Creationism not required, court rules

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court, invoking the constitutionally required separation of church and state, ruled today that states may not require public schools that teach evolution to teach creationism also.
The court, by a 5-4 vote, struck down a Louisiana law requiring that teaching the theory of evolution be balanced by teaching the theory of creation-science, also called creationism.
Propponents of creation-science say the theory is not based on religion, and that the Louisiana law was an attempt to protect academic freedom. Today the court rejected that argument.

EIGHTH DISTRICT negotiator James Barles said the Eighth District would be willing to change Special Act 200 if the town could guarantee that there could never again be an attempt to consolidate the Eighth District with the town.
In the last decade, there have been two such attempts. The most recent occurred last year when Manchester voters rejected a plan to change the Town Charter to strip from it the Eighth District's ability to veto consolidation with the town.
After that vote, the two sides agreed to begin talks. Thirteen meetings have been held since January.

Storm booms, cracks in nation's midsection

A storm system boomed and crackled across the Plains and Rockies today after dumping heavy rain over much of both regions and spawning tornadoes that toppled hundreds of trees and ripped roofs off buildings.

Wet weather also covered much of the Deep South. A severe thunderstorm watch was issued for western Kansas and eastern Colorado.

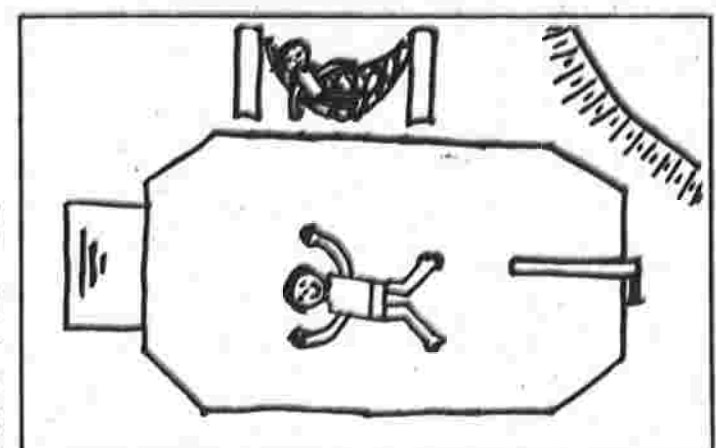

On Thursday, golfball-sized hail pounded Golden, Colo., Butte Mont. and West Millard, Neb. Seven tornadoes were sighted, three each in Colorado and Wyoming and one in Wisconsin. No injuries were reported.

The twisters touched down in Colorado near Rustic and Kiowa, and at Glendo, Wyo. The tornado near Rustic, in northern Colorado, toppled hundreds of trees and stripped roofs off several buildings.

Showers and thunderstorms dotted southern Wisconsin, Iowa, eastern Kansas, Nebraska, eastern Colorado, Wyoming and Montana. Rainy weather was also spread over the lower Ohio and Mississippi valleys, and the Deep South.

Heavier rainfall in six hours overnight included 3 inches at Greer, S.C.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms from Montana and Wyoming across South Dakota, Nebraska, eastern Colorado, Kansas and Oklahoma, through northern and western Texas, and from the middle and lower Mississippi Valley across the Ohio and Tennessee valleys, the mid-Atlantic States and the Carolinas through northern Florida.

Today's weather picture is by Ricky Debate, 10, of Anasdi Road, a fourth-grader at Martin School.

CONNECTICUT WEATHER

Central, Eastern Interior, Southwestern Interior: Very humid weather is moving into the area. Things will be getting sticky the next day or two. Tonight, partly cloudy. Low 60 to 65. Saturday, partly sunny. High around 80.

West Coast, East Coast: Tonight, partly cloudy. Low in the upper 60s. Saturday...Partly sunny. A 30 percent chance of an afternoon shower. High 75 to 80.

Northwest Hills: Tonight, partly cloudy. Low 60 to 65. Saturday, partly sunny. High in the middle 70s.

Pork restaurateur

Pro football coach Mike Ditka is renowned for his work with bears, but now he is getting recognition for his handling of pigs.

The National Pork Producers Council has named the coach of the National Football League's Chicago Bears its Pork Restaurateur of the Year. The council will present the award at his restaurant, Ditka's, on June 28.

"He has established the pork chop as the premier item on his restaurant's menu," said Tom Miller, council president.

The Chicago eatery's menu features Ditka's chops, a meal big enough for a linebacker. It consists of three 8-ounce chops, 2 inches thick.

Sumo sickness

Japan's largest sumo wrestler, Hawaiian native Saleava Aitanoe, is in the hospital for treatment of a skin infection.

The 228-pound Aitanoe was admitted to Queens Medical Center in Honolulu last weekend for antibiotic treatment of the infection on his leg, hospital spokesman Dava Zimmerman said Thursday.

The 23-year-old champion wrestler was in satisfactory condition and should be released soon, Zimmerman said.

Last month, Aitanoe, who wrestles under the name Koshishiki, became the first foreigner to achieve the second-highest rank of ozeki, or champion, in Japan's national sport.

MADONNA... seductive?

Madonna on cover

Cosmopolitan readers may do a double-take when they see the July issue next week with singer Madonna on the cover. She is the first celebrity so featured in 18 years, the magazine said.

"Madonna just seemed to have many of the Cosmopolitan girl qualities," said editor Helen Gurley Brown.

"There's really no statement being made and we don't have any juicy details about her personal life," advertising director Beth Hoyt said Thursday. "I think Helen just felt like doing it."

Since 1969, Elizabeth Taylor and Brooke Shields had graced Cosmo's cover, Hoyt said.

Caprilands comes under fire marshal's scrutiny

By the Manchester Herald and The Associated Press

COVENTRY — Caprilands, a center of herb farming and folklore, has come under fire marshal's scrutiny because of its safety. Why now, with less people? I want to keep the authenticity.

— Adelema Simmons of Caprilands

But the farm visited annually by thousands has no home-grown remedy for the strictures of modern fire and building codes.

Fire Marshal Richard Cooper has inspected the farm, founded some 40 years ago by Adelema Greiner Simmons at least four times in the last two years and cited it for many structural and fire-code violations.

But if Cooper's orders to make the 18th century house and barn remedied with old, hand-hewn wooden beams are followed, the farm's charm will be lost, the owner and her lawyer contend.

"He's (Cooper) made certain orders of changes that would be impossible without disturbing the integrity of the house," said lawyer Joel Janenda of Manchester, who is representing Simmons. "He wants to satisfy Cooper's doorway three inches. Well, the doorway's been there since 1760."

Simmons said her phone hasn't stopped ringing since the story was first reported Thursday. "I don't want to make any structural changes. For 50 years we've been safe. Why now, with less people? I want to keep the authenticity," she said in an interview this morning.

Jack Lee, who is married to Simmons' granddaughter and helps the herb expert operate the farm, said Thursday that negotiations now under way seem headed toward resolution of the dispute.

"We've been getting calls from all over the state and from out of state from people offering to help any way they can."

The farm has already made some changes to satisfy Cooper's concerns, including limiting the number of visitors allowed inside buildings, adding exit signs, fire extinguishers and alarms and doors. Lee said.

Solutions to other problems — such as Cooper's charges that building materials don't meet code specifications — are more complicated.

"What they are dealing with is an antique house that's over 200 years old," Simmons said. "I don't understand. It's caused us an awful lot of grief."

CCM's president says he's not forgetting Manchester

By George Lovvins and Heriberto Lopez

Manchester town Director Stephen T. Cassano, who last week began his first term as president of the Connecticut Conference of Municipalities, said he cannot use his position exclusively to help Manchester.

But there are a number of ways in which the town will benefit by having one of its officials at CCM's helm, Cassano said in an interview Wednesday.

For instance, Cassano said, while lobbying the General Assembly on behalf of CCM, he will offer up Manchester as an example of why the General Assembly should take certain actions to benefit all municipalities.

"If there's something I'm familiar with, that's something I'm going to put more emphasis on," said Cassano. "If it impacts on us, it has to impact on other towns."

Cassano said an example of how the town benefited from CCM's efforts was the state Payment in Lieu Of Taxes program, in which the state reimburses towns for tax money it could have received from non-taxable colleges and hospitals. Gov. William A. O'Neill proposed increasing the amount reimbursed to 30 percent, but CCM supported raising the level to 40 percent.

With concern over providing increased state aid to towns, Cassano said Thursday he has asked for a state inspection of the herb farm. He said it had been vice president because he is the only CCM president not to hold his town's top elected position.

He first became affiliated with CCM when he served as deputy mayor under former Mayor Stephen T. Penny. Cassano explained that Penny agreed to attend meetings of the Capitol Region Council of Governments, while he took CCM.

He was elected as a CCM director in 1982 and has served ever since. He also has served for seven years on the National League of Cities.

While these memberships are good for the town, Cassano, a Democrat, acknowledged that it is also good politically and personally.

"It's good exposure for me," he said. Cassano in 1984 unsuccessfully ran for the state Senate, and considered running again last year. His service with CCM, especially as president, has allowed him to make contacts with politicians around the state.

As for how local Republicans feel about Cassano, GOP Director Thomas H. Ferguson said his participation in state and national groups does not detract from his local responsibilities.

Ferguson, who was a student of Cassano's and has served with him for the last four years, said Cassano supplies the town with detailed information about the effect of national and state developments.

Carl Zinsner, a former GOP director who defeated Cassano for the state Senate, said Cassano works hard and serves his constituents well, even though they disagree on certain points. "I respect that," Zinsner said.

CCM has been criticized by some Republican state legislators as being too liberal. However, Cassano said he is "very middle of the road."

