office, he said, "I am an American citizen and believe in the Free Enterprise System. That's what makes me qualified for the job. My reward would come from being able to serve all America and Americans."

Burke's answers to the LWV questions:

1. Inflation is an over-abundant supply of money. The federal government is in charge of printing up money. To stop inflation you have to stop government spending and gold should be put behind the dollar to insure no more inflation.
- To increase employment, I would lower taxes. This would put more money in the pockets of the people, so they could buy more cars, boats, houses, cameras, etc. This would increase business and would make business expand, thus, having to hire more people and, if we were lucky, they would be hiring welfare recipients, therefore lowering taxes even more.
2. None. By lowering taxes. This would mean an increase in their pay, and also by eliminating government regulating agencies, such as O.S.H.A. and E.P.A. This elimination of these government agencies and other governmental agencies that are harassing the businessman and therefore driving up the cost of consumer goods, which is also a cause of inflation, would lower the cost of housing thus allowing builders to build at lower prices, therefore making it possible for Americans to purchase at lower prices.
3. I would support a law that no candidate could spend more than $100,000 for any office except President and that all TV, radio and newspapers would have to donate equal time and space to all qualified candidates.

Cotter

U.S. Rep. William R. Cotter

U.S. Rep. William R. Cotter of Hartford is the Democratic incumbent in the First Congressional District, seeking his third consecutive term in Congress.

Prior to his election in 1970, he was state insurance commissioner, before then deputy commissioner and before then aide to Gov. Abraham Ribicoff. He is treasurer of the State Central Democratic Committee.

Cotter, 48, is a Hartford native, a graduate of Hartford schools and Trinity College, with a BA degree in economics and history.

He is a former member of the Hartford Court of Common Council.

His answers to the LWV questions:

1. Connecticut now grants $6 million to the municipalities for the purpose of property tax relief. Each municipality is required to clearly indicate the effect of the tax reduction. The 1974 Republican state platform supports increased aid to our communities for tax relief, utilizing this method of a per capita grant from monies received through the federal revenue-sharing program.
2. Continued tax relief; role in inflation.

Third Senatorial District Dalamagas

Chris Dalamagas

Chris Dalamagas of East Hartford is the Republican candidate in the third Senatorial District, which comprises all of East Hartford and about 32 per cent of Manchester.

Dalamagas, 37, is the owner of Dallas Income Tax Service of East Hartford. He has a degree in Business Administration from the University of Georgia and has attended the University of Hartford School of Continuing Education. This is his second try at public office; he ran the first, he ran for the East Hartford Board of Education and lost.

3. We will give special consideration to the recommendations of the education-finance commission which we established to study inequality in education spending. We shall continue our efforts to insure that Connecticut's elementary and secondary schools are among the best in the country.

4. We support long-range landscape planning that involves coordination between the people, the state, municipalities and the private sector. We oppose attempts to wrest control of planning and zoning authority from our cities and towns, and maintain the principles of local determination.

Dalماغاس said a recent poll shows him a 4 to 1 favorite to win over his Democratic opponent, despite the 3 to 1 legislative advantage enjoyed by the Democrats in East Hartford.

"The people of East Hartford and Manchester are going all the way to help me, so that they can gain more for the third

Hannon

George W. Hannon Jr. of East Hartford is the Democratic candidate for Third District state seat.

Hannon, owner of an East Hartford insurance and real estate firm, has been a state representative (Assembly District 10) since January 1969—majority whip in 1969-70 and assistant minority leader in 1973-74.

An East Hartford resident since 1935, when he was two, he is married to the former Doris Elaine Davy, also of East Hartford. The couple has nine children—six girls and three boys—ages 6 to 20.

Hannon attended East Hartford elementary school and East Hartford High School, as well as St. Bonaventure University and the University of Connecticut.

Hannon says he has the training and experience for the office of state senator. He has four successful terms in the House of Representatives, including his selection to

Democratic positions of leadership

1. A shift in policy from partial funding of public education to total funding by the State of Connecticut will obviously reduce dramatically the local property tax. Such a shift will, of course, take a commitment by the state government of hundreds of millions of dollars. It cannot be accomplished over one fiscal year but by assuming the responsibility over several fiscal years.

2. A statewide and state-funded mass transportation system. An acceleration in vocational education to train skilled workers for Connecticut's economy. An infusion of new business and an expansion of present business to create jobs. The encouragement of building and housing programs at reasonable interest rates.

3. Because of the unusual amount of funds needed to accomplish equalized educational services, it will be necessary, I am concerned about the people at the local level losing their input into the system with an increase in state spending. It is, however, a decision that is at hand and must be dealt with in 1975.

4. That of a partner in the future planning of our land use. I do not favor state zoning authorities to replace local zoning authorities. Through the Department of Environmental Protection the state has much to say about the future development of vacant land.

Said Hannon, "1975—another difficult year for our citizens—continued high food cost—higher than ever unemployment—growing utility bills with the horrendous fuel cost adjustment charges? Floundering mass transportation needs? Spiraling local property taxes?—a bleak outlook indeed for the next 12 months.

"The new year must bring with it new commitment to state government, if we are to overcome the failures of the past four years.

"My experience in the General Assembly and my outspoken attitude on the many issues facing our state, I believe, assist in solving the problems that face us today. I look forward to that challenge in the State Senate."

