REAGAN SAYS 'STAR WARS' IS RESOLVED

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Friday that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev agreed to drop demands for restrictions on the Star Wars program, but Secretary of State George P. Shultz said he did not sense any Kremlin departure from its insistence on linking long-range weapons cuts to a curb in the American missile-defense initiative.

Reagan denied that the issue of his Strategic Defense Initiative, which interrupted progress on arms agreements at the Reagan-Gorbachev meeting in Iceland last year, had been sidestepped at this week's Washington summit.

Asked whether his understanding with Gorbachev resolves or postpones the question, Reagan replied, "It resolves it."

"As a matter of fact by agreement we will go forward with our research and development of SDI ... with whatever is needed in that development and then, after a certain point, if and when we have succeeded in putting together this initiative, then we will deploy," he said.

Shultz, in Brussels, Belgium, to meet with European allies on the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty that was signed Tuesday, seemed to take a far less optimistic view than that espoused by Reagan.

Despite progress at the summit, Shultz said, the Soviets had not assured they would sign a strategic arms reduction treaty without securing limitations on Star Wars.

The Soviets have linked the two issues in the past, "and I don't sense any particular delinkage," Shultz said.

In Washington, another senior administration official disagreed with Reagan's interpretation that the Soviets have dropped their demands for curbs on Star Wars.

"In my opinion, we have not resolved the issue," he said. "In my opinion, they'll come back to us. But they have moved in our direction."

The official, who spoke to a reporter only on condition of anonymity, said there was no

Soviet "capitulation."

Reagan commented in a question-and-answer session with reporters and editors from Boston, Chicago and other cities.

Soviet spokesmen have suggested that, although the Star Wars program is not an obstacle in its present state of development, it could become one and would have to be discussed later.

Reagan, however, said, "I don't think there is any impediment there at all." When asked whether the Soviets would no longer require restrictions, he said, "No, that was eliminated."

In Washington, House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said after a meeting between the president and congressional leaders that the issue "quite possibly" will resurface to confront the two leaders later. However, Wright said, "let's rejoice for the time being."

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., described the meeting as "sort of a love feast," but he also said that "Gorbachev fever will pass."

Colin Powell, Reagan's national security adviser, said of Star Wars, "The Soviets recognize that we are going ahead with the program as we have described it."

"There is no secret that the Soviets are against SDI," he said in an interview on CNN. "They wish we were not pursuing this initiative and they say they are not pursuing a similar initiative. ... But whether they have given up in the pursuit of causing us to change our mind, I can't explain that."

Last maharaja ties the knot

GWALIOR, India (AP) — They exchanged garlands and walked seven times around a fire that made their gems and gold sparkle. Thus a son and granddaughter of the last maharajahs were wed Friday in a fairytale recess from reality.

Hundreds of former maharajahs and maharanis, evoking the grandeur of times forever gone, celebrated the royal wedding of Vikramaditya Singh, son of the last maharajah of Kashmir, and Chitrangada Scindia, granddaughter of the last maharajah of Gwalior. The people also were invited. More than 40,000 guests, including villagers who arrived in bullock carts, filled the grounds of Jaivilas Palace.

Nepal's King Birendra and Queen Aishwarya, who are related to both families, watched from a balcony.

Other guests included India's regal scions, who have lost their titles but often continue the lifestyle of the past in a nation with 64 percent illiteracy and a per capita income of $270 a year.

It began to drizzle, a good omen for Hindu weddings, as the 23-year-old groom's procession reached the bride's palace, led by caparisoned elephants. A golden umbrella shielded Vikramaditya, who rode in a silver chariot drawn by four horses.

Chitrangada, 20, wore a sari of golden brocade with a long red veil. She walked to the "mandap," the canopy where the main marriage ceremonies were conducted.

Hindu traditions and rites were observed. The bride and groom exchanged garlands of flowers and walked seven times around a fire while priests chanted mantras, the hymns and texts of Hindu ceremony.
Crowds surged forward to get a closer look, but police blocked them.

More than 7,000 officers were deployed for crowd and traffic control in Gwalior, whose streets were decked with banners and floral arches.

Some of the bridegroom's classmates from the University of Southern California were there.

"This is all so beautiful for me," said Angelica Loza of Los Angeles. "We are seeing Vik in a very different setting, but he will always be Vik for me."

Vikramaditya majored in business administration at USC. About being the heir of the last maharajah, Karan Singh, he said:

"I don't think about it, the title. One has always been referred to as a prince since one was born." The quote appears in the current issue of the Indian magazine Society.

Jaivilas Palace glistened with a fresh coat of white paint and shone with thousands of tiny yellow lights.

In the procession, the groom wore a golden turban with diamond-studded plume and six strands of pearls around his neck.

Chaplin's garb sells for $200,000

LONDON (AP) — The hat, cane and boots Charlie Chaplin used in the 1940 movie "The Great Dictator" sold for more than $200,000 Friday at a sale of items used by the comic genius, Christie's auction house said.

Altogether, the 260-items including film scripts, tinplate toys of Chaplin as the Little Tramp, musical boxes, tobacco jars, posters and photographs fetched a total of more than $311,100.

Swedish businessman Jan

Streckler paid $137,250 for the hat and cane to display at an entertainment center he is building in Copenhagen, Denmark, Christie's said.

Christie's said the pair of leather boots were one of only three pairs used by Chaplin in his movie career. It said the other two pairs were discarded, one pair because they were uncomfortable and the other pair because they were chewed by mice.

One of the items in the sale was the first contract Chaplin signed for a salary of 3.50 pounds (then worth about $16) a week as a "comedian and pantomimist" with the Fred Karno Company. The contract fetched $2,100 at the auction.