Manchester/Area Towns In Brief

Authority announces new fund
Great T. Dubno, the executive director of the Connecticut Housing Finance Authority, has announced two important developments in the home mortgage program.

First, $87 million in new home mortgage funds are available at an 8 percent fixed interest rate. Second, newly-increased sales prices limits will expand the number of one-to-four unit detached homes or condominium units qualifying for these low-cost mortgages.

Pools to open Saturday

The Manchester Recreation Department has announced that Globe Hollow, Sautlers and Waddell pools will open Saturday at 1 p.m. for open swims.

Swanson Pool will not open because of construction delays. The pool will open when outside contract work is completed.

Swim lessons during Session I have been canceled at Swanson Pool. To accommodate Manchester residents in the Swanson pool area, the town will increase Session I swim lessons at Globe Hollow.

Water mains to be flushed

The Manchester Water Department is scheduled to flush water mains in the following areas from Monday to June 26 from 7:15 a.m. to 3 p.m.:

From Bidwell Street north to Center Street, from East Hartford east to Keeney Street, Goslee Drive, Cooper Street and Cross Street.

During the flushing, there may be discoloration of water and reduced pressure. Homeowners should avoid using the water until it clears. This will prevent rust and sediment from being brought into the home's system.

If sediment does get into a home's hot water tank, the homeowner should wait until the water clears and then open the faucet at the bottom of the tank to drain the collected material.

It normally takes a couple of hours for the water to clear in a home. If water appears discolored for an extended period, call 647-3115.

Coventry beach, park open

COVENTRY — Lifeline Beach and Patriot's Park at Coventry Lake will open Monday. The swimming season runs to Aug. 31. Lifeguards will be on duty from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on weekdays and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on weekends.

Bolton renews Packman's contract

BOLTON — The Board of Education has renewed Superintendent Richard E. Packman's contract for another three years.

Packman's salary will rise to $85,000 for the 1987-88 school year under the new contract, said school board member Michael L. Parsons. Packman's salary this year, including a bonus under the state Education Enhancement Act, is $49,500.

The salary will rise 9.5 percent in 1988-89, to $90,325. The salary is open for negotiation in the third year.

Parsons, who negotiated the contract with Packman, said the decision to renew was based on a "very positive evaluation."

Connecticut In Brief

O'Neill sticks with position on tax

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill says he will stick with the position he took on business taxes before the General Assembly adjourned without acting on the issue.

O'Neill on Thursday reiterated his opposition to the so-called classification aspect, that of allowing towns to tax commercial property at a higher rate than residential property.

The governor also said he favored the other aspect that would exempt parent companies from the sales tax on services they provide to subsidiaries.

Some Democrats in the legislature had crafted a bill that included both proposals, but attempts to reach a compromise failed and it is likely O'Neill will call lawmakers back to Hartford for a special session next month to resolve at least the sales tax exemption issue.

He said he would be willing, as he did before the session ended, to go along with some additional property tax relief for towns going through reevaluation to help ease the burden on residential property owners.

O'Neill's budget chief is to meet Monday with legislative leaders to discuss the issue and the need for a special session.

Deer tries to buy pizza

BRIDGEPORT — A young deer, apparently frightened by traffic, ignored the "No Pets" sign and crashed through the front window of a pizza parlor.

The animal slammed its nose through the window of Captain's Pizza on Main Street Thursday and cut itself on broken glass, but the injuries were minor and the deer was later released into the woods in Easton, said Beardsley Zoo Director Gregg Dancho.

Police were summoned by an alarm that went off after the deer broke the window early in the morning.

The deer tried in vain to escape from the pizza parlor, which had closed for the night. Dancho arrived with a tranquilizer gun and net to help release the young buck.

He said the animal may have been fleeing from a car and "the store just happened to be in the way."

Dancho said calls about wild animals, including deer and foxes, popping up around the city have been increasing. He said animals are probably being driven out of their wooded homes by construction in nearby suburbs.

Two couples, man win Lotto

NEWINGTON — A Shelton couple have claimed their third of Tuesday's $7.2 million Lotto jackpot, state lottery officials said.

David and Carol Pendagost, both 25, picked up the first of 20 annual checks for $120,469 on Thursday. They split the jackpot with George and Dorothy Nau, a Fairfield couple in their 60s, and Kevin Hoff, 28, of Milford, who claimed their shares of the winning Wednesday.

Each of the three winning tickets was worth more than $2.4 million.

Man wanted to swim, drowned

MIDDLETOWN — A 33-year-old man drowned in the Connecticut River after deciding during a walk with a friend to jump in for a swim, police said.

Ernest McGill, a Middletown resident, was pronounced dead on arrival at Middlesex Memorial Hospital at 3:39 p.m. Thursday after a police diver rescue team pulled him from the river, police said.

McGill's friend, whose identity was not released, had jumped into the river in an attempt to save McGill but could not find him and called authorities, according to police.

Police said they were continuing to investigate the incident, but that no foul play was suspected.

Dead woman was strangled

NEW BRITAIN — A woman discovered dead in her bed by her 17-year-old son was strangled, a spokeswoman for the chief state medical examiner's office said following an autopsy.

The body of 45-year-old Marie Nielsen was found in her New Britain apartment Monday at 5 a.m. Thursday by her son, Peter Barrera, who called police, authorities said.

There was no sign of forced entry or robbery at the apartment, police Capt. Edwin Mercier said.

Barrera last saw his mother alive about 4 p.m. Wednesday, he said.

Mercier said police were interviewing neighbors Thursday afternoon.

The cause of death was determined by autopsy.

Documents cast shadow on authority

HARTFORD — Newly released documents raise new questions about how thoroughly the Connecticut Housing Finance Authority reviewed the credentials of the developers of L'Ambiance Plaza in Bridgeport.

The authority released copies of personal financial statements and other references supplied by the principals of Delwood Development International Inc. The developers submitted the information as part of their application for a $15 million construction loan, the third largest in the authority's history.

The half-finished apartment building — a 216-unit, 16-story complex — collapsed April 23, killing 26 construction workers.

The Hartford Courant reported Friday that the newly released records include the names of seven bank executives offered by the Delwood principals as credit references.

The five reached by the Courant said they recalled no inquiry from the authority, a quasi-public agency that issues tax-exempt bonds and makes low-interest loans to developers and individual home buyers.

Kelly has no problem

Police rightfully concerned

HARTFORD (AP) — Chief State's Attorney John J. Kelly says he has no problems with a state police officer's secretly recording a 1985 meeting with a prosecutor.

Lt. Bruce Haines, head of the State Police Organized Crime Investigative Task Force, recorded a March 4, 1985, meeting with Waterbury State's Attorney, Waterbury police Lt. Thomas R. Brown and Joseph Lawler, an inspector from Connolly's office.

The practice of a police officer recording such a meeting is unusual, but not illegal. The recording was criticized by Connolly after attorneys in two pending criminal cases revealed that Haines had secretly taped the meeting.

"In view of what I know of the events in Waterbury, some of which clearly have been reviewed, I can understand police concern when they have to deal in the Waterbury area," Kelly said Thursday.

He referred to the criminal case of former Waterbury Assistant State's Attorney Arthur McDonald, a grand jury investigation into alleged corruption in Waterbury and criminal charges against Brown that stemmed from the meeting.

Kelly also said some of his private meetings have been secretly taped without his knowledge by "members of the criminal justice system." He declined to explain further, but said the recording was not made by state police.

Kelly, contacted at his office in Wallingford, said it was his policy to investigate disputes between police and prosecutors if asked. He said he hadn't received any formal complaints by Thursday morning.

Public Safety Commissioner Lester J. Forst, commander of the state police, said Wednesday he supported Haines' decision.

Gov. William A. O'Neill said Thursday he had spoken to Forst about the matter and backed the action.

"I stated to him ... that I don't believe in taping people unless it is during the investigation of a crime.

Inefficiency plagues state office

HARTFORD (AP) — The secretary of the state's office is plagued by inefficiency, lack of information, squabbling between divisions and an unclear sense of mission, a management consultant has concluded in a report that recommends sweeping reorganization.

"We wanted the facts out," Deputy Secretary of the State Bernard P. Auger said of the report by Paul Marwick, Mitchell & Co. "It's a report that strikes the loudest answers, so we can do something about it."

The consultant was hired in September to review the operation of the Secretary of the State John R. Tashjian's office, which came under fire for inefficiency during the secretary's re-election campaign last year. Tashjian had pledged to improve her office's operations.

The consultant found the agency's second-highest expenses, after providing the public with information, are for management. The agency spends 16 percent of its personnel costs on supervision, the consultant found, saying that total "seems excessive."

"An organization where the second most common and costly activity is managing other people must be inefficient at accomplishing its mission," the consultant wrote.

Further, the consultant wrote, dissatisfaction with service has been expressed by lawyers, bankers and businesses that regularly use the corporations and uniform commercial code division. "Serious public relations problems are facing the secretary of the state," the report said.

Also proposed was the creation of a new planning office, which would report directly to the deputy secretary. His first task, the consultant suggested, should be to develop statements spelling out the mission of each division.

"The secretary hasn't made a definite decision whether we're going to go with the plan," Auger said. "But she is interested in adopting some parts of it and maybe all of it."

Auger agreed that "there have been problems with the personality clashes between the divisions." The consultant recommended a full-scale reorganization of the office.

Psychiatrist says Ross is sexual sadist

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Michael Ross, who could be put to death for the slaying of a girl, is a sexual sadist who is confused because he doesn't feel guilty about his crimes, according to a psychiatrist.

"Mr. Ross is distressed because feelings of guilt and remorse did not well up when he would think about the rapes, but he wished they would," said Dr. Fred Berlin, director of Johns Hopkins University's sexual disorder clinic.

