A special police board heard the petition of the Washington Metropolitan Police Department for an order permitting the city to keep a new gun stock of 100,000. The hearing took place before the Public Safety Committee of the city council.

The hearing was attended by several members of the police department, including Chief John J. Kelly, who presented the petition. Kelly stated that the new stock was needed to replace the old stock, which is no longer effective.

The committee heard testimony from several witnesses, including a representative from the National Rifle Association, who argued that the new stock would be a valuable addition to the department's arsenal. Another witness, a member of the police department, testified that the new stock would help to keep the city safe.

After hearing the testimony, the committee voted to approve the petition. The new stock will be purchased and added to the department's arsenal.

Outside today

By MALCOLM KAUFMAN

The Washington Times-Herald reported today on the success of the city's new crime prevention program. The program, which launched last month, has already resulted in a significant decrease in the number of crimes reported in the city.

The program, known as "Safe Streets," focuses on increasing community involvement in crime prevention. It includes activities such as neighborhood watch programs, crime awareness seminars, and community clean-up days.

According to the report, the program has already helped to reduce the number of crimes reported in the city by 20 percent. The police department has also seen a decrease in the number of arrests made.

The program is funded through a grant from the Department of Justice, and it is expected to continue for at least another year.

Water rules set to cut cancer risk

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A new water treatment system was implemented today in the city's water treatment plants, which are responsible for providing drinking water to millions of people in the metropolitan area.

The new system, known as the "Advanced Oxidation Process," uses a combination of ultraviolet light and ozone to remove cancer-causing chemicals from the water. The system is expected to reduce the risk of cancer associated with waterborne contaminants by 90 percent.

The new system was developed by a team of researchers at the University of California, Los Angeles, and was funded by a grant from the National Institutes of Health.

Egypt ends news war; asks U.S. for support

CAIRO, Egypt — Egypt ended its news war with Israel today, after the two countries agreed to aayan agreement that would allow for the release of two Egyptian journalists who had been held captive in the Gaza Strip.

The agreement was reached after weeks of negotiations between Egypt and Israel. Under the terms of the agreement, the two journalists would be released and allowed to return to their homes in Egypt.

The journalists were arrested in March after they attempted to cross the border from Gaza into Egypt to cover the situation in the region. The arrest sparked a news war between Egypt and Israel, with Egypt accusing Israel of violating its sovereignty and Israel accusing Egypt of aiding Hamas.

Crews ready for flooding

By GREG PEARSON

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood warning for Connecticut and the entire New England area today, as a powerful storm system approaches the region.

The storm is expected to bring heavy rain, snow, and strong winds. The National Weather Service is urging residents to stay safe and avoid areas with potential flooding.

“Residents should be prepared for the possibility of flooding and flash flooding,” said气象ologist John P. Hickey of the National Weather Service. “People in low-lying areas should be especially cautious.”

Vernon sets procedure for school fire safety

By ROBERTA RITCHISON

Vernon fire officials have prepared a plan to ensure a safe escape for students during fire drills in the schools. The plan, which has been prepared by the fire department, is designed to provide a safe and orderly evacuation of students during a fire emergency. The plan includes the use of a specific evacuation route and the assignment of teachers to guide students to the designated meeting areas. The plan is based on a report by the state Office of Safety and Health which recommended that schools have a written plan for handling emergencies. The plan will be reviewed by the school committee and the fire department will conduct regular drills to ensure that students are prepared for such events.

Bolton has no surprises in quiet political caucuses

By DONALD M. HANCOCK

Caucuses for town offices in Bolton were held last week with no surprises. The Town Council was re-elected as a whole, and the PZC (Planning and Zoning Commission) was re-elected with a few changes. The winners were: Town Council—Doris Johnson, Pauline Gilman, John Johnson, James Green, and John Johnson; PZC—Abbot Schwebel, Richard Vizard, and Walter Ryba.

School workshops approved

The Planning and Zoning Commission has approved two workshops for the purpose of educating the public on the proposed school plan. The workshops will be held on February 2 and February 15. The workshops will be conducted by town officials and will include a presentation on the proposed plan and an opportunity for public input. The workshops are intended to help residents understand the plan and provide feedback to the commission.

School board adopts plan for two levels

By DONALD M. HANCOCK

The Vernon elementary school board has adopted a plan to provide for two levels of education for students. The plan involves the construction of a new school building to accommodate the growing student population. The new building will be constructed adjacent to the existing school and will provide for separate areas for primary and secondary education. The plan is expected to be completed within the next year and will allow for the expansion of educational programs and the provision of additional facilities for students.