Chaplin, born in London in 1889, died at his home at Corsier in Switzerland on Dec. 25, 1977 at the age of 88.

Mother's condition improves

The condition of a Manchester woman injured in a Thursday night car crash in which her son was killed has improved, a hospital spokeswoman said late Friday night.

Deborah Maturio, 39, of 120 Bolton St., was listed in stable condition at Hartford Hospital. She had been listed in critical condition earlier Friday.

Maturio's 11-year-old son, Michael Schultz, of the same address, was killed instantly in the accident.

The disabled truck was owned by John J. Allaire, 19, of Brockton, Mass., police said. No information was available Friday night on whether any charges have been filed in the case.

NATO urges quick ratification of treaty

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The NATO allies Friday urged the Senate to ratify the intermediate-range nuclear force ban quickly and underscored their support for the pact by pledging to let the Soviets inspect missile bases in five European countries.

An agreement signed by Secretary of State George P. Shultz and the foreign ministers of West Germany, Britain, Netherlands, Italy and Belgium will for the first time allow Soviet inspectors to scrutinize military bases in Western Europe.

The agreement is the final ingredient in the treaty signed at the Washington summit to eliminate 2,611 missiles, including U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 nuclear missiles at allied bases.

Without agreement on inspections, the treaty would not have been possible, Shultz told a news conference after the end of a day-long strategy meeting of foreign ministers of the 16-nation NATO alliance.

Agreement to let the Soviets inspect the bases, "illustrates the very deep commitment, that this is an alliance matter," Shultz said.

It also reminded Shultz of the shopkeeper's sign, "In God we trust — all others pay cash."

"This is the cash," he said of the inspection provisions binding on both the West and the Soviets.

British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe and West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher led a chorus of public statements lauding the treaty and urging Senate ratification.

"The earliest possible ratification ... is overwhelmingly in Western interests," Howe said at the signing ceremony. "To argue against that proposition is to cast doubt on everything that our 16 democratic governments have stood for throughout these negotiations."

A communique adopted by all 16 NATO ministers said "we fully support the INF treaty and urge its early entry into force."

Shultz's meeting with the allies came on the first day of a five-nation European tour following the summit and preceding what is likely to be a lively debate in the Senate over the merits of the treaty.

Senate critics have said they fear the elimination of all land-based intermediate-range nuclear missiles will leave Western Europe vulnerable to the Soviet Union's massive tank armies.

In his briefing for the ministers on the results of the three-day U.S.-Soviet summit, Shultz gave an upbeat assessment of the prospects for a superpower agreement to halve strategic nuclear arsenals.

Rights activists disappointed in summit outcome

WASHINGTON (AP) — The superpower summit yielded little to encourage human rights activists who had hoped that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev might use the occasion to signal a new policy toward Jews trying to leave his country.

"He was ready to listen, to change, become softer on certain issues. But when it came to the Soviet Jewish question, he was stubborn, refusing any gesture," Nobel laureate Elie Wiesel said in an interview Friday.

The joint statement issued by Gorbachev and President Reagan at the conclusion of the summit had only one line about human rights — a sentence that said the matter had been discussed thoroughly and candidly.

"I will be encouraged when I see some results. Right now I don't see any," said Vladimir Bravne, an ex-refusenik who is trying to win permission for his parents to join him and his cancer-stricken sister in Rochester, N.Y. "I can only hope that something will change," he said.

David Harris, the American Jewish Committee's Washington representative and coordinator of last weekend's massive rally on behalf of Soviet Jews, said there is some disappointment at "the apparent lack of progress."

But he said that U.S. persistence has made human rights an integral and routine part of high-level discussions among Soviet and American officials — an achievement in itself.

In earlier days, Harris said, former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and his successor, George P. Shultz, "faced a hostile foreign minister (Andrei Gromyko who would not even utter a syllable on these human rights issues when the Americans raised the question. Now we're at a point where there is discussion — obviously at times acrimonious, and not always fruitful, but it is a step forward."

Reagan took the same tack at a meeting Friday with out-of-town reporters, telling them that U.S. pressure and discussions were helping to increase the numbers of exit visas granted and political prisoners released.

"At the same time, we've got a long way to go on this whole matter of total emigration," Reagan said. "They don't think they're violating any human rights. They think we are."

Harris placed the blame for any lack of progress "squarely at the doorstep of the Kremlin," but Wiesel said the United States should have taken a tougher stance and linked human rights to arms control.

"Because of the desire on both sides to reach agreement on the nuclear issue, I think probably the tragedy of so many Soviet Jews and other dissidents did not get a proper hearing," said Wiesel. "It was a matter of discussion, I'm sure. But how much pressure was applied? Once the two issues were not linked ... the leverage was gone."

Wiesel said he was skeptical about Gorbachev's "new path" and zeal for arms control.

"Compassion for billions of people is very nice," he said. "But that's an abstraction. There are concrete cases. There are human lives, people who have names, faces, destinies. I would like him to have compassion for them, too."

Leaders of Soviet bloc praise Gorbachev's 'political thinking'

BERLIN (AP) — Soviet bloc leaders on Friday praised Mikhail S. Gorbachev's "new political thinking" for leading to the U.S.-Soviet intermediate-range missile pact, and approved the treaty's verification procedures.

Gorbachev arrived to a triumphant welcome in East Berlin to brief Warsaw Pact allies on his summit with President Reagan and the treaty the two men signed Tuesday in Washington.

The Warsaw Pact summit coincided with a similar NATO meeting in Brussels that also endorsed the treaty's terms for verification.