"Instead he would become erotically aroused when thinking about rapes and murder," Berlin said on Thursday.

Berlin, who specializes in sexual deviant disorders, testified for the defense in the third day of the penalty phase of Ross' trial. The defense is trying to save Ross from the death penalty for his conviction June 5 on six counts of capital felony in the rape and kidnap murders of four eastern Connecticut girls.

Testimony is scheduled to resume at 10 a.m. today.

Ross is currently serving a 120-year prison term for the murders of two other Windham County women.

The Bridgeport Superior Court jury that convicted him must now decide whether there was an aggravating factor, such as the crime being committed in an especially heinous way, or a mitigating factor, such as mental condition or severe emotional state, in any of the murders.

Under Connecticut law, if an aggravating factor is found and no mitigating factor is found, the judge would impose the death penalty. If a mitigating factor is found, the defendant's life would be spared.

The psychiatrist said Ross was suffering from a mental illness called sexual sadism in which "the individual is sexually turned on by thoughts or ideas of degrading, causing suffering."

"Often in order to reach climax he would need to think about strangling women and he would achieve orgasm," Berlin said. He said this occurs to Ross, 27, even now in his prison cell.

The last person executed in Connecticut was Joseph "Mad Dog" Taborsky in 1960.

Auditor says health officials broke law

HARTFORD — The state auditor says the Department of Health Services broke the law when it hired an out-of-state toxicologist while it had qualified in-house applicants.

"It sounds like somebody over there either doesn't care what the law says or just finds a way around it," said auditor Henry J. Becker Jr. "The law is clear enough."

"This is I think, symptomatic of what's been happening with the merit system over the last 10 years," Auditor Leo V. Donohue said.

The issue, prompted by an anonymous letter in May to the auditor, concerns a hiring of Hari V. Rao as a toxicologist in the Toxic Hazards Section of the health department last fall. He was hired before the list of qualified candidates was formally certified by the state personnel division, according to the auditors.

Dr. Peter D. Galbraith, chief of the department's bureau of health promotion, said the appointment was made on a provisional basis and made permanent once the list of qualified candidates was certified.

He also said he was satisfied procedures had been properly followed.

"If you've got two equally qualified candidates, one in-house and the other out, I would go in-house. That's just good management. But when you've got somebody who's clearly outstanding who can make a significant contribution, you go for that one."

He said Rao was in the latter category.

In a letter to Gov. William A. O'Neill released Thursday, Becker and Donohue said that state law bars the hiring of someone outside state service only when it is not practical to appoint from within.

Further, they wrote, "the selection of an appointee before the examination closing date calls into question the validity of the merit system process."

Rao, then a Westfield, N.J., resident, had responded to an advertisement and was offered the job in September. He accepted it on the condition that the salary be $44,000 — the amount he had been making. That was $4,300 more than the job was supposed to pay.

The personnel division within the state Department of Administrative Services approved the increase and the provisional hiring, Galbraith said.

The list of qualified candidates, with Rao ranked No. 1, was approved Feb. 25, three months after Rao had begun work on a provisional basis. The list showed three other department employees with qualifying exam scores.

"When you make a provisional appointment, you make damn sure the person is going to score well on the exam," Galbraith said.

Becker scoffed at the notion of an "examination." "This so-called exam is only a resume and an interview and a rating of these people," Becker said. "It's not a written examination. To say that someone he was selected by a merit process is just absurd."

Galbraith acknowledged that there is no written exam. "They draw up a list of questions that seem to be as relevant as possible to the job they're trying to fill. Then they look at all the resumes and credentials and see how people rank."

Asked if the questions were actually put to the applicants, Galbraith said, "Indirectly they are. It's really a test of credentials."

Laurie Gokey, epidemiologist in the toxic hazards section, offered Rao the job on the telephone and then confirmed the offer in a letter Sept. 29 and said she was working on his $44,000 salary request.

"If acceptable to you, your anticipated starting date will be Nov. 7, 1986," Gokey wrote.

Kennedy's uncle, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., was among the leaders in a successful effort in 1985 to block Reynolds' promotion to the department's No. 3 job, associate attorney general.

In urging senators to vote against Reynolds' confirmation, Kennedy said, "In my view, Mr. Reynolds has done enough damage to civil rights in his current level in the Department of Justice, and he does not deserve to be promoted."

Reynolds personally made the final decision to hire the son of the former president, said Deborah Burnison-Wade, a spokeswoman for the civil rights division.

The younger Kennedy, a first-year law student at New York University, applied to the attorney general's honor program, which each year hires and trains "high-ranking law students in the nation," Ms. Burnison-Wade said.

Kennedy and the other clerks will rotate through most of the civil rights division's sections, including those dealing with discrimination against the handicapped and in employment, housing, education and credit. He also could serve in the division's criminal section.

Goetz holes up in apartment

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz is holed up in his apartment, paying bills and watching television, since being cleared three days ago of attempted murder in the shooting of four youths on a subway train.

"We just visited because we were concerned he was a shut-in," Guardian Angel leader Curtis Sitwa said after he and six other members of the civilian anti-crime patrol spent an hour at Goetz's

Manhattan home Thursday. "We saw (defense attorney Barry) Stolshek last night and he suggested we drop by and give him tactical air support and moral support and just pump him up and let him know that the people are behind him," Sitwa said.

Goetz was acquitted Tuesday of attempted murder, assault and endangerment charges in the Dec. 22, 1984, shootings but was convicted of possessing an illegal

Gejdenson wants NRC official fired

WASHINGTON — President Reagan should fire Thomas M. Roberts, a member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission accused by congressional investigators of misconduct, says the chairman of a House subcommittee that oversees the NRC.

Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., said Thursday in a letter to Reagan that the commissioner has "betrayed the trust you showed when you named him to the NRC" and "demonstrated a contempt for the process of government."

"Mr. Roberts' pattern of malfeasance indicates that he cannot be an effective member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission," the congressman said.

Other members of Congress have urged Roberts to resign, citing a case where his office allegedly leaked a classified document to a utility and he quashed an internal investigation of the incident. Gejdenson is the first to call for Roberts to be fired.

Gejdenson, chairman of the House Interior and Insular Affairs subcommittee on general oversight and investigations, pointed to two other instances of alleged wrongdoing he said were recently uncovered by investigators for his subcommittee.

"We would hope the president would do the right thing. This administration has to understand how important having an NRC with unquestionable integrity is," Gejdenson said at a news conference.

In an interview later, the congressman said Roberts "has clearly shown malfeasance in office (and) a failure to understand the role as an NRC commissioner of

Did she or didn't she?

Rice won't say whether she slept with Hart

NEW YORK — Donna Rice refused for reasons of "dignity" to say whether she slept with Gary Hart in the relationship that scuttled his White House bid, and said she now knows to "stick with a single name."

In an interview broadcast Thursday on ABC's "20/20," she also said that Hart hadn't contacted her since he withdrew from the campaign last month, and that a one-time friend "said Donna Rice" by setting a photo of her in Hart's lap to the National Enquirer.

"Everybody wants to get a piece of me," she said in her first TV interview, but she was disappointed with the former candidate for the Democratic nomination. "They see dollar signs and that's been a real turn-off for me."

Interviewer Barbara Walters asked Rice if she had slept with Hart on a yacht trip to Bermuda or at Hart's Washington townhouse, which was being watched by reporters for the National Enquirer. "I don't want to answer you," the 28-year-old Miami woman said. "The reason is because it's a question of dignity. Whether I did, whether I didn't, with Gary Hart or anybody else, I wouldn't answer it one way or another."

During the interview, which was taped on Tuesday, she alternated between saying about what she considered invasion of her privacy to tears about the hurt she said the publicity had caused her people.

She said she thought Hart's withdrawal from the race was "a tragedy."

"I mean, it's awful to see someone that you care about being ripped apart by the press and being dehumanized and exploited," Rice said.

Rice, an actress, model and pharmaceutical saleswoman, said she met Hart at a party at the home of rock musician Don Henley in Aspen, Colo., and later ran into him on a boat in Miami. The latter invited her on the trip to Bermuda, she said.

Rice said Hart told her he was married, but the two "didn't discuss" it.

Asked what she would say if her younger sister was about to become involved with a married man, Rice replied: "Big sister would say, 'Cathy — that's her name — there's a lot of single men out there. Stick with a single man.'"

Walters said Rice was not paid for the interview. ABC paid for her transportation and accommodations in New York, said Maury Perl, a "20/20" spokeswoman.

Perl wrote from the campaign less than a week after the Herald reported that she spent part of a weekend with Rice at his townhouse while his wife was in Colorado.

Rice said after Hart and a

Kennedy works with Reynolds

WASHINGTON — John F. Kennedy Jr., whose father, the slain president, became a hero to the civil rights movement, is starting a summer job under the Reagan administration's controversial civil rights chief, William Bradford Reynolds.

Kennedy, 24, began work Monday at the Justice Department's civil rights division as a $33-a-week summer law clerk.

The son of former President John F. Kennedy and nephew of the late attorney general, Robert F. Kennedy, is one of seven summer clerks in the honors program.

Reynolds, who has been an assistant attorney general in charge of the division since 1981, reversed long-standing department policies in housing, education and hiring, some of which had been espoused by Democratic and Republican administrations as far back as Kennedy's.

This earned him the opposition of civil rights leaders and liberal Democrats in Congress.

Kennedy's uncle, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., was among the leaders in a successful effort in 1985 to block Reynolds' promotion to the department's No. 3 job, associate attorney general.

In urging senators to vote against Reynolds' confirmation, Kennedy said, "In my view, Mr. Reynolds has done enough damage to civil rights in his current level in the Department of Justice, and he does not deserve to be promoted."