Fourth Senatorial District

Barry

David M. Barry of Manchester is the Democratic candidate in the Fourth Senatorial District, which consists of about 48 per cent of Manchester plus seven other towns.

Barry, who will be 44 on Nov. 1, represented the district from February 1968 to January 1971. He unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for First District congressman in the November 1970 election. He was a state representative from 1969 to 1961, on the Manchester Board of Directors from 1962 to 1966, deputy mayor from 1964 to 1966 and town counsel from 1971 to 1973.

A Manchester native, Barry is a practicing attorney, with offices on E. Center St. He is a graduate of Kingswood School, Trinity College and Boston University Law School. He has been in the Senate, since the state 1959 and was president of the Young Democrats of Manchester in 1961.

He and his wife, the former Judith Ann Leclerc of Manchester, reside at 473 E. Center St., with their three children—Joan 12, David Jr. 10, Michael 7, Mark 5, and Ryan 3.

Barry said, "My qualifications for the office include five years as state senator, four years as Manchester Board of Directors, service on various boards and commissions and exposure to the practical effects of laws, as a practicing attorney for about 16 years.

1. State grants to towns must become better informed myself and then to contribute to the dialogue and debate that must take place.

2. Within the limits of available funds, priority should be given to state-local grants, a mass transit system, an expanded early housing commitment and improvements in our humane institutions.

I would expect to have to pass on legislation to reform the assessment practices as a basis for any formula for state aid. There will have to be a thorough airing of the issue of aid to education to inform the public as to the dimension of the problem and all alternatives to our present system of education finance.

I would expect to first become better informed myself and then to contribute to the dialogue and debate that must take place.

3. First of all, I would like to have the final report of the Commission to Study School Finance and Equal Educational Opportunity. I would expect to have some choice among several equalization plan variations which will have to come eventually to the Assembly for approval.

"While plans to improve Connecticut life are being discussed in our forums between the people and candidates for public office, we must all honestly face the fact that many of these proposals will be curtailed until economic recovery takes place."

Odegard

State Sen. David Odegard, the Republican incumbent in the fourth Senatorial District, is seeking his third consecutive term. Prior to being elected state senator, he was Manchester deputy mayor and was on the Board of Directors from 1966 to 1971. In the Senate, he is an assistant majority leader.

A native of St. Cloud, Minn., Odegard has resided in Manchester since 1963. He is an engineer by profession and is a Realtor. He and his wife, the former Karin Nymaster of Ossau, Minn., reside at 27 McCann St. with their three children—Lynn 14, Chris 12, and Tom 10.

Odegard is a graduate of Michigan Technological University, Houghton, Mich., and attended the University of Connecticut Graduate School of Engineering and the University of Hartford School of Political Science.

1. Re-work our patchwork programs to decrease the confusion and waste inherent in unnecessary bureaucracy (being worked on for 1975 by the program review committee).

2. Re-work our program review bills, and shield those in greatest need of assistance from the circuit breaker bill for the elderly.

3. Simply adding state taxes and increasing aid to the towns is inefficient at best, probably resulting in increased total taxes (and less service) for almost everyone who works for a living.

4. Within a framework of fiscal stability (requiring severe spending, borrowing and taxing restraints in this volatile economy), I would say lately, I am an independent small businessman, located in Manchester.

Cummings

1. The state can increase the amount of revenue-sharing funds passed on to the towns, thereby increasing the funds towns and cities would have for financing services. The state can increase aid to education also, thereby reducing or stabilizing the amount needed through property taxes for financing education.

2. Education, housing for

together with a minimum tax effort by school districts; and two, the state underwrites some percentage share of school costs for the whole state. Aid under this approach would consider the financial capability of the district, compared to other districts, plus local decisions as to just how much the district is willing to raise in educational funds.

4. The state no longer can be a passive advisor, but must be an active partner with people in financing services. The state must take into account the differences in the wealth of different communities. A uniform tax rate throughout the state, together with an equalized assessment method, probably will be necessary.

Two plans appear to have the most merit. One, the Foundation Plan, under which the state fixes a floor or minimum level of per-pupil expenditure, economic development (protecting "conical" jobs) and agricultural land preservation (retaining farmland for farming). The former through such mechanisms as the new Department of Commerce, the latter through a voluntary program allowing state or local purchase of "development rights."

3. Possibly by assisting those towns with extremely high taxes. A true equalized funding system is totally unworkable and alternatives are being studied for 1975.

4. Primarily technical assistance to towns, when asked. It is most important that local people retain the right to manage their own affairs.

Odegard said, "Would you expect your state senator to be helpful? Except for part of one day, I have been there 100 per cent of the time for four years.

"Should he understand? I sent out 1,000 questionnaires at the beginning of each session, asking for the average person's reaction to what's coming up. (Should he be available? I held informal office hours every week during sessions—in every one of the eight towns in the district.

"Should he take a stand? I never abstained in a vote during my eight years in public office.

"Should he inform you of what's going on? My bi-weekly newsletter, which was written regularly during each session."

Haslett

Harriet B. Haslett is the Republican candidate for state representative in the 13th Assembly District. She has been in Manchester 15 years, she resides at 78 Blue Ridge Dr. with her husband, Darion, and their three children, John, 12, Katherine, 10, and James, 6.