Before the Warsaw Pact's gathering, Western diplomats said the seven-country communist military alliance could announce new disarmament proposals. But Warsaw Pact leaders made no such new offers.

However, a communique issued after the meeting called for "the banning and scrapping of nuclear weapons, the end of nuclear weapons tests and the reduction of military forces and conventional weapons in Europe from the Atlantic to the Urals."

"Whoever is ahead should cut back," East German Foreign Ministry spokesman Wolfgang Meyer told a crowded news conference.

As one example of the alleged imbalance, Western analysts say NATO's 990,000 troops in Western Europe face about 1.2 million Soviet-led Warsaw Pact forces in Eastern Europe.

The Soviets counter that by claiming, for example, that NATO has more attack helicopters and other military aircraft.

Gorbachev briefed Warsaw Pact allies on his talks with Reagan, according to a statement read to reporters by Meyer and later distributed by the state-run ADN news agency.

"The participants at the meeting expressed to ... Gorbachev their great appreciation for the consistent and energetic efforts by the Soviet Union that led to the first real results in nuclear disarmament, and that prove the vitality of the new political thinking," the statement said.

"The leading representatives of the allied (Soviet bloc) countries express their full support and great appreciation for the results of the negotiations in Washington," the statement said.

"It (the treaty) is a step of historic dimension that already is exerting a positive influence on the political climate of our planet," it added.

The communique, issued after the two-hour session at a hotel, said the foreign ministers of the Soviet Union, East Germany and Czechoslovakia signed an agreement on "the inspection and verification of the intermediate-range nuclear missile treaty signed by the Soviet Union and the United States."

The missiles affected by the treaty are based in the Soviet Union, East Germany and Czechoslovakia. The latter two border West Germany, which has the largest number of affected U.S. missiles.

8th will borrow for garage buy

The Eighth Utilities District will probably finance the purchase of the Don Willis Garage property at 18 Main St. for a new municipal office building by borrowing temporarily from the Connecticut Bank and Trust Co. and later issuing bonds.

Attorney John D. LaBelle Jr., legal counsel for the district, and a member of a committee named to study methods of financing the Willis property purchase, described the financing plan Friday.

District voters have given the district directors authority to spend up to $200,000 to buy the garage and pay other costs incidental to the purchase. The voters also authorized the directors to finance the purchase by any one of a variety of methods.

LaBelle said that the committee has decided that in the current financial market it would be better to issue temporary notes to the bank in anticipation of issuing bonds than to take a mortgage loan.

And LaBelle said the committee has been advised that if the district is to issue bonds in the future, it would be better to combine financing for the garage purchase and other projects, such as sewer installation, into one larger bond than to issue bonds separately.

Besides LaBelle, the committee includes District Directors Ellen Burns, Lorraine Boutin, and Thomas Landers.

The garage is being purchased for use as headquarters for the district government. It is across Hilliard Street from the district firehouse. While no firm plans have been made yet about renovation of the garage, the object of buying it is to provide a meeting place and office spaces to relieve crowding in the firehouse.

The sale is expected to take place Jan. 4.

Store's opening aids Cheney Hall

The first new retail store to open in the Cheney Historical District will donate $250 toward the renovation of century-old Cheney Hall.

Dairy Mart will hold a ceremonial opening of its new store at Hartford Road and Prospect Street in the Cheney Historic District on Saturday, Dec. 19. Officials for the firm said a ribbon of dollar bills to be used in the ceremony will be a gift to the Cheney Hall Foundation to help in the renovation of the hall.

Carl Prutting, a spokesman for the chain of convenience stores, said dignitaries at the 9 a.m. event will include Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. and William FitzGerald, chairman of the Cheney Historic District Commission.

He said Charles Nirenberg, founder of the chain, headquartered in Enfield, also will participate.

When Dairy Mart unveiled its plans to convert an auto repair garage at the site to a convenience store and gasoline station, the Cheney Historic District Commission reacted enthusiastically. But commission members objected to the firm's plan to use an existing sign post for a plastic sign with interior illumination that would identify the store.

The sign question was discussed at meetings between Dairy Mart representatives and commission members. One of the meetings was held at the site of the store where commission members sought to convince Dairy Mart that wooden signs would serve the firm's purposes.

When the Planning and Zoning Commission approved Dairy Mart's plan June 16, it stipulated that it would permit two wooden signs on the building and one 6-foot-high free-standing sign on the grounds.

14,000 pencils purchased

Students at East Catholic High School and members of the youth group at St. Bridget's Church raised money to buy pencils for the Hartford-Ocotol Sister City Project this month. The Capitol Region Conference of Churches sponsors this project, to help people in Ocotol, Nicaragua. More than 14,000 pencils were purchased and wrapped for students there, who have no school supplies, according to project director Eileen Yanke.

Interception of Soviet planes 'exciting,' says local pilot

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

"It was really exciting."

That is how Manchester native and Vermont Air National Guard pilot Niall Campbell described being one of two guardsmen who intercepted two Soviet Union military aircraft off the Northeast Coast of the United States recently.

Campbell, 27, is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Iain Campbell of Manchester. Campbell moved to Vermont a few years ago after attending St. Michael's College in Winooski, Vt. He majored in business administration at the school.

"We knew they were coming," he said of the Oct. 20 incident. "This is the time of year they go to Cuba. It was exciting to be the first in the unit to get one."

Campbell is a first lieutenant in the Vermont Air National Guard and is assigned to the 158th Tactical Fighter Group in Burlington, Vt., where he is a full-time pilot. His job is to intercept and escort non-allied military aircraft who approach United States airspace, said Lt. Lloyd Goodrow, public affairs officer for the adjunct general of Vermont.