Reynolds personally made the final decision to hire the son of the former president, said Deborah Burnison-Wade, a spokeswoman for the civil rights division.

PZC words insult many homeowners

Well-to-do people take better care of their neighborhoods than middle-class people do. At least that's what the Planning and Zoning Commission seems to think.

The commission's bias was revealed during a Monday discussion of a luxury housing complex planned in southeast Manchester. As part of the subdivision proposal, the Developer Corp. wanted to place grass islands at the end of three dead-end streets, something the town Public Works Department is traditionally against.

Public Works Director George Kandra explained that in many cases, the town eventually becomes responsible for maintaining such islands, even though provisions in a property owner's deed may place upkeep responsibilities in the hands of the homeowner.

Although the commission has allowed grass islands in some developments, Kandra added that many of them deteriorate over the years, especially from salt the town places on the streets during the winter.

In the end, the PZC knocked the islands out of the Dereketh plans, which have not been officially acted on yet. But not before making some comments that insulted a lot of people in Manchester.

The commission, it seemed, didn't believe people in Dereketh's subdivision would allow the grass islands to deteriorate. That's because the homes being planned there would be priced at $300,000 and up.

These sentiments were voiced by several commission members, who said in a nutshell that people who live in $400,000 homes are going to take care of their neighborhood.

Considering that the commission has ruled out similar grass islands in other subdivisions, the remarks imply that most of the residents of Manchester are not as neat. Does the commission think that people who live in lower-priced homes have less pride in their neighborhoods than those who live in exclusive subdivisions?

Worse yet, such comments represent bad planning. When the commission makes planning and zoning decisions, it should do so based on the zoning regulations and its own professional judgment. The income of the people who will live in a proposed subdivision should not be the criterion for judging an application or parts of it.

The Dereketh 98-house proposal was sent back to the company for revisions, including changes in the dead-end grass islands. The application could come before the commission as early as August for a decision. Let's hope that at that time the PZC members can leave their biases home.

Local 'Star Wars' bound for the courts

By Richard M. Diamond

"Star Wars" — Manchester's version, that is — will, no doubt, ultimately end up in the courts. That is because the decision as to whether to grant a developer's request to open a laser-gaming entertainment center in the former Shop Rite building on East Middle Turnpike will hinge on the interpretation of Article II (Section 11.01.04) of the town's zoning regulations.

Section 11.01.04 permits billiard or pool rooms, bowling alleys, theaters and similar amusement enterprises but excludes carnivals, shooting galleries, freak shows and similar carnivals and amusement devices. Is the laser-gaming entertainment a form of participatory theater that qualifies as a permitted use, or is it a modern-age, electronic shooting gallery or amusement device that is prohibited under the existing regulations?

Trying to apply today's meaning to yesterday's language will be a difficult task for town Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas O'Marra, who must make a ruling when the developers seek a building permit.

Regardless of how O'Marra rules, his decision is certain to be appealed to the town's Zoning Board of Appeals by either the developers or by those opposed to the center. And, regardless of who appeals before the ZBA, there will most likely be a court challenge before the issue is finally settled.

GIVEN THE SIZE of the opposition, with thousands of signatures on petitions circulated by some very determined individuals, this court challenge is bound to be a long, drawn-out affair. Therefore, it came as no surprise when it was reported that the developers had purchased

The future of arms control

By Barry Schwed

WASHINGTON — The skies were blue, the air pollution-free on Maryland's Eastern Shore. Two dozen reporters tried to keep their minds focused on the future of arms control.

What they heard from a stream of senior Reagan administration officials who drove over from Washington in sleek limousines or were dropped in by helicopter for the two-day U.S.-sponsored seminar was mostly on the pessimistic side.

There are still a number of problems that are not even close to being resolved in an agreement in Geneva to negotiate and test nuclear-armed missiles. One official said it might take until March.

Another said a treaty by year's end was possible, but he would not bet on it. Where bigger and more dangerous weapons are concerned — the bombers, missiles and submarines that can span continents with nuclear devastation — the Soviets are not even willing to negotiate unless and until President Reagan restricts his search for an anti-missile defense in space.

And Reagan has ruled that out. "Star Wars" is going ahead. A SENIOR presidential adviser, Paul H. Nitze, is trying to persuade the president to authorize special U.S.-Soviet talks. The idea would be to take some of the steam out of the controversy over the Strategic Defense Initiative by figuring out which kinds of technology could be tested legally.

So far, Reagan is resisting. An agreement on missiles in Europe and Asia seemed in the bag only last week when the North Atlantic Council, at the behest of Secretary of State George P. Shultz, gave its approval in Reykjavik, Iceland, to the terms Shultz had worked out with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in April.

The strategic weapons accord, on the other hand, was never considered a cinch. But Reagan and Gorbachev had tentatively agreed last October at their Reykjavik summit meeting to slash U.S. and Soviet strategic arsenals by 50 percent. So hopes were raised at least a little bit.

It's been eight years since the two superpowers concluded their last major arms control agreement. That was SALT II, limiting various categories of long-range weapons. Reagan called it "fatally flawed" and decided last year it was not worth keeping alive.

But he joyously reported to the United States that he had a "historic opportunity" to sharply reduce and possibly eliminate Soviet intermediate-range missiles.

IN MOSCOW, however, a senior Soviet official was telling a ranking American that Shultz may have "misunderstood" Gorbachev as saying the Soviets were willing to dismantle about 40 shorter-range rocket launchers in Asia.

U.S. negotiator Max M. Kampelman left Wednesday for Geneva determined to battle that out with Soviet negotiator Yuli Vorontsov.

And that's not the only problem. U.S. negotiators are still trying to get the Soviets to remove 33 other medium-range missiles from their Asian territory while refusing to yield to Soviet demands that 33 matching U.S. rockets not be stored in Alaska.

Japan and China claim they are threatened by the Soviet missiles. The Soviets feel the same way about U.S. rockets in Alaska. Whatever the outcome, verification of the agreement will be a major problem. It will require the building from U.S. Life Realty Corp. It would have been highly unlikely that the owner of the building would have allowed its property to be tied up indefinitely pending possible litigation.

Apparently the developers have decided to take their chances because there are multiple options for the building. The lower level is already being advertised for warehousing and the main level, in the event the laser-gaming request is denied, is suitable for retail stores or conversion to offices.

Thus, in their anticipated appearance before the ZBA, the developers cannot claim a hardship any more than the opponents can assert that the laser game is immoral. The morality of the undertaking may be an ethical consideration for those who may or may not wish to participate should the game become a reality, but it is not a legal or zoning issue.

WHAT IT BOILS DOWN TO is whether or not the proposal creates a nuisance inconsistent with Section 11.01.04 prohibitions. If there were no such section in the zoning regulations, the opposition would be on much thinner ice in claiming, as they do, that the opening of the laser game would create increased traffic, noise, congestion and loitering.

The site is zoned commercially (Business II) and if Shop Rite had been a highly successful operation it might have remained open 24 hours a day and generated three times the traffic without running afoul of the zoning laws. The town simply would have insisted on adequate traffic control measures to ease the added congestion.

The crux of the matter, therefore, is why Section 11.01.04 of the regulations prohibits carnivals, shooting galleries, freak shows and similar attractions and amusement devices in a Business

II zone, which is defined as a commercial trade area for general public shopping convenience. Since Business Zones II, IV and V permit a more intensive type of commercial building, and Zone V specifically permits amusement arcades, a good case can be made that the intent of Section 11.01.04 was to protect Business Zone II (and Zone III) from some of the more intrusive and potentially objectionable activities.

IT CAN BE FURTHER ARGUED that the items prohibited in the section are more prone to attracting outside noise, loitering and undesirable behavior than a pool room, bowling alley, theater or similar amusement enterprise, all of which are permitted.

The 864 question, however, is the category in which a space-age, laser-gaming entertainment center belongs. By definition it is a permitted use or a prohibited use? The granting of a permit some 20 years ago to a still-existing, indoor archery range may have given some clue to the town's thinking at that time, but that type of enterprise, rather than establishing a precedent, seemed to be a case of an archery range "slipping through the ambiguous cracks" of Section 11.01.04.

There is no question that the zoning regulations need updating to remove any such ambiguities, but such revisions will be too late for this case, which will be left in the hands of persuasive attorneys and judicial judges.

Persian Gulf could spark a world war

WASHINGTON — Pentagon strategists have a recurring nightmare that comes closer to reality with every passing day. The Joint Chiefs of Staff have described it tersely: The Persian Gulf is the most dangerous place on Earth, the trouble spot where World War III is most likely to originate.

Yet they cannot permit hostile forces to grab control of this strategic waterway, which is the free world's oil faucet. We have had access to the military strategists' thinking, as it appears in classified Pentagon planning papers. These experts are determined to keep President Reagan's commitment to defend America's "vital interests" in the Persian Gulf.

They are worried about the contentious Ayatollah Khomeini, who has proclaimed his fierce hatred of America. But they are more worried about what will happen after he finally succumbs to the ravages of age.

They fear that he will leave Iran in chaos and that the disciplined, underground, communist Tudeh party will seize power in Tehran. But they don't think the Marxist usurpers will be able to establish their authority over the entire country. This could force Iran to appeal to the Soviet Union for help. The Soviets already have two dozen divisions waiting just north of the Iranian border, practicing mock invasions of Iran. An opportunity to extend Soviet power to the warm waters of the Persian Gulf would be hard for the Kremlin to resist.

A Soviet takeover of Iran would also give the Kremlin power to stop the flow of oil to the West. The Pentagon planners view this possibility as "intolerable." The United States would be compelled to resist, but U.S. conventional forces couldn't possibly stop the Soviet juggernaut. This could be accomplished only with nuclear weapons.