She is a member of the Republican Town Committee, is a GOP leader in Voting District 4 and program chairman for the Women's Republican Club of Manchester. She was an unsuccessful candidate for the Board of Education in 1971.

Mrs. Haslett is a member of the Manchester Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, the Manchester Historical Society and the Horseshoe Carriage Club of America. The Haslett family's hobby is preserving antique cars.

She is past president of the Joyce Club and past president of Martin School PTA.

In listing her qualifications for the post, Mrs. Haslett said, "I am a Business Institute graduate with a secretarial and business background. I have actively participated and headed numerous civic organizations which have provided me with a broad background. Among my personal traits which will serve Connecticut well is an ability to work effectively in an organization with common sense."

Her answers to the LWV questions:

1. We can increase aid to our communities by utilizing the already established per capita grant method, using monies received from the federal Revenue Sharing program. Also, increased funding for payment in lieu of taxes for state-owned property.

2. Consumer oriented measures to hold down or reduce costs of fuel, electricity, hospital costs etc. Continued

Mahoney

State Rep. Francis J. Mahoney, the Democratic incumbent in the 13th Assembly District, is seeking his fourth term in the General Assembly. He has been in Manchester 17 years, he resides at 19 Hamlin St. with his wife, the former Lucille Murphy. Both are Manchester natives. Mrs. Mahoney was born on the street where they live. They have two

1. Education, elderly, public health and social services, transportation.

2. This is certainly a critical item and the legislature passed a bill setting up a Commission to Study School Financing and Equal Educational Opportunity. I feel that the question will be answered best when the commission makes its report.

3. The local property tax is the responsibility of each community. I believe the state could provide a larger per-pupil grant, which would ease some of the burden. However, each community must decide to what extent it will increase its services provided. This will determine the largest extent of the local tax burden.

4. The state, in general, should not tamper with the town and cities in land use unless requested. I have continually voted against the state overriding local planning and zoning boards and I will continue to do so.

Said Mahoney, "It has been 18 years that you, the voters of Manchester, have given me the honor of serving you. In my public life, I have always been my policy to be available to you at all times. My door at 19 Hamlin St., where I have resided for 14 years, always has been open to everyone—regardless of party affiliation.

"My efforts have never shown favoritism to any one group. I sincerely hope by my actions and my voting record will meet with the voters' approval and that you will reelect me on Nov. 5."

Glassman

Abraham Glassman is the Democratic candidate in the 14th Assembly District. He is a past president of the State Vending Inc. and is on the advisory board of the Wapping branch of the South Windsor Bank and Trust Co. He is head of Rockwell Films Audio-Visual Co.

Glassman was on the South Windsor Town Council for three terms and was mayor from 1971 to 1973. He has BA and MA degrees in Public Administration from the University of Connecticut. He is a past president of Temple Beth Hillel, a member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Exchange Club and a charter member of South Windsor Jaycees.

Glassman said, "I have six years' experience in government as an elected member of the South Windsor Town Council and was mayor for two years. Because of those three terms on the Town Council, working with six budgets, I believe I am well-acquainted with the give and take of balancing revenues and expenditures."

His answers to the LWV questions:

1. Easing the burden on the local property tax requires shifting of the burden to a greater extent to the state—by

Ninth Assembly District

England

Marilyn England is the Republican candidate for state representative in the Ninth Assembly District. The district consists of about one-half of the Town of East Hartford and Voting District 9 in Manchester.

Mrs. England, an East Hartford native, has resided in Manchester since 1965. She and her husband, William England, have five teenage children. The family resides at 75 Calvary Rd. Mrs. England is employed by the Manchester Packing Co.

While living in East Hartford, she was a member of the Republican Town Committee, the Republican Women's Club, the East Hartford Women's Club and the East Hartford Board of Health. She served as campaign manager for Barbara Dunn (commissioner of consumer protection) when Mrs. Dunn was elected state representative.

In listing her qualifications for the office she is seeking, Mrs. England said, "I believe it includes my interest, desire and enthusiasm, plus a genuine concern that Democrats, Republicans and unaffiliated heard and represented in the State Capitol."

Her answers to the LWV questions:

1. By providing more state funds to local communities. Obviously, if this is done one must realize that our state taxes will be proportionately higher.

2. Necessary support for vocational education for all those who want it. Also, consumer protection.

3. I understand that this is currently before our courts and I anticipate that this question will be answered in the near future.

4. As limited as possible—consistent with public health and safety. Local committees are better able to make these judgments than state agencies.

Mrs. England said, "I would like to emphasize my position on the issues. I am against a state income tax because it is an unnecessary and dangerous tax. Once established, it becomes easy to increase for programs that often prove unworkable and ineffective. The Republican approach of controlled spending and a careful watch over dollars has resulted in a balanced budget.

"Licensing and state regulations for home improvement contractors would reduce the unscrupulous dealings resulting in wasted dollars for the consumer.

"Consumers need all the assistance and protection available, beginning with minor purchases through major spending."

"I am against pay toilets. It should be mandatory for every large store and building that serves the public to provide toilet facilities free of charge."

England

Drug Abuse; four advisory on Connecticut Drug Advisory Council and two legislative items.