The Soviet aircraft, identified as TU-142 Bear "F" anti-submarine warfare aircraft, were intercepted without incident over international waters approximately 800 miles off the coast of the United States and escorted away from United States airspace.

Campbell and pilot Scott Baldwin answered the call that the Soviets were approaching U.S. airspace, Campbell said.

Campbell and Baldwin were escorted by a tanker out toward Greenland at 1:45 a.m., but did not return to Burlington until 9:50 a.m., he said. The two pilots stayed with the Soviet planes until the planes headed away from U.S. airspace, he said.

At no time were any shots fired or any hostility exhibited, Campbell said. At no time did the Soviets penetrate U.S. airspace, which is 200 miles off the coast.

"In international waters we're just there to make sure they don't get any closer," Campbell said.

"We were on their tail for an hour-and-a-half before they went out to sea. At no point was there any hostile action. If there was, you could start World War III."

Manchester native and Vermont Air National Guard 1st Lt. Niall Campbell stands next to the F-16 fighter jet he flew to intercept two Soviet military aircraft off the northeast coast of the United States recently.

Their approach was monitored by Canadian military authorities as the aircraft neared Canada's air defense zone without notifying authorities, according to Goodrow.

The intercept was a joint operation involving the United States and Canadian air forces, Goodrow said. One Canadian aircraft circled the intercept, but left after only a few minutes, Campbell said.

It was the first intercept for the Vermont Air National Guard since it assumed the alert mission on July 1. Several weeks later, the Vermont Air National Guard intercepted four more Soviet aircraft, but Campbell was not involved this time, Goodrow said.

"It was nice to see we practiced," Campbell said. "But this was the real thing. It was nice to be included in that."

Tasked by the North American Defense Command, the F-16s are sent up against unknown aircraft approaching continental airspace. The Vermont F-16s share this mission with United States and Canadian Air Forces in controlling access to the airspace of the United States and Canada in peacetime, and would provide defense against an attack from bombers and cruise missiles in the event of hostilities.

3 women charged in dog theft

COVENTRY — Three women were charged Thursday in connection with an August break-in at the town dog pound in which a dog was stolen, police said.

Arrested were Donna J. LaPoint, 21, of 1189 Main St., Coventry; Hope Mezzomo, 20, of Windham; and Dawn Brown, 22, of 56 Pucker St., Coventry. All three were charged with third-degree burglary, sixth-degree larceny and third-degree criminal mischief, police said.

Man is charged after fight

A Rockville man charged with assault was being held on $5,000 cash bond Friday night in connection with a fight at an Oakland Street nightclub, police said.

James M. Ziembas, 40, was charged with two counts each of second-degree assault, third-degree assault and breach of peace, police said.

Lt. Walter Cassells said that more than one person was a victim in the fight, which occurred at Harpo's, a nightclub at 432 Oakland St. One of them was taken to Manchester Memorial Hospital, he said.

Cassells could not say how many victims there were, nor could he provide their identities.

The fight occurred at about 8:15 p.m. Friday, police said.

Woman hurt in 3-car crash

A three-car accident Friday night on East Center Street sent a 66-year-old local woman to Manchester Memorial Hospital, police said.

The woman, Pearl Drown of Bluefield Drive, was being evaluated for possible injuries late Friday night and was probably going to be released, a hospital supervisor said.

Police said Drown was driving out of the parking lot in front of the VFW hall on East Center Street at about 9:30 p.m. when her car was hit broadside by an eastbound Jeep operated by Chris Eaton, 19, of 269

Hillstown Road. A car following behind the Jeep, operated by Eric Hasemann, 18, of 65 High St., hit the Jeep with its left fender after the initial accident, police said.

With the exception of Drown, no one was injured, police said. Drown's car was smashed on the left side, and the fender of Eaton's car was also heavily damaged. The only damage to the Jeep was a bent front bumper.

Drown was cited for failure to yield the right of way from a private driveway, police said.

Keep murderer in jail, prosecutor argues

HARTFORD (AP) — Chief State's Attorney John J. Kelly said Friday that a convicted murderer shouldn't go free just because he had to wait 18 months for a trial, arguing that the time lag between a defendant's arrest and trial has been shortened since the episode.

"We're talking about a gentleman who had a trial five years ago and in five years, there have been many changes," Kelly said. "We have more judges, prosecutors and more money in the system."

U.S. District Judge Peter C. Dorsey said Thursday that he is considering granting William F. Flowers' request that he be released from Somers State Prison on grounds that he was denied a speedy trial.

Flowers, 54, of New Britain is serving a 25-year-to-life prison sentence for murdering a friend during an argument over a car.

On Friday, a secretary in Dorsey's office said he had not yet made a decision on the case.

Kelly also cited rulings by the state Supreme Court rejecting all of Flowers' claims. "The Connecticut Supreme Court has correctly decided this case and has fairly listened to arguments by the defendant concerning the delay and has found no valid reason to free a murderer when a jury has convicted him ... and found overwhelming evidence in the case," Kelly said.

The slaying occurred in 1981. Flowers went to trial in November 1982.

"This was during a different period of time," Kelly said. "We have more judges, we know how to work better and the legislature responded with a speedy trial act.

"It would be difficult for us to (conceive) that this man, convicted after a jury trial and whose conviction was upheld by the Connecticut Supreme Court, would now be set free," he said.

During Thursday's federal court hearing, Dorsey said several times that the scales of justice appeared weighted heavily in favor of Flowers's being freed. Dorsey said that the Constitution guarantees every defendant the right to a speedy trial.