How real is this nuclear nightmare? Would the Kremlin dare to risk World War III even for the prize of Persian Gulf oil? The secret planning papers point out that the Soviets have already demonstrated in Afghanistan that they are willing to use military power when the stakes are high enough. In a secret analysis, the Joint Chiefs of Staff have warned that the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in late 1979 demonstrated a willingness to apply direct military force to achieve political objectives.

Meanwhile, some 200,000 Russian troops are prepared to move into Iran behind an awesome battle line of tanks. One secret report states that "the Soviets have established command and control capability necessary to conduct large-scale military operations (in Iran)."

There's no doubt at the Pentagon that the Soviets have the military might to barrel through Iran to the Persian Gulf. Underlying it nicely, the Joint Chiefs warn that the Russian invasion force "would possess numerical advantages in both personnel and equipment over U.S. forces."

The Pentagon experts doubt that the Soviets would halt short of the Persian Gulf for anything less than a credible threat of nuclear war. Indeed, one "limited strategic option" would give the American commander 16 nuclear bombs at his disposal, to be dropped on the Soviet invaders as they pour through the "choke points" — the passageways through the rugged mountains of northern Iran.

The concept of a nuclear confrontation limited to Iran could turn into the ultimate nightmare. How likely is the nuclear fuse to be ignited by events in Iran? The world strategists in Washington still count on sanity to prevail. They hold grimly to the belief that the cautious elements on both sides will control the levers and somehow muddle through without Armageddon.

That's oil, folks. Even the dark cloud of the world petroleum glut has a silver lining for the oil lobby, which is trying to use the situation as a lever to loosen federal regulations. Warning that growing dependence on imported oil will bring shortages and gas lines by the 1990s or sooner, the oil industry argues that the solution is to encourage domestic production. And this encouragement, Big Oil suggests, should take the form of weaker environmental rules, fewer restrictions on public land leases and tax breaks for the oil companies. One thing there's never a shortage of in this town is snake oil.

Mini-editorial
The Mexicans have developed a new breed of mini-cow, which eats less, is easier to fence in and produces almost as much milk as a full-size cow. This reminds us of an experiment some years back, when political scientists crossed a yellow-dog Democrat with a Republican dinosaur. All they got was a lot of bull.

U.S./World In Brief

Cheney denounces North for refusal

WASHINGTON — The ranking Republican on the House Iran-Contra committee says if Oliver L. North refuses to cooperate with Congress, even his supporters would recognize him as a man in legal trouble instead of a "pillar of patriotism."

Republican Dick Cheney of Wyoming joined House panel chairman Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., on Thursday in a strong denunciation of North's refusal to testify privately this week. North's refusal to appear before the House and Senate lawyers was told to forge an "ironclad agreement" with North's attorneys to assure his appearance at the hearings.

The Senate panel scheduled a meeting today to hear reports on the lawyers' discussions regarding the fired White House aide who managed the secret arms sale to Iran and the private re-supply program to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Hamilton said he hoped there would be an agreement by early next week, when the panels receive public hearings after a two-week break.

Pentagon to review gulf plans

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon will review its Persian Gulf plans to make sure U.S. servicemen and ships are safe from terrorist attacks in the face of CIA warnings that such strikes are likely, congressional sources say.

The reassessment was promised during an informal meeting Thursday between top administration national security officials and a group of senators worried about President Reagan's plan to protect 11 Kuwaiti tankers starting next month, the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"It is clear that the risks are larger than the administration is willing to concede at this point," said Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., one of the participants in the closed-door, two-hour session.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said, "We need to get all the intelligence together. I want to see an integrated analysis of the threat, one that includes not only military risks, but also the capabilities and intentions of carrying out the threats."

Voters cast ballots in Bahamas

NASSAU, Bahamas — Prime Minister Lynden Pindling faced the toughest political challenge since 1967 as voters weighing opposition charges of government corruption and complicity in the drug trade cast ballots today.

At stake were the 49 seats in the House of Assembly, which will in turn determine whether Pindling, 57, is re-elected or forced to step down to challenger Kendall Isaacs, 61, a wealthy Nassau lawyer.

The election was considered a toss-up, and both sides predicted victory. The U.S. State Foreign Relations Committee sent three observers to determine whether the balloting was fair and to ensure both candidates understood U.S. concern about stopping the drug trade, said Allan Weinstein, president of Boston University's Center for Democracy and head of the observer group.

Pindling's Progressive Liberal Party, which won 27 of 49 seats in the 1982 elections, controlled reconstituted this year that resulted in a 49-seat expansion of the cabinet. Pindling's party claim P.L.P. officials deliberately failed to register to invalidate votes that would go to Isaacs' Free National Movement.

Drug guerrillas may meet force

CARACAS, Venezuela — The Venezuelan military is gearing up for a major effort against Colombian drug-linked guerrillas in an attempt to halt the spread of drug plantations in the north. Two national Guard infantry battalions are being sent to the border with Colombia, military sources told The Associated Press. The deployment came after nine guardsmen of the 82nd Airborne were killed by Colombian guerrillas in an ambush here last Saturday.

The military has also requested that Colombia beef up patrols on its side of the border to combat the guerrillas. Greater joint efforts are indispensable, the military sources say, because the fields in Venezuela are being planted under supervision of Colombian drug traffickers and protected by Colombian guerrillas.

Jews angry at Pope over Waldheim

MIAMI — Jewish leaders said they may follow the American Jewish Congress in boycotting a meeting here with Pope John Paul II because of the pope's plans to receive Austrian President Kurt Waldheim in the Vatican.

"It might endanger our visit to Miami," said Rabbi Gilbert Klapperman, president of the Synagogue Council of America. "Everything is an option. We will be considering the matter very seriously."

On Thursday, the 50,000-member American Jewish Congress said its leaders will boycott the Sept. 11 conference. Waldheim has been accused of taking part in Nazi war crimes during World War II.

South Korea nears major crisis

Prime minister prepares for 'extraordinary' measures

SEOUL, South Korea — Prime Minister Lee Han-kye said today that 10 days of street violence threatened to plunge the nation into a major crisis and that the government was prepared to take "extraordinary" measures to stop the protests.

Thousands of students burning firebombs and rocks again buffeted police in the streets of Seoul and several provincial cities. Lee's warning was the first major government statement on the anti-government violence that began June 16. Korean newspapers have speculated that President Chun Doo-hwan's government is considering emergency decrees or martial law to curtail the protests.

"Should it become impossible to restore law and order . . . it would be inevitable for the government to take an extraordinary decision," the prime minister said in a nationwide television address. He did not elaborate.

"The current disturbances, the violent and illegal activities which are precipitating social chaos, will not help attain the goal of genuine democratic development desired by all citizens," Lee said.

Lee, who reports to Chun, urged Koreans to return to their homes, jobs and schools and end the disturbances. "I hope the public clearly realizes that if we should fail to overcome the present difficulties in a peaceful manner, the nation would plunge into a major crisis," he said.

President Reagan sent a letter to Chun urging him not to overreact to street demonstrations. The New York Times reported that the letter called for a resumption of discussions with the political opposition, said an unidentified senior administration official quoted by the newspaper.

Pierce clashes erupted in the streets around several universities in the capital as students set up barricades and pelted riot police with firebombs and rocks. Police armored cars used multiple tear-gas launchers to fire thousands of gas bombs.

Earlier, students threw firebombs, stones and chunks of pavement to break through police lines into the surrounding streets. Faculty members issued a statement demanding the government respect the national will and usher in full democracy. "The people's will has been confirmed," said the statement.

Clashes between students and riot police also were reported in Kwangju, Chongju, Junsan and Chongju.

"Down with the military dictatorship!" the students chanted as they called for the fall of Chun's government and immediate democratic elections.

Budget dispute growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert D. Byrd today called on President Reagan to "stop pointing his fingers" and instead compromise with Congress on the budget, but the president's budget director said no.

"The president ought to get off his high horse and stop pointing his fingers," Byrd said today, reacting to Reagan's criticism of the Democrats' spending plan. Unless the president and Congress begin talking, it will be impossible to cut the record deficits of the Reagan years.

"I'm beginning to think it's just a lost cause," said Byrd. D.W. Va. James C. Miller III, director of the Office of Management and Budget, repeated the administration demand that Congress pass the budget reform that gives the president more power.

"We need to sit down and talk about it. We need rules of the game so we get a budget that is enforced," Miller said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "We don't want to give up anything and have all that we've negotiated for go down the tubes."

The president on Thursday issued a harsh statement and sent forth his aides to denounce the fiscal 1988 budget the Democrats produced. The trillion-plus deficit is a $1.3 billion tax boost — $84.3 billion over three years — and attempts to put Reagan on the spending reduction program.

Their price for meeting our national security needs is for every $1 of defense it will cost $10 in new taxes," the president said in a statement. "That's an offer I can't refuse."

Our national defense is at risk, and we simply cannot agree to a plan that will plunge us into another decade of neglect," Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said in a statement.

Reagan, seeking to turn public attention away from his administration's scandalous foreign policy, plans to begin a series of road trips next week. He's asking the public to pressure Congress to give him more control over the budget.

But Democrats blame the huge federal deficits on Reagan's unwillingness to work with Congress. During Reagan's tenure, the national debt has more than doubled to $2.3 trillion. Interest on that debt is expected to cost taxpayers $140 billion next year.

The Democrats note that Reagan's own budget included some $5 billion in tax boosts, and they contend that spending restraint must be combined with some tax increases to reduce the deficit. But they concede they can't pass those taxes over a presidential veto.

Trying to force the president's hand, the Democrats are working to load on to the budget bill items they hope will shake Reagan from his no-tax strategy.