Her answers to the LWV questions:

1. The state must contribute more heavily to educational costs and/or need back to the towns increased grants, to aid in their local cost of government.

If there is not to be an income tax (and that's very unlikely in the next four years), other current state taxes would have to be increased. The state's share of revenue-sharing could be passed through to the towns for educational costs for as long as the federal program continues.

Encouragement of new business ventures, tax incentives for industry, state programs to train unskilled workers, would all tend to expand economic growth. As growth occurs and the school population goes down, the property tax burden would be eased.

2. First of all, I would like to have the final report of the Commission to Study School Finance and Equal Educational Opportunity. I would expect to have some choice among several equalization plan variations which will have to come eventually to the Assembly for approval.

"While plans to improve Connecticut life are being discussed in our forums between the people and candidates for public office, we must all honestly face the fact that many of these proposals will be curtailed until economic recovery takes place."

14th Assembly District Westbrook

State Rep. G. Warren Westbrook of South Windsor is the Republican incumbent in the 14th Assembly District, which comprises all of South Windsor and Voiner District 1 in Manchester. He is seeking his second consecutive term. He served also in 1963-66.

Westbrook, an East Hartford native, is president of Westbrook Associates of New Britain, manufacturers and engravers of steel stamps. He has three children.

He graduated from Yale University in 1946 with a degree in mechanical engineering, after serving in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He was on the South Windsor Board of Finance in 1959-61, deputy mayor in 1969-71, and chairman of the Industrial Development Committee in 1972.

He is a member of the South Windsor Exchange Club, a past president of Wapping Community Church and a former coach of Little League.

Westbrook listed his training and experience in state and South Windsor positions as qualifications for his reelection as state representative over 17 years in various elective and appointive posts. His answers to the LWV questions:

1. South Windsor has received a revenue-sharing grant this past year of $31,200 (approximately 1/4 mill) and Manchester has received $96,000, specifically earmarked to ease the burden on the local property tax. I do not believe in having the state levy taxes and then distribute the funds to the municipalities. There is too much expense involved in this double handling of funds.

2. State aid grants, Connecticut Student Loan Foundation, University of Connecticut, state colleges, community colleges, technical schools.

3. The state should guarantee a minimum education through high school to every person in Connecticut. If the individual towns wish to impose additional taxes to pay for varied curriculums, special programs and sports, that should be the option of the local boards of education and the governing bodies of each town.

4. The state Department of Environmental Protection is best equipped to set guidelines for land use which are in keeping with ideal ecological standards. In applying these, however, towns must be practical in taking into consideration the job needs and tax burdens of their people. An equitable and educational compromise, taking the total welfare of all the people into consideration, should be the goal.

Said Westbrook, "There is one major question the voters of Connecticut must ask in casting ballots this November for state legislators - whether they believe the past two years of Republican leadership have been beneficial."

"The Republican majorities in the Senate and House are justifiably proud of their records of sound planning, good fiscal management and orderly legislation. They are offering the people of the state a continuation of these achievements."

"Without sacrificing essential or progressive programs, we have succeeded in living within our budget. As a result, we haven't added to the problems of inflation and accumulation of debt - which result from unrestrained spending."

And always in the background looms the city of Houston, where lawlessness and violence go almost unchecked in some areas. In 1966, Olen reports, there were five dozen murders in Houston that in all of England. According to Olen, the police secretly classify the killings involving unimportant citizens as "misdeemeanor murders."

The quiet manner lulled any suspicions parent might have. But for more than two years he enticed teenage boys into his home where he indulged in homosexual acts that often ended in his victims' death in unpeppery ways. Two teenage boys acted as his accomplices, one as a pimp.

The murders might well have gone undiscovered had not the efforts of some of the parents to trace their vanished boys to the police rejection, make painful reading. The indifference of other parents is worthy curiosity.

Consumer Concern Ground Beef Blooms On the Outside Only Have you ever wondered why pre-packaged ground beef is often red on the outside but a dull, greyish brown on the inside?

The red color on the outside is due to exposure to air, the experts tell us. When exposed to air, a natural pigment in meat combines with oxygen to produce the red color which is referred to as "bloom."

Now that the question of color has been clarified, here is sound advice on shopping for, storing, thawing and cooking ground beef. Make ground beef one of your last purchases before leaving the store. Be sure the package hasn't been torn and that the ground beef feels cold.

Old-Fashioned Fair Planned

BOLTON
 Donna Holland
 Correspondent
 646-0375

The 16th annual "Twins the Month Before Christmas" fair sponsored by the Ladies Benevolent Society of the Bolton Congregational Church will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. in the educational building of BCC.

The theme this year will be "An Old Fashioned Christmas." Special efforts have been made to present unusual handmade items suitable for all ages at old-fashioned prices.

The booths include attic treasures, agrons, sweet shop, Christmas boutiques, country kitchen, dried arrangements and plants, kiddies booth and knits and crochets.

Gary Goulet will present novelty items and stationery, Mrs. Joyce Szydlowsky of East Hartford will be doing drawings on thumbprints.

The Christmas boutique will feature sand-casting mounted on cork. They will be done by Joyce Robinson of Tolland.

Mrs. Phyllis Daly and her committee made unusual and delicate ornaments for trees, homes and wrappings. The building will be decorated with the items which will be for sale at inexpensive prices.