District 1199 gives Jackson first big labor endorsement

HARTFORD (AP) — The National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees, District 1199, endorsed Democrat Jesse L. Jackson for president on Friday, marking the first national labor endorsement in the 1988 presidential race.

Before the unanimous voice-vote endorsement by the approximately 300 delegates to the union's annual convention, Henry Nicholas, president of the 75,000-member union, said Jackson's record "cries out" for the support of working men and women.

Jerome P. Brown, New England leader of District 1199, said Jackson "stands for working people in this country."

Although the AFL-CIO passed a non-binding resolution this fall calling on its affiliates not to endorse a candidate yet, District 1199 went ahead anyway. It was the only AFL-CIO affiliate to endorse Jackson in 1984 and that came after the AFL-CIO had endorsed Walter Mondale.

Jackson addressed the delegates for half an hour Friday morning, using the occasion to denounce corporations that take jobs away from Americans and create them overseas.

"We must shift the incentive from plant closings to plant expansion," Jackson said. "Jobs, peace and justice make more sense than unemployment, war and injustice."

"Workers," he told the cheering delegates, "when I win, you win. Workers united can never be defeated."

He also disputed the notion that most poor people are on welfare. The truth, he said, is that "they work every day. But when they get through working, they're still poor."

But, "it's not enough to have a job, you must get paid (enough) for what you do," he said.

He repeated his call for national health insurance and for a policy of helping Latin America by supplying tractors and grain rather than guns.

Also, Jackson criticized the news media for reporting that while he draws the biggest crowds and generates the most enthusiasm of any presidential candidate, he can't win the Democratic nomination.

"They should be saying, 'Therefore, he can't help but win,'" Jackson said. The election should be decided "not on race or sex or religion, but on direction," he said. "If I can win, any American can win. If I cannot win, most Americans cannot win," he said.

Jackson said his top priority as president would be to appoint "a competent attorney general to restore a sense of justice in our land."

Cub Scout bake and tag sale

COVENTRY — Coventry Cub Scout Pack 57 will hold a fund-raising tag and bake sale from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church on Sunday.

The church is located on Route 44 across from the Higland Park Market.

Hundreds of articles will be for sale and there will be baked goods available. Bird seed, donated in part by Whitam Nursery, also will be sold.

The money raised will be used towards Cub Scout badges, awards, scouting events and other Cub Scout functions. Cubmaster Jim Parda said the pack's budget was now at "rock bottom."

Pack 57 has a membership of more than 50 cubs and is an established Boy Scout affiliate.

I-84 to be temporarily closed

State Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns announced that it will be necessary to temporarily stop traffic on I-84 in Hartford Sunday.

The expressway will be closed from midnight to 10 a.m. between Sigourney and Broad streets. Traffic will be halted for 10-minute intervals in conjunction with the current project on the I-84 ramps to Asylum Street. The closures will allow the erection of a new overhead sign support structure and the removal of the existing structure.

Labor chief appeals ruling against Colt jobless benefit

WETHERSFIELD (AP) — State Labor Commissioner P. Joseph Peraro on Friday appealed a ruling that striking workers at Colt Industries aren't eligible for unemployment benefits, saying a state labor panel applied a technicality that doesn't exist in denying the benefits.

Peraro appealed a decision by the state Employment Security Appeals Division which found that the Colt workers weren't eligible for benefits because their unemployment resulted from a labor dispute and not a lock-out by Colt management.

The decision, issued Dec. 1, meant that 600 striking workers may have to reimburse the state for $3.1 million in benefits they have already received.

Peraro ruled in September that the Colt workers had been locked out, on grounds that Colt had declined their offer to return to work in August. The strikers, represented by United Auto Workers, Local 376, started receiving unemployment benefits as a result of Peraro's ruling.

Colt appealed to the Employment Security Appeals Division, which found that the union failed to state that strikers were offering to return to work "pending the negotiation of a new contract."

Peraro said that the panel's decision creates a "technical rule where none exists" and that workers rights to unemployment benefits have been "unfairly denied."

The decision, Peraro said, "clearly contravenes public policy and totally ignores the collective bargaining context in which the union's offers were made."

Colt workers at plants in Hartford and West Hartford walked off the job Jan. 24, 1986, after working nearly ten months without a contract.

Richard S. Reibeling, vice president for personnel at Colt, was not at his office Friday afternoon and could not be reached for comment. Reibeling has said the panel's decision showed that Colt's conduct has been "appropriate, legal and professional."

The UAW has cited Peraro's September ruling in complaints filed with the National Labor Relations Board alleging that Colt has engaged in unfair labor practices. Hearings on the complaints, as well as on complaints filed by the company, are being conducted in NLRB offices in Hartford.

"We feel good and confident that it will be overturned," said Philip A. Wheeler, assistant director of the UAW's Region 9A, which also appealed the panel's decision. "We made it very clear that we wouldn't go back unless it was pending negotiation."

UConn: Fears unfounded on Legionnaires' disease

STORRS (AP) — State officials told workers in the University of Connecticut's administration building Friday that there is no reason to panic over news that an employee died of Legionnaires' disease.

Two unions representing workers in the building have filed grievances as a result of their concerns over the employee's death and reports that two other workers experienced symptoms of Legionnaires' disease, a union official said.

A university spokesman said, however, that two employees who were ill were found to be free of the illness.

The university has agreed to look throughout the building, where about 150 people work, to see if a source of the bacteria that causes the disease may have been overlooked in earlier checks, said Lawrence Gibbs, the university's director of environmental health and safety.

Gibbs and other university officials met Friday for about 45 minutes with about 50 workers to discuss their concerns.