Besides the defense-tax cut question, the Democrats also took steps to attach to the bill an increase in the national debt that will be urgently needed by late July and along with them they plan a still-forming proposal to strengthen the Gramm-Rudman deficit law.

Charles Glass of Palos Verdes Estates, Calif., discusses the kidnapping of his son, Charles, in Lebanon, Glass' son, a former ABC-TV news correspondent, was grabbed by 14 men, beaten and stuffed into a car truck Wednesday. The kidnappers also abducted the son of Lebanon's defense minister.

Minister says Shiite group grabbed son, U.S. newsman

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's defense minister said today he was told the Shiite Muslim group Hezbollah kidnapped his son, Charles, in Lebanon, Glass' son, a former ABC-TV news correspondent, was grabbed by 14 men, beaten and stuffed into a car truck Wednesday. The kidnappers also abducted the son of Lebanon's defense minister.

Hezbollah has a base only yards from where Glass and Ouseiran were kidnapped Wednesday in the Ouzai suburb of Moslem west Beirut. The Syrians, who deployed in Beirut's Moslem sector Feb. 22 to quell militia anarchy man a check-point some 350 yards away.

The sources, who commented on condition of anonymity, said Syrian officers contacted the leadership of Hezbollah, or Party of God, overnight and "firmly demanded the quick release" of Glass, 36, and Ali Ouseiran, 40.

Defense Minister Adel Ouseiran, a powerful Shiite Moslem personality, told The Associated Press in an interview today. "I have been told that Hezbollah carried out the abductions. But I personally make no accusations."

No group has claimed responsibility for the kidnapping. Aides to Ouseiran earlier told the AP that the minister was up all night making contacts with Syrian officials and authorities of Hezbollah in an effort to gain the release of his son and Glass.

The sources close to the Syrian army said the commando also contacted Sheikh Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, the spiritual guide of Hezbollah, an Iranian-backed fundamentalist group, and conveyed the demand.

"No threats were made in relaying the demand. But it was clearly stated that the Syrian command regards the abduction as detrimental to Syria's role in safeguarding west Beirut's security," one source said.

Hezbollah is believed to be an umbrella for smaller underground factions that have claimed the abduction of most of the 25 foreigners missing in Lebanon.

The gunmen were travelling in four cars. In Washington, the State Department issued a statement condemning the kidnapping as "another terrorist attempt to manipulate the United States through our concern for our citizens."

Dick Howser, to the end, didn't ask 'why me?'

By Doug Tucker
The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Never once in his losing battle against brain cancer did Dick Howser ask, "Why me?" says an official of the Kansas City Royals.

"He said, 'Why not me?'" Royals president Joe Burk told about 1,200 mourners Thursday who gathered for a memorial service to the former Royals manager. Burk, who named Howser as Royals' manager in 1981, said he spent his final months counting his blessings.

Not cursing his fate, Howser died Wednesday at 51, almost 11 months after doctors partially removed a malignant tumor from the left side of his brain. "Dick said, 'I have lived a good life. God has blessed me,'" said Burk, one of several speakers at the 45-minute service. "He said, 'I have so much to be thankful for. God has blessed me.'" As Howser neared the end, Burk said, "He once told me, 'Joe, keep laughing. Keep smiling. I am not afraid to die.'" Several speakers noted the courage Howser showed in his ordeal.

Howser was ready for the final road trip, Burk said. "He was ready to go home." Serving as pallbearers for Thursday night's service were Royals manager Dick Howser's wife, public relations director Dean Vogelizer; general manager John Schuerholz; trainer Mickey Cobby; Howser's brother-in-law, Jerry Winship; and Burk. "There is no doubt that Dick left us too soon, and that's a very difficult thing to understand," Burk said. "God, we commit to you the soul of a precious friend."

Howser's clergyman, the Rev. Jim Wells, read several passages from Howser's own Bible. "Good guys occasionally do finish first," Wells said. "Dick finished first as a winner."

Wells noted that more than 14,000 cards and letters had come in from all over the world for Howser and said the stricken manager frequently prayed "for all the people who had sent him cards."

"He once told me 'Jim, I'm going to be okay. One way or another, I'm going to be a winner in this thing. But please take care of Nancy,'" Burk said.

MSC United holding tryouts

The Manchester Soccer Club United (boys born in 1977) will hold tryouts on Thursday from 7-8 p.m. at the Kennedy Road soccer complex. Interested boys should bring a soccer ball, soccer gear, goalie equipment (if applicable) and must be accompanied by their parent or guardian.

For further information, contact Andrew Ruganits at 643-1228 or Leo Bogli at 649-0966.

Local coach, players in all-star tilt

East Catholic High baseball coach Jim Penders will be one of the three coaches to lead the Connecticut High School Coaches Association All-Star team against a team of Massachusetts all-stars at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., on Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

Rockville's Art Wheelock and North Haven's Bob DeMayo will also coach the state team.

East Catholic's Kevin Riggs, headed for East Carolina University on a baseball scholarship, will be on the Nutmeg squad along with Manchester High's Jon Row. East Hartford's Tim Cain and Paul Cavacale are two of the four pitchers on the squad.

Easter Seal tourney rescheduled

The second annual Easter Seal Slow Pitch Softball Tournament has been rescheduled for Saturday and Sunday, July 11-12, at Fitzgerald Field. The annual fund raiser was postponed from last weekend due to wet weather.

Because of the delay, registration has been reopened and male, female and coed teams in pickup and organized recreational categories are welcome. There are prizes for top fund raisers and trophies for the tournament winner. Minimum amount raised per team is $150.

For further information, call Kelley Olson at 1-800-874-7687.

UofH names Gooley baseball coach

WEST HARTFORD — Dan Gooley, head baseball coach at Quinnipiac College the past 11 years, has been named coach at the University of Hartford. It was announced Thursday. Gooley replaces Bill Denehy, who was fired on April 18.

Gooley, 46, is a 1970 graduate of Quinnipiac. His teams in 11 years have gone 203-126 and in 1983 they went to the NCAA Division II World Series. He had only two losing teams.

Gooley was selected from 78 applicants.

NBA championship ratings are up

NEW YORK — The championship series between the Los Angeles Lakers and Boston Celtics was the highest-rated NBA finale in history, with a Nielsen rating of 18.9, CBS-TV said Thursday.

The rating was 15 percent ahead of last year's NBA finals, which had a record 14.1.

Shriver wants major title

By Robert Millward
The Associated Press

EASTBOURNE, England — Pam Shriver figures that if a couple of breaks go her way she can win a major tennis tournament, a victory at the $500,000 Pilkington Glass tennis tournament into her first Grand Slam title next week at Wimbledon.

But standing in her way today at the women's grasscourt event was her regular doubles partner, the world's No. 1 player, Martina Navratilova.

Shriver, seeded fourth, faced top-seeded Navratilova in a battle of Americans in one semifinal. Second-seeded American Chris Evert met Czechoslovak Helena Sukova, seeded third, in the other.

Shriver, now 25, reached the final of the U.S. Open in 1978 at 16. Despite several semifinal appearances at Grand Slam events, she has failed since even to reach that.

"If I finish my career and I haven't won a Grand Slam tournament, I am not going to look back with remorse and think 'Why didn't it happen to me?'"

"It's not that I haven't tried," Shriver said. "I need a or a break or two and I will win a big tournament."

"When you're on the borderline, you just need a little bit of help," she said.

Entering today's match, Shriver pointed out she had won nine matches in as many days, all on grass. Last Sunday, she won the Edgemoor Cup at Birmingham, an event not contested by anyone else in the world's top ten.

Shriver acknowledged that Navratilova, with whom she has won 16 Grand Slam doubles titles, was the world's most difficult opponent on grass.

Navratilova has won 68 matches in a row on English grass and was gunning for her sixth consecutive title at both Eastbourne and Wimbledon.

Thursday's play saw the leading players in action twice as organizers staged the third round and quarterfinals to catch up on a day lost to rain.

Shriver beat Australian No. 14 seed Elizabeth Smylie 6-4, 6-1, then No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina 6-3, 6-3.

Navratilova beat No. 12 seed Robin White of the U.S. 6-4, 6-3, then ousted unseeded French player Isabelle Demongeot 7-5, 6-3 on an outside court.

Navratilova found herself playing in front of some 200 spectators, mostly standing, because organizers had to constantly switch matches to complete the two rounds.

Evert beat countrywoman Wendy White 6-3, 6-4, then whipped 19th-seeded Soviet Larissa Savchenko 6-3, 6-1.

Sukova beat Australian Elizabeth Minter 7-5, 6-2 after being a point away from 6-4 in the first set.

Then she struggled past another unseeded player, South African Rosalyn Fairbank 6-7, 6-3, 6-6.

Edmonton's Glen Sather in number of games.

I have a good relationship with Phil, and I think I'm a winner. I know New York wants a winner, and I intend to be one," Bergeron said. "I know the Rangers pretty well. They're a good team, and I'll be working with Phil to have a better team. I'd like to start the season tomorrow."

Bergeron said the decision to move was made with his wife and four children.

I had a good relationship with the general manager in Quebec, but maybe the time had come for a change. I think we made a good deal," he said.

This year's festival boasts free rides on an antique horse-drawn trolley, a craft fair and bargain prices on strawberry shortcake.

Strawberry Festival

The Manchester Kiwanis Club will serve the strawberry shortcake on the grounds of Foss & O'Neill's engineering firm at 146 Hartford Road.

This year you'll pay $2 per portion — 25 cents less than last year.

The shortcake will be served from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., along with coffee, soda, tea and cocoa.

The profit goes to the Lutz Children's Museum. If you want some more substantial food, the Masons will be selling hot dogs from carts at Cheney Homestead, Foss & O'Neill and the Connecticut Firemen's Historical Museum.