A snack bar will be open during the day. It is a project of the junior deacons.

Luncheon will be served from noon until 1:30 p.m. The entrée will be stuffed ham. Tickets for the luncheon will be available in advance through either Jeanne Titcomb or Irene Conover. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Titcomb, Mrs. Conover is chairman for the luncheon.

Mrs. Edith Banz is general chairman of the fair. Mrs. and Nancy Panly is publicity chairman and Pamela Herring is treasurer.

Tracey Rich, 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alden Chick of Volpi Rd., holding one of many items that will be available for sale Saturday at the 16th annual "Twins the Month Before Christmas" fair. The fair will be Saturday from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. in the educational building of the Bolton Congregational Church. Other sale items are pictured in the foreground. (Herald photo by Holland)

O'Connell: Deficit Being Paid

Gerald O'Connell, Republican candidate for State Representative, 57th District, is calling on voters to look at the facts concerning the state deficit. O'Connell takes issue with a statement he said was made by his Democratic opponent, Terry Bertinussen, whom he said charged that the Republican-controlled state legislature has not paid off any of the $244 million deficit, which O'Connell said was inherited from the Dempsey (Democratic) administration. O'Connell said, "The general fund deficit of $244 million, accumulated during the fiscal periods 1968-1971, is being financed from the proceeds of $89 million in serial bonds and $146 million in term bonds."

He further said "To pay such bond issues, a sinking fund was established in 1973 known as the Deficit Trust Fund. Each year for a period of 10 years, the sum of $24.4 million is appropriated from the General Fund and transferred to the sinking fund for the retirement of the $244 million in bonding."

"At the conclusion of 1974-75, a total of $73.2 million will be held in that fund for repayment of such bonds."

He added, "The resources of the Deficit Trust Fund are invested, and the accrued interest from such investments is transferred to the General Fund to reduce the interest requirements on the $244 million in bonds."

"Over the 10-year period in which these bonds are to be repaid, total interest costs to the state are to be $38.8 million while the sinking fund is estimated to earn accrued interest of $37 million, leaving a net interest cost to the state of $1.8 million, for financing the $244 million deficit," O'Connell said.

Study Shows Benefits Of Oil Refinery

THE CANDIDATES ARE SAYING

HARTFORD (UPI) — A Maryland consulting firm says construction of an oil refinery in Connecticut could mean as much as $30 million in revenues annually for the state.

A report by Jack Faucett Associates said the state could impose a user tax on oil piped in from deep water ports that would yield $10 million annually.

The firm said if the refinery handled 600,000 barrels per day, an additional $20 million would be earned under present tax structures.

During the construction period, state and local governments would receive an estimated $50 million in taxes from the refinery and consumers in the state would save 7.4 cents a barrel by having a local refinery, or about $9 million a year.

The report was submitted to the governor's task force on refineries which will report directly to Gov. Thomas J. Meskil by Jan. 1.

Construction of a refinery would create about 2,400 jobs with about $30 employees needed to operate the facility permanently, the report said.

Press Freedom in Korea Under Attack

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI
Foreign News Analyst

The arrest and conviction of 200 political opponents of South Korean President Park Chung Hee contains more than a suggestion that the South Korean government does not take kindly to criticism. That the convictions were reached in secret trials without benefit of witnesses for the defense, frequently accompanied by allegations that the Korean police were not above the use of torture to obtain confessions and, also, attest to the courage of those who continued to demand restoration of Korean freedoms.

Included among those convicted of criticizing or plotting against the government have been a Roman Catholic bishop and a former president of the South Korean republic.

The government has rescinded the harshest of a series of emergency decrees under which the death penalty could be the punishment for critics.

But the machinery of secret court-martials remains intact and the news media has been warned that the government will tolerate no challenges to the 1972 constitution giving Park virtually unlimited powers.

Suspected dissenters, including students, remain under heavy surveillance. Those convicted under the emergency decrees remain in jail.

Rumors take the place of solid information. It is this that made noteworthy the action of Oct. 24 by some 100 reporters of the Seoul, Korea, newspaper Dong-A-Illbo, and its affiliated radio station which struck in protest against government restrictions on press freedom.

The strikers won agreement from Kim Sang Man, publisher, to run a three-point resolution on the newspaper's front page. The resolution denounced "outside interference with newspaper, broadcasting and magazine publications; the posting of security agents at newsprint offices; and illegal questions and arrests of journalists by government agents."

The newspaper, which has a long record of political suppression, had reported prominently recent student demonstrations in South Korea and rebellious stirrings in South Vietnam.

Intelligence agents had arrested and subjected to long questioning the newspaper's managing editor and his three deputies.

STAMPS AND COINS

By RUSS MACKENDRICK

So you've found a 1964 dime and you wonder what it's worth today. Just look in the Wall Street Journal for spot silver — say it is $4.50 an ounce. Whip out your trusty electronic calculator and multiply by 4.30 by 7.2375 and you come up 32.552 cents as the silver value of your dime.

because it tickles the moving fingertip and you can usually make out at least part of the design in reverse on the back. The class will continue with definitions of vermeil, omnibus issue, and muling. "Vermeil" (the word is derived from "vermillion") appears frequently as a medal in stamp exhibition awards. It is typically a gilded bronze piece. "Omnibus issue" originally stood for stamps with the same design put out by different countries, such as the European or the British Commonwealth series. It has also come to mean a world-wide issue with the same theme but different designs, e.g. Malaria, World Refugee Year, etc.