Matthew Carter, an epidemiologist with the state Department of Health Services, said fears of a Legionnaire's disease problem in the UConn building are unfounded.

"We were concerned (after the worker's death)... but the facts have been checked and there have been no new cases," Carter said.

Walt McGowan, a UConn spokesman said C. Edward Hanna, 62, of Manchester the school's vice president for finance, died Sept. 25. Hanna's wife told university officials that Hanna died of Legionnaires' disease, McGowan said.

Legionnaires' disease is named for an outbreak at the Pennsylvania American Legion convention in a Philadelphia hotel in 1976. Thirty-four people died, 29 Legionnaires or family members and five other people who had been near the hotel.

The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta estimate that 25,000 people get the disease every year in the United States. The disease is fatal in about 15 percent of the cases, authorities say.

Experts say early symptoms include muscle aches, headache and coughing followed by a rapidly rising fever. Abdominal pain and gastrointestinal distress sometimes occur, too.

The bacterium that causes Legionnaires' disease is found throughout the environment, particularly in water and soil. Air conditioning ducts and storage tanks are common sites of the bacteria.

O'Neill nominates judges

HARTFORD (AP) — Three lawyers were nominated to become Superior Court judges Friday by Gov. William A. O'Neill.

The nominees were Russell F. Potter Jr., 51, of Windham; Thelma A. Santos, 43, of West Hartford; and John J. Langenbach, 49, of West Hartford.

The nominations were sent to the legislature's Judiciary Committee, the first step in the confirmation process. The full General Assembly must vote on the nominees after they are approved by the committee.

Teen held in shooting

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — The friend of a teen-ager who was fatally shot in the forehead while the two were examining a handgun has been charged with second-degree manslaughter, police said.

Darryl E. Young, 18, was released on $10,000 bond early Friday pending a Dec. 23 appearance in Superior Court.

The victim, Richard Cisneros, 16, was shot in the forehead about 6:50 p.m. Thursday, police said. Young and Cisneros apparently were examining the handgun when it accidentally fired, striking Cisneros once above the right eye, police said.

Marines look for toys

PLAINVILLE (AP) — The U.S. Marine Corps Reserves' annual Christmas drive to collect toys for needy youngsters is running a little short in northern Connecticut, an official said.

Gunnery Sgt. Gary Shown of Co. C, First Battalion, 25th Marines in Plainville said donations for the Toys for Tots program haven't been as plentiful as in the past.

Donations from the Symphony on Ice at the Hartford Civic Center Coliseum last weekend, always a major source of toys for the program, totaled only 8,400, fewer than in any previous year, Shown said.

UTC building dedicated

STORRS (AP) — The new United Technologies Engineering Building at the University of Connecticut was dedicated Friday in ceremonies attended by Gov. William A. O'Neill, UConn officials and UTC executives.

The research and teaching facility was built with $4.5 million in state money and $1.5 million from Hartford-based United Technologies Corp.

UConn President John T. Casteen III called completion of the 47,500-square-foot building a "major chapter in the story of public and private partnership in Connecticut.

Fumes gone, pupils back

WASHINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Students returned to the Washington Primary School Friday after a day off due to noxious fumes from an asphalt roofing project that have made some youngsters ill.

Richard W. Hoffman, principal of three primary schools in the Shepaug Regional School District, said the school was closed Thursday because of the complaints.

The school will be closed in the future whenever roofing work is going on, Hoffman said. Rainy weather today made roofing work impossible.

Two charged in break-in THOMPSON (AP) — Two men were arrested Friday on charges they broke into a state trooper's home and stole his service pistol and handcuffs, state police said.

Scott R. Beaulieu, 25, of Thompson, and Patrick H. Perry, 29, of Pittsfield, Pa., was each charged with first-degree burglary, theft of a firearm, third-degree larceny and criminal possession of a firearm in the Thursday break-in, police said.

The two are accused of breaking into the home of Trooper Laurent Guillot and stealing his gunbelt with the handcuffs and his 9mm automatic pistol, police said. Nobody was at home at the time of the burglary, which was discovered about 2:30 p.m. Thursday.

Legislators endorse Gore

HARTFORD (AP) — Ten Democratic state legislators on Friday endorsed Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. for next year's Democratic presidential nomination.

While the six Democrats in the race are all good, Gore is "the best of the best," said House Majority Leader Robert F. Frankel, D-Stratford.

Sen. Mark H. Powers, D-East Lyme, said Gore was "the most electable" candidate.

Note in jet wreckage was from fired worker

CAYUCOS, Calif. (AP) — The FBI confirmed Friday that a revenge note found in the wreckage of PSA Flight 1771 was written by a fired airline worker believed responsible for the jet's crash. Hundreds of people attended memorial services Friday for victims of Monday's crash, which killed 43 people. Investigators believe David A. Burke carried a borrowed pistol past airport security guards who recognized him and let him pass without screening, then boarded the jet and scrawled the message to his ex-boss before using the gun and possibly explosives to send the plane into a 22,000-foot plunge.

Air Force reports evidence of sixth basic nature force

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sensitive measurements of gravity made on and near a 2,000-foot TV tower suggest the existence of a new fundamental force that adds a tiny boost to gravity's attraction, scientists said Friday. The finding "is very exciting because it indicates the force we call gravity is much more complicated than we thought," said Paul Boynton, a physicist and astronomer at the University of Washington in Seattle.

The four fundamental forces of nature are gravity; electromagnetism; the strong force, which holds the centers of atoms together; and the weak force, which makes some atoms break down in radioactive decay.

Studies by Boynton and others previously found evidence for a fifth force, which slightly counteracts gravity's pull over 10- to 1,000-yard distances.