While you eat, you'll be entertained by Bennet Junior High School's award-winning dance band, from 10:30 to 11:45 a.m., and by the Manchester Senior Citizens' Jazz Band from 12:30 to 2 p.m.

Don't miss the antique cars, displayed on the lawn of the Multi-Circuits building, 130 Hartford Road.

Antique sale

Then walk next door to the grounds of the Cheney Homestead, where the Manchester Historical Society will have its annual antique show, under the direction of Gail and Gene Dickenson. It will also be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Profit from this keeps the Manchester Historical Society in business, both at the homestead, and at the new Museum of Local History.

If it rains heavily, both the strawberries and the antique will be moved to Waddell School, on the corner of Broad Street and West Middle Turnpike.

Local history, fire museums

When you're done at the antique show, board the free horse-drawn trolley, and take a ride up to the Museum of Local History on Cedar Street. There you'll find 14 of Manchester's finest craftspeople, displaying and selling their handmade dolls, cradles, pewter, stained glass and other works.

The Connecticut Firemen's Historical Museum, in the old Cheney fire house on Pine Street, will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Special visits from Smokey Bear, Woodsey the Owl, and a computerized talking fire plug are expected. There will also be a mobile theater where fire safety will be taught to children.

At 2 p.m., Professor John Sutherland, director of the Institute for Local History at Manchester Community College, will present his slide show, "Cheney Brothers Was the World." It will be shown in the lobby of the Ribbon Mill apartments, 130 Pine St. Upstairs, you can tour through several model apartments.

Lutz Museum

If the crowds get too intense at the historic district, you may wish to go over to the Lutz Children's Museum, where an auxiliary shortcake table will be set up from noon to 4 p.m. Live animal shows are scheduled for 1 and 3 p.m. At 2 and 4 p.m., a slide program called "The People of Manchester, 50 to 100 Years Ago," will be shown.

Crafts activities will be set up for the youngsters.

If you're still craving strawberry shortcake after all this, then head for North United Methodist Church, 300 Parker St., where the Strawberry Festival Dinner will be held from 5 to 8:30 p.m. For $6 (adults) or $4 (kids 12 and under) you'll get ham, potato salad, beans, cole slaw, a beverage and a bar mitzvah was.

"I think it's a cross-cultural experience," Townsend said. "If whites don't get Jheri curl jokes, they can ask. When I first saw a Woody Allen movie, I heard a joke about a bar mitzvah and everyone laughed. I didn't know what a bar mitzvah was."

"It becomes an education. I don't think it's a crime to include jokes that some of the audience might not get."

What the audience does get in the film is a view of blacks not often seen in Hollywood: A man who loves his girlfriend and receives the heart-felt support of a relative in rare films only when that man is black.

Taylor pictures himself playing such heroes as Superman or a character he calls "Rambo."

But is the public ready for a black superhero?

"The public doesn't ask for things. You give it to them," Townsend said. "The public didn't ask for Christopher Reeve. (Hollywood) gave Reeve to them and he caught on. That's why I'm going to make movies, be the superhero and save America."

Sweet Adelines

At the end of a weekend like this one, you'll probably be just plain exhausted. Head for the Manchester Bicentennial Band Shell, where you can hear a concert by the Farmington Valley chapter of Sweet Adelines, a championship barbershop-style chorus.

The four-time winners of the North Atlantic Regional Championship competitions have sung throughout the U.S. Also on the free concert will be The Clarion Brass Quintet, led by trumpeter player Corinne Zanetti, who is an instrumental instructor in the Manchester school system.

FOCUS/Weekend

It's a berry, berry big weekend!

By Nancy Pappas
Herald Reporter

Where can you find horses and a beat, antique fire engines and a trolley, jazz bands, pressed glass, oak cupboards and strawberries galore?

At Manchester's Strawberry Fest, of course. It's just one part of an extremely busy weekend for Manchester, starting with rides and games tonight at St. Bridget's Fair and ending Sunday with a free concert by the Sweet Adelines.

Earlier this spring, the Kiwanis Club had announced that it was unable to take part. But the problems have been ironed out and the club is back in the festival. Saturday's festivities are likely to exceed those of past years, organizers have suggested.

This year's festival boasts free rides on an antique horse-drawn trolley, a craft fair and bargain prices on strawberry shortcake.

Robert Townsend is a standard-bearer for black actors

By Darren Leon
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — During a break in the filming of Jive Time Jimmie's Revenge, "the white director asks black star Bobby Taylor to 'be more black.'"

Taylor — with giant Afro wig, beige leisure suit and no shirt — sticks out his backside, shuffles a bit and delivers his lines in a whiney falsetto.

"It's a scene from the movie, 'Hollywood Shuffle,' and often embarrasses audiences watching the film, a comic condemnation of the movie industry's stereotyping of blacks.