400,000, owners of the mulings blocks may have a pleasant surprise as some 1970 issues have zoomed upward. The Anti-Pollution, the Disabled Vets, and the Christmas Toys are all listed in the latest Harris at $7.85. And the 1971 Bicentennial, Scott No. 1432, is almost $8.

Since the ban on gold bullion trading by U.S. citizens is due to be lifted January first, the coin papers are just full of points of view and predictions. My only experience with gold so far, except for the 1980 eagle I traded in on this typewriter, was a 1978 "muling" you risk of because I couldn't stand the inevitable conny jokes whenever it was mentioned. Incidentally, you can't say "for all the gold in Fort Knox" any more when you want to talk big. It has to be "...for all the gold under the Federal Reserve Bank in New York City." They have three times as much there as at Fort Knox. It is in storage only, as it belongs to some 60 foreign countries.

well as proximity to a rich primary market in New York. For business and industrial development, it's a solid peg on which to hang such Connecticut advantages as good sites, markets, workers, living qualities, transportation, and all the other factors so important to relocation decisions. Stewart said the new theme, used in fall season tourist advertising in New York newspapers, had drawn a record number of inquiries "despite the fact that the number of advertising insertions were fewer than in previous years."

The new theme, he added, will be used not only in advertising, but in every phase of the Commerce Department's sales promotion effort.

Candidate '74 Profile Steele Drive Burdened by Inflation, Party Banner Soiled by Watergate

By ROBERT LAMBERT
HARTFORD (UPI) — For Robert H. Steele the most difficult thing about running for governor is not that his opponent is a woman, but that he is carrying a Republican banner tattered by inflation and soiled by Watergate.

Steele has taken the job of campaigning against Ella T. Grasso in stride, pointing out that his Democratic opponent is first and foremost a politician. "I think we will catch up or just miss it by a few days," Steele said.

playing against a stacked deck. At best, he is fighting an uphill battle against a projected Democratic landslide. First, there is the image of the Republican party tarnished by the Watergate scandals and the pardon of former President Nixon. Then there is the problem of double digit inflation, high oil prices and shortage of pocketbook issues attributable by the Democrats to the six years of Republican rule.

Oil and Food Conference Upcoming aid abroad and concedes the situation is serious. And because the United States exports 40 per cent of world food, it is the United States that will set the tone of the meeting and receive most of the blame if the conference ends without a suggested solution for what most of the experts seem to agree is a crisis.

The conference is the result of a suggestion by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger who also will be one of the principal speakers. It is under the auspices of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization whose director, Dr. A.H. Boerma, has urged "rapid, concerted international action."

Heading the U.S. delegation will be Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz whose attitude toward the problem is considerably more relaxed than that of many of his colleagues. Butz favors continued food

Yankee Ingenuity Needed

KENNETH FRANKLING
KINGSTON, R.I. (UPI) — A University of New Hampshire researcher says that good old Yankee ingenuity should be exploited and developed through college training to spur future economic growth in New England.

The trait which brought prosperity to the region in its colonial days and spawned the economic folklore of the rugged individualist has been one of New England's greatest resources, according to William E. Wetzel Jr., an associate professor in the Whittemore School of Business and Economics.

Because New England has never been endowed with rich natural resources like farmlands or mineral deposits, entrepreneurs turned to "labor intensive" industry and a great deal of inventiveness, with brains being the great manufacturing asset, he said.

Wetzel maintains that "entrepreneurial processes are likely to be one of the critical components of a vigorous New England and national economy if a position taken by Howard W. Johnson, former president of MIT, holds true. Change in the management of business firms will foster the need for men who have entrepreneurial spirit and energy, who are innovative, who have the capacity of translating ideas and discoveries into action; who are both receptive to change; who have a high tolerance of ambiguity and uncertainty; who have the will to risk," Johnson wrote.

A Political Neighborhood

These side-by-side political signs on the south side of E. Center St. (opposite Parker St.) do one of two things - they give you a choice, or they cancel each other out. Win, lose or draw, political signs will be removed after Nov. 5, not to appear again until next year's election. (Herald photo by Pinto)

Study Probes Dangers Of Drug Reactions

AL ROSSITER JR., UPI Science Editor, WASHINGTON (UPI) - Despite claims that harmful reactions to drugs are costing America wasted dollars and needless deaths, the head of a Boston drug study program says most drugs in use today are remarkably safe when their bad effects are weighed against the good.

Senators Hit Rockefeller Delay

LEE RODERICK (Special to The Herald) - A Washington (UPI) - A Senate hearing on the delay in reopening confirmation hearings on the nomination of the State of New York, all 14 million of them, if they want to begin to look as if that is the sort of game that is going on in the other body.

South gets a perfect count

South could have picked up an easy 500 points by just doubling three diamonds, but he liked to play nortrup and bid the game. West opened the king of spades and led a diamond at trick two. East led back a diamond and South was on lead. He could see eight easy tricks. His problem was to score a ninth with either the jack of hearts or the queen of spades.