The new finding, reported at the fall meeting of the American Geophysical Union by Donald Eckhardt, an Air Force geophysicist, suggests the existence of a sixth force.

When Eckhardt and colleagues from the Air Force Geophysics Laboratory at Hanscom Air Force Base, Mass., carefully measured changes in gravity as they went up the television tower, "a clear pattern emerged indicating that not only is there a fifth force, but there is a sixth force as well," they said in a news release.

The possible existence of a gravity-enhancing sixth force and a gravity-counteracting fifth force interests the Air Force because the forces might alter the trajectory of missiles that depend on inertial guidance systems, Eckhardt said.

"Inertially guided missiles fly through Earth's gravity field," he said. "If we don't do a good job estimating what gravity is, we won't do a good job guiding the missiles."

Other scientists praised the experiment for showing gravity is influenced by two poorly understood forces, but disagreed whether the new attractive force found by Eckhardt is a

Burke, 35, and his former supervisor, Raymond Thomson, were among those killed when the Pacific Southwest Airlines jet, bound for San Francisco from Los Angeles, disintegrated into a hillside near this central California community. He had been fired by USAir, which owns PSA, on Nov. 19.

At PSA headquarters in San Diego on Friday, a 15-minute memorial service was held in a hangar at Lindbergh Field for several hundred PSA and USAir employees and several relatives of dead crew members.

"Let us reach out to these families with sympathy and support," PSA

Chairman Paul Barkley told the mourners.

The note was the newest of the evidence gathered at the crash site and at Burke's Long Beach condominium to implicate the British-born ex-ticket agent.

The revenge message was scrawled on an air sickness bag found Thursday in the jet rubble. It read:

"Hi Ray, I think it's sort of ironical that we end up like this. I asked for some leniency for my family, remember. Well I got none and you'll get none."

FBI handwriting experts in Washington determined Friday the message was written by Burke, Bretzing said. Thomson, 48, fired Burke for allegedly stealing less than $60 in beverage receipts from the airline.

Investigators also said that what appeared to be a bullet hole was found in the pilot's seat of the PSA jet, and a body part allowed them to make positive fingerprint identification of Burke as one of the dead.

Emergency workers began pulling out of the crash site Friday afternoon. San Luis Obispo sheriff's Lt. Tom Garrity said that after deputies picked up the last important debris they would keep the area sealed for several days.

Bus hits train in Egypt; at least 52 children killed

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A bus carrying schoolchildren on a holiday outing was struck by a train Friday and at least 52 youngsters were killed and 67 injured, authorities reported.

They said most of the victims were around 10 years old.

At Manshiat el-Bakr Hospital, director Ahmed Maher said 29 children were dead on arrival. Dr. Tarek Mustafa, a surgeon, said 28 were in surgery.

Saiza Sobhi, chief matron at nearby Heliopolis Hospital, said her hospital had received 23 dead and doctors were treating 39.

Maher said most of the dead bled to death. He added that many of the injured were unable to tell hospital personnel their names.

"This is a very big accident," Maher said. Family members outside the Manshiat el-Bakr Hospital were being kept away by police because conditions inside were so chaotic, Maher added.

"The families still don't know," he said. "We don't know the children's names."

As the director spoke, women outside began wailing in a traditional Moslem cry for the dead.

At Heliopolis Hospital, about 100 parents filled the blood-stained corridors, searching for news of their loved ones. A woman who identified herself only as Sumaya said she had four children on the bus, and she had been unable to locate one of her sons.

The children had Friday off from school because of the Moslem Sabbath, she said, and they took the bus trip to a library in Nasr City, east of Heliopolis.

"I was waiting for the children there" when the collision occurred, she said. "The bus was a complete wreck."

A security guard said the collision occurred at an unmarked crossing.

Jury considers Deaver case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A jury on Friday began considering whether former White House aide Michael K. Deaver purposely lied under oath about his lobbying activities to avoid prosecution for unethical influence peddling.

Jurors began deliberating after U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson told them to ignore defense lawyer Herbert J. Miller Jr.'s "improper" expression of a personal belief in Deaver's innocence.

"Counsel's personal beliefs have no bearing on this case and I direct you to disregard those remarks in their entirety," Jackson said of statements Miller made Thursday during his two-hour summation.

Candidates reject vote plans

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The four main presidential candidates demanded Friday that Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy resign and they rejected his junta's election plans.

Namphy's interim government took control of elections when the first free vote in 30 years was stopped after only three hours Nov. 29 by men with machine guns and machetes who slaughtered 34 people and wounded 75. Soldiers did nothing to stop the killing, and some joined in.

Marc Bazin, Gerard Gourgue, Louis Dejeu and Sylvio Claude said in their first joint statement:

"The ... measures taken by the government clearly show once again its intention to establish itself in power unconstitutionally, illegally and in total disregard of the public, and to lead the country into catastrophe."

Car bomb kills 11 in Spain

ZARAGOZA, Spain (AP) — A car bomb exploded at a Civil Guard family barracks Friday, killing 11 people, authorities reported. Among the victims were an officer's 2-year-old twin daughters and two other young girls.

At least 30 people were reported wounded. Officials blamed Basque terrorists, who regularly attack the national paramilitary police in their fight to gain independence for Spain's northern Basque provinces.

The national news agency EFE said the explosion at 6 a.m. turned the three-story brick building into "a mass of rubble with broken furniture, toys and a pair of child's skates sticking out of bricks and beams."

Senate leaders push package

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders on Friday pushed for speedy passage of a $606 billion spending package to finance the government for a year and move Congress closer to meeting its deficit-cutting commitments.