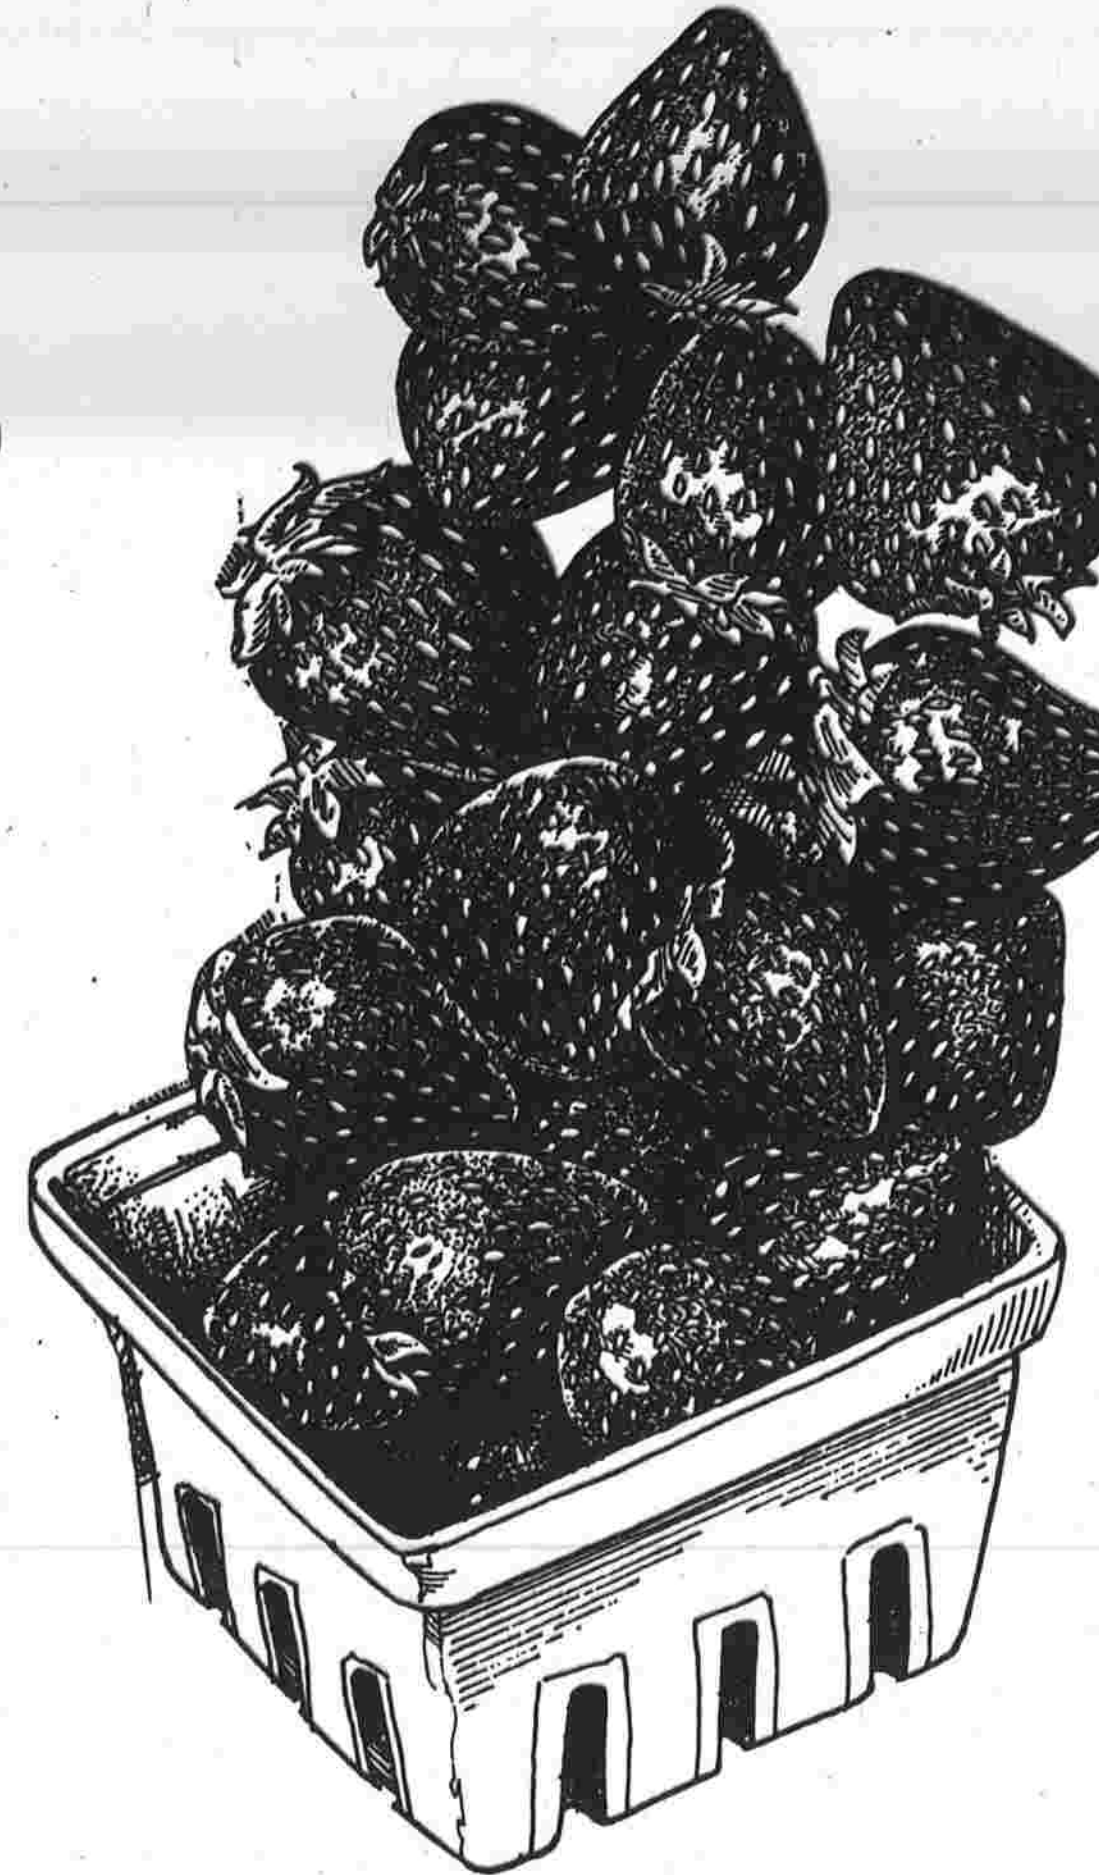

But that's the point, says actor-comedian Robert Townsend, who plays Bobby Taylor and who also wrote, directed and produced the $100,000 movie.

"Hollywood Shuffle" made a strong comment that a black actor doesn't have to do those roles," he said. "I want to start a change. I want to plant a seed that I hope will grow and start people thinking."

Townsend, 29, whose credits include "A Soldier's Story," "American Flyers" and "Streets of Fire," has refused to do demeaning roles ever since a director asked him to "bug out" his eyes out for the camera.

"Hollywood Shuffle" is the semi-autobiographical tale of a black actor looking for that first big break, and he lands the starring but degrading role of a jive-talking hood. Taylor is a Walter Mitty type who dreams of better roles and beating out Dustin Hoffman and Al Pacino for an Academy Award.

Townsend's comic approach to Hollywood's practice of stereotyping has won

Large serving of shortcake. Although walk-ins will be served, reservations are preferred. If possible, call 646-2686 or 649-0158 on Saturday to say you're coming.

St. Bridget Fair

The Strawberry Festival isn't the only thing going on this weekend. At St. Bridget's Festival, in the parking lot of the church at 74 Main St., you'll find carnival rides, game booths, lots of refreshments and bingo. Tonight the fair is open until 11 p.m. Saturday it opens at 1 p.m., and closes with the raffle of a car at 11:30 p.m.

The Relays

Across town, the Manchester Community College New England Relays have become something of a championship match. Starting at 9 a.m. on the Pete Wigren Track at Manchester High School, the MCC Relays will probably attract larger crowds than usual.

Several runners of world class status are assembling at 1:30 p.m. to try to run the first under-four-minute-mile ever achieved in Connecticut. Edmond Coghlan, three-time winner of the Thanksgiving Day Road Race and the world record-holder for the indoor mile is running, as are Gerry O'Reilly and Charlie Bregay.

Four-time Olympic gold medal winner Al Oerter will compete in the discus throw, against possible Olympic contender Brian Brophy, starting at 11:30 a.m. The day's activities will end at 4 p.m. Admission is $3.

Road race, Hook walk

A Four-Mile Road Race will start on Sunday from the Manchester Community College campus. Registrations will be accepted from 8 to 9 a.m., and the starting gun will go off at 9:30 a.m. Registration fee is $7.

If a four-mile road race is beyond your capabilities, you can at least walk off some of that strawberry shortcake by joining the Sunday Hockanum River Walk, sponsored by the Hockanum River Linear Park Commission. The walk will be on the Laurel Lake Trail this week, and will leave Sunday from Cheney Technical School at 1 p.m.

Sweet Adelines

At the end of a weekend like this one, you'll probably be just plain exhausted. Head for the Manchester Bicentennial Band Shell, where you can hear a concert by the Farmington Valley chapter of Sweet Adelines, a championship barbershop-style chorus. The four-time winners of the North Atlantic Regional Championship competitions have sung throughout the U.S. Also on the free concert will be The Clarion Brass Quintet, led by trumpeter player Corinne Zanetti, who is an instrumental instructor in the Manchester school system.

Advice

Grandfather's sexual sins weigh heavily on his victim

D E A R ABBY: I have a problem I've been struggling with for years. During my childhood I was sexually abused repeatedly by my grandfather — he's my mother's father. I realize that I was a victim, but still carry a lot of guilt and shame. Although my mother and I have always been very close, I never could bring myself to tell her. I know that Mom thinks the world of her father so I kept it from her to spare her feelings. (How do you tell your mother that her father molested you? He is still alive.) I think I may need counseling to get over my feelings of anger and guilt. But should I involve my mother? Would it make me feel better or worse? I am terribly confused. What should I do?

Dear Abby

professional help today, and then decide who should be involved. DEAR ABBY: My husband and I saw a young woman slip a pack of cigarettes into her purse while shopping at a market. She did this quite openly so we thought she intended to pay for them, but after she unloaded her groceries, she didn't bring out the cigarettes. The cashier rang up her groceries, dog food, etc., which she paid for with food stamps, then she left with the cigarettes in her purse — unpaid for. We asked the cashier if that woman shopped there often, and she said yes, she had seen her before. Then we told her about the cigarettes and she said we should have said something to the woman before she got to the checkout counter. Abby, if we had said something to her before we got to the checkout counter, she could have said she intended to pay for them. Or should we have told the cashier about it before the woman got to the checkout counter? What would you have done?

Inguinal hernia is common

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have an inguinal hernia. If I have surgery will I still be able to jog and lift weights? I'm 21.

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: Inguinal hernia is one of mankind's most common ailments. It occurs almost exclusively in males. During fetal development, the testicles form in the abdominal cavity. Subsequently, they drop down into the scrotum through a channel in the lower abdomen called the inguinal canal. Although this opening usually closes at or around birth, males are left with a permanent weakness in this area. Sometimes the channels actually remain open; more often, they tend to stretch and open as we age.

whether he or she will permit you to continue weight training. This will depend on the size of your hernia and the extent of the surgery necessary to fix it. Some patients prefer a truss rather than surgery. A truss is a beltlike device that is worn to plug the inguinal canal and prevent bowel from herniating through the ring. Trusses are safe, but they are a nuisance. Most people prefer surgery. Until the hernia is treated, don't strain or lift heavy weights.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is mittelschmerz and what is the preferred treatment for it?

DEAR READER: Mittelschmerz is abdominal pain during ovulation. When the ovum (egg) is extruded from the ovary at mid-cycle, some bleeding takes place. This bleeding can cause periodic abdominal irritation that produces pain resembling menstrual cramps. No treatment is usually required, because the discomfort lasts only a day or so and is rarely severe. For women who need treatment, birth-control pills are useful, because the medicine prevents ovulation and, therefore, the pain that may

LTM holds auditions

The Little Theatre of Manchester will hold open castings for "A Chorus Line" on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the workshop on Hilliard Street. All castings will begin at 7:30 p.m. There are 50 roles in the production, 18 for men and 12 for women. Of these, there are eight principal male roles, including one black male and 11 female roles and one Oriental female role. The ages run from 18 to the early 30s. All of the principals must sing, dance and act. All roles in the production are open. Those who wish to try out should be prepared to sing from the score of the musical and should wear proper clothing and footwear to dance. "A Chorus Line" will be presented at East Catholic High School on Nov. 13, 14, 20, and 21. Rehearsals for the production will begin on Sept. 8 and will be Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday evenings through the first week in October. During October and November, rehearsals will be Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings. Fred T. Blish, who has staged more than a dozen musicals for LTM, will be the director. Mary E. Blish will be the musical director and conductor. Darlene Zoller is the choreographer. Other members of the casting committee are Jayne Newirth and Betty Landberg. "A Chorus Line" was conceived by Michael Bennett. The book was written by James Kirkwood and Nicholas Dante, with music by Marvin Hamlisch and lyrics by Edward Kleban. It is the longest-running play in the history of the Broadway theater. For more information, call 646-6687.

Thoughts

In yesterday's "Thoughts" I stated that to have hope we need the certainty that life is meaningful if we are to resolutely and sacrificially struggle to preserve it. On my first trip to Alcatraz in California, as president of the American Correctional Chaplains Association, I saw over one hundred men in the equatorial and darkness of a maximum security prison on the so-called "Rock." The silent system was in effect. No one was allowed to talk to another person. The silence was eerie. I was allowed to take aside and to talk with for two hours the "Birdman of Alcatraz." Life with meaning? It had little or no meaning for him. But he loved God's creatures, the birds. What a waste of humans — whatever potential they had would never be known. You have sometimes to go out scouting about to find hope. The signs of hope are sometimes impressive, but somehow they don't always grab the soul in a direct and new way. That mood leads one to seek some ground for more sturdy resolve than we possess at the present. I left the "Birdman of Alcatraz" with these words: "If I can't visualize getting to the peak of a mountain, can I just get over the next hill and move from there to a new horizon where maybe there is just a little more to see, but maybe also see a larger vision?"