Mrs. Grasso Outlines Economic Objectives

United Press International — Ella Grasso today promised if elected governor to bolster the state economy in order to preserve jobs, and to strengthen the state Consumer Protection Department.

Mrs. Grasso, the Democratic congresswoman in the 6th District, told a group of workers at the Pratt & Whitney plant in East Hartford a strong economy will preserve current jobs and attract new ones.

She said one of her major goals would be the creation of an "action team" to help ailing industries in the state, composed of business and government experts who will identify the industries's problems and seek solutions.

"We must begin now to provide the incentives and the programs to encourage new industries and hold on to what we have," she said. "We need a coordinated program, not one-shot efforts."

In West Hartford, Mrs. Grasso outlined a nine-point program she said would make the Consumer Protection Department "one that citizens can turn to with full confidence that their grievances will be handled — not shelved."

Her program included the establishment of regional consumer protection offices for more efficient handling of complaints, expansion of the department's legal enforcement section, toughening of the state's "Truth in Lending" laws and the barring of price changes once articles have gone on the shelf.

Mrs. Grasso Tuesday filed a report with the secretary of the state showing her campaign collected $259,421 from more than 3,000 individuals, and spent $246,617, leaving a balance of $12,804.

Her Republican foe, Robert H. Steele, whose campaign slogan is "Drive Big Money Out of Politics," reported his campaign collected $280,555 from nearly 10,000 individuals, despite his voluntary restriction of individual gifts to no more than $100. Steele said he has spent $246,979 to date.

Steele was endorsed Tuesday by the Norwich Bulletin and its associate publications, the daily Groton News and two weeklies, the Plainfield Journal Press and the Transcript of Killingly. He was praised as a candidate who "has shown an ability to face issues squarely to provide direct and unambiguous answers and to pander to no one for political gain."

A University of Connecticut Daily Campus newspaper poll of 175 students showed Mrs. Grasso was favored by 3-1 margin over Steele, and Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., had a 7.5-1 margin over his GOP foe, James H. Brannen.

The Norwich Bulletin endorsed Ribicoff for election to a third term, saying he was "a man who can bring compromise out of chaos and agreement out of deadlock."

Samuel B. Hellier, a Republican running for Congress from the 2nd District, also won the newspapers' support. He is "more conversant with the problems peculiar to eastern Connecticut," the newspapers said.

Meanwhile, John M. Bailey, state Democratic party chief, today said he hopes there will be a high voter turnout Election Day and criticized state GOP Chairman Vincent A. Laudone for reportedly seeking the contrary.

Bailey said Laudone was quoted as saying a small voter turnout would help Republicans in traditionally Democratic Connecticut. "This is a curious attitude when you consider that a political party's strength rests with the people," Bailey said.

In the congressional races: —1st District GOP candidate Mac Buckley was endorsed Tuesday by the Hartford Times, which admitted Buckley's election in the solidly Democratic district is unlikely, but praised him for his stands on crime, the selection of judges and congressional reform. The Times labeled Rep. William R. Cotter, the Democratic incumbent, "a lackluster climber on the seniority ladder of congressional leadership."

At a news conference in Hartford, Buckley said Tuesday a poll he commissioned showed the problems of crime and drug abuse were among the top concerns of district residents.

Buckley, a former federal drug prosecutor, said most persons polled felt "it was hard to walk around the streets in this 'land of the free' unless you really believed it was also the 'home of the brave.'"

Buckley restated a 10-point program that he said will have an immediate effect on the crime problem. The program included improved recreational facilities in urban areas, the elimination of plea bargaining for any crimes involving weapons and minimum sentences for those convicted of crimes while using weapons.

—2nd District: Samuel Hellier was to go to Washington D.C. today to present to Dean Burch, President Ford's economic advisor, a petition bearing the signatures of thousands of Connecticut residents concerned about inflation. Hellier said Tuesday he also planned to discuss with Burch his own 10-point plan for fighting inflation, which included holding down food prices and making more mortgage money available at low interest rates.

Ms. Borders to Head MCC Women's Center

Bettina Borders of South St., Coventry, has been named director of Women's Center at Manchester Community College (MCC). As a member of the Dean of Students' staff, Ms. Borders, with the help of two student assistants, will be responsible for organizing the Center. The Center is being developed in response to a need voiced by both women students and women faculty members at MCC.

A native of Cranston, R.I., Ms. Borders has a B.A. degree in Social Sciences from Goddard College, Plainfield, Vt. and has attended Central Connecticut State College and the University of Rhode Island. She is currently enrolled in the M. of Ed. Administration program at Antioch Graduate Center, Keene, N.H.

Ms. Borders plans to develop a three-fold program for the MCC center. Under her direction the center will provide referral and counseling resources; will play an advocacy role by taking public stands on issues of concern to women; and will foster educational opportunities specifically for women by sponsoring educational workshops, films, a speaker's bureau and consciousness-raising groups. Although located on the MCC campus and sponsored and staffed by the college, Ms. Borders says the center will serve the whole community. Several Manchester women already serve on the center's advisory board, which was involved in the selection process of the director.

Gubernatorial Races Assessed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democrats stand a good chance to defeat Republicans in gubernatorial races in California, New York, Michigan and Massachusetts — which would give them control in the country's 10 biggest states.

Republicans hope to pick up new seats in Maine, Alaska and South Carolina.

The Democrats now hold 32 governorships, including 6 of the 10 most populous states.

In Pennsylvania, Texas, Ohio, and Florida, Democratic incumbents are expected to win re-election. The Democrats in Illinois and New Jersey are not up for re-election this year.

If Democrats can control the top 10 state houses, the state parties would have enormous patronage and political clout, and the national party would be stronger in the 1976 presidential sweepstakes.

There are 35 gubernatorial seats at stake in next Tuesday's elections — 23 Democrats and 12 Republicans. The "big four" got heavy attention:

—California: Edmund "Jerry" Brown is favored to win back the state house for the Democrats after eight years of Gov. Ronald Reagan. Brown, the secretary of state, is considered to be leading Republican Houston Flournoy, 44, state controller.

—New York: Seven-term Rep. Hugh Carey, is favored to return Democratic control to Albany after 15 years of GOP rule under Nelson Rockefeller. Gov. Malcolm Wilson, who served in Rockefeller's shadow as lieutenant governor, is the acknowledged underdog.

—Michigan: GOP Gov. William Milliken is in a close race for a second four-year term in a heavily Democratic state against Sander M. Levin, who lost to Milliken in 1970 by 44,000 votes. The race is complicated by the candidacy of Zoltan Ferency of the Human Rights Party.

—Massachusetts: Gov. Francis Sargent, a liberal Republican in a heavily Democratic state — the only one that supported Sen. George S. McGovern in 1972 — faces a strong bid by former State Rep. Michael Dukakis, a Democrat who is leading in the polls.

Attention also focused on Connecticut, where Rep. Ella Grasso D-Conn., could become the nation's first woman governor to be elected in her own right — she did not follow her husband.

Mrs. Grasso, who served for 12 years as secretary of state, was leading Rep. Robert Steele, R-Conn., for the seat of retiring Republican Gov. Thomas Meskill.

Meanwhile, Republicans considered their best prospects of new governorships in three states:

—Alaska: Republican Jay

Hammond, mayor of Bristol Bay and a bush pilot and wilderness guide, was in a tight race with Democrat William Egan, Alaska's first governor under statehood.

—Maine: Republican James Erwin lost by 500 votes to retiring Gov. Kenneth Curtis in 1970. He is running again in a close race against Democratic National Committeeman George Mitchell, a political ally of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine.

—South Carolina: The state's Democratic party is split and James Edwards has a chance to become the first Republican governor of South Carolina since Reconstruction. Rep. William Jennings Bryan Dorn was selected by the Democratic State Central Committee to replace party primary winner Charles Ravenel. The courts found Ravenel ineligible because he failed to meet residency requirements.

Both Republicans and

Retraction Asked On Grasso Ad

HARTFORD (UPI) — A Republican member of the legislative committee investigating state leasing practices has asked Democratic gubernatorial contender Ella T. Grasso to retract a statement that appeared in a campaign advertisement.

Sen. Nicholas A. Lenge, R-West Hartford, said a paid political advertisement appearing in newspapers Tuesday stated Gov. Thomas J. Meskill has been giving leases to his friends to the detriment of taxpayers.

Lenge said, however, if Mrs. Grasso were to see the list of prominent figures who hold state leases, she wouldn't be making the claim that only Republican friends were the beneficiaries.

"She doesn't know what she is talking about," Lenge said. "If she did know she would be embarrassed to death if she did get the true facts," he said.

Lenge, an advisor to GOP gubernatorial contender Robert H. Steele, said he acknowledges recognizable Republican and Democratic names would appear on any list.

Both Republicans and

Democrats agreed the results of the investigation would not be made public until after the elections, he said.

Lenge said he is bound not to disclose any of the results of the investigation so far, but urged Democratic members to do so in light of Mrs. Grasso's allegations.

In the advertisement, Mrs. Grasso charged Meskill "used your tax dollars to rent office space from his friends."

"I call on her to retract the statement," Lenge said. "It's obvious it can't be based on facts. If it were based on facts, some member of the committee has disclosed them prematurely."

"If I were to lay down the papers in front of you, the names that would leap up in front of you that would be prominent and instantly recognizable would be Democratic," he said.

But Lenge said Republicans would be on the list as well.

If any charges of political figures getting leases are to be leveled, Lenge said, they would have to include not just Meskill but former Democratic Gov. John N. Dempsey too.

Makes messy oven cleaning a chore of the past. An Electric-clean oven that can clean itself. Its oven racks and drip bowls automatically clean just one of the extra conveniences you get with this Frigidaire 30" Range.

From Frigidaire and General Motors, the revolutionary range that puts easy cooking at your fingertips. Instead of dialing or twisting knobs, you simply touch the cooking function, time or temperature setting you desire. Instantly, your cooking instructions are relayed to the range; to the minute, to the degree. That's just how precise and simple cooking can be with Frigidaire's revolutionary new Touch-N-Cook Range. The solid state control panel is flat and smooth, wipes clean with a damp cloth. So is the one-piece ceramic cooking surface. And no special cookware is required. The oven? Just lock the oven door, and with the touch of a finger it begins cleaning itself automatically. Best of all, the entire range is backed by an exclusive Frigidaire 5-Year Protection Plan.