But disputes over issues ranging from environmental laws to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua also were involved, threatening delays and possibly a presidential veto unless compromises were found.

Time was running out. A government shutdown is threatened unless new spending authority is enacted before next Thursday. Just as important to lawmakers, Christmas was just two weeks away.

Special panels to hear Mariel inmates' appeals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration announced Friday it will create special administrative appeals panels to give each of some 7,600 imprisoned Mariel Cubans one last forum to wage a fight against continued detention and possible deportation.

Attorneys representing the Cubans immediately attacked the plan announced by the Justice Department, saying it provides inadequate legal protection and that the Cubans should receive full-scale hearings where witnesses against them can be cross-examined.

There will be two sets of review panels in the Justice Department, one to consider prison parole and the other as a final appeal for those facing repatriation to Cuba.

The prisoners, who came here in 1980 during the boatlift from the Cuban port of Mariel, will have a right to legal counsel in the proceedings, but the government won't pay the lawyers' fees, Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns said.

Pennzoil, Texaco shareholders agree to a $3 billion settlement

NEW YORK (AP) — Pennzoil Co. said Friday that it had agreed with a committee representing Texaco Inc. shareholders on a proposal to settle the legal dispute between the two companies for $3 billion in cash and getting Texaco out of bankruptcy court reorganization.

Texaco's management criticized the plan late in the day, saying the proposed payment was too much.

The proposal would have to be approved by Texaco's creditors before it could be submitted to the court. If the court accepted it, the plan then would have to be backed in a stockholder vote by two-thirds of Texaco shares.

Texaco filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code in April to avoid having to post a $19.3 billion security bond in a suit filed by Pennzoil. Texaco contended the bond, which would have been required to appeal, could ruin the company.

The judgment stemmed from a Houston jury's November 1985 verdict that Texaco improperly interfered in a merger between Pennzoil and Getty Oil Co. Texaco later acquired Getty.

In a telephone interview from Pennzoil's headquarters in Houston, spokesman Robert Harper said the proposal would be contained in a reorganization plan that could be filed by the end of next week.

"We think the Texaco creditors committee will also join in the reorganization plan," Harper said.

Joel Zweibel, an attorney representing the creditors committee, said the group was not ready to comment on the plan. He said members would study it over the weekend and meet Monday to discuss it.

In a statement from its headquarters in White Plains, N.Y., Texaco said Pennzoil had proposed the $3 billion settlement earlier this week but that Texaco believed further negotiations "could lead to a more economic settlement."

Texaco said the plan announced Friday had been prepared without its involvement, despite an order by the bankruptcy judge that the oil company's management be included in any such negotiations.

It also reiterated its support for a settlement formula that would include a non-refundable payment to Pennzoil in return for an upper limit on Texaco's liability if it lost an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Texaco said it planned to pursue the appeal despite the settlement plan.

Pennzoil's board voted Wednesday to accept the proposed settlement, Harper said.

"It was a business judgment of the board that this was in the best interests of Pennzoil shareholders," he said.

Although Pennzoil officials said they believed the judgment would stand up on appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, they also were concerned about factors such as delays in payment, Harper said.

"Pennzoil's gone for four years without seeing one red cent," he said.

Retail sales up lackluster 0.2%

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales rose a lackluster 0.2 percent in November, the first full month after the stock crash, and wholesale prices held steady as consumer demand lagged, the government said Friday.

The Commerce Department, in an advance estimate for November, said retail establishments sold $125.9 billion worth of goods, up $210 million from October.

But that modest gain follows sharp drops of 0.9 percent in October and 1.7 percent in September. Both figures were revised down from earlier estimates.

Wholesale prices held steady in November after a 0.2 percent decline in October. Higher food prices offset a slight decrease in energy costs.

With only one month to go in 1987, inflation at the wholesale level as measured by the Labor Department's Producer Price Index was running at an annual rate of 2.7 percent.

"Retail sales and wholesale prices have to be seen as two parts of the same scene. Consumer demand is weak and is therefore exerting less pressure on prices," said Jay Levy, of Levy Economic Forecasts in Chappaqua, N.Y.

The Commerce Department adjusts its figures for seasonal variations, but not for inflation. November sales were 3.4 percent higher than a year earlier, well below the 4.8 percent rate of inflation in consumer prices so far this year.

"Since September, retail sales actually declined by one full percent over the previous three-month period," said Richard W. Rahn, chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Judge orders $2.5 billion for Dalkon Shield claims

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A.H. Robins Co. must set aside $2.5 billion to settle injury claims against the Dalkon Shield birth control device, the judge hearing Robins' bankruptcy case ruled Friday.

U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr. said at a two-minute hearing that the money would be paid over a reasonable period of time, but he did not specify how long.

James C. Roberts, an attorney for Robins, said afterwards he believed seven years would be a reasonable time for settling the claims, which stem from Robins' sale of the intrauterine device in the early 1970s.

Robins sought Chapter 11 protection from creditors in August 1985 because of mounting lawsuits against the device by women who cited injuries ranging from infections to sterility.

No payments can be made until Robins' bankruptcy court reorganization plan is approved, and the plan also must be voted on by stockholders and creditors. Robins' spokesman Roscoe Puckett said reaching a conclusion to the company's reorganization could take another year.

Among Robins' creditors are approximately 200,000 women with Dalkon Shield claims. But a Robins consultant has estimated that only about 30,000 of those women have claims that would result in a settlement above $5,000.

Merhige's decision followed six days of testimony last month at which lawyers for Dalkon Shield claimants estimated full compensation costs at $7.2 billion, while Robins' attorneys placed the amount at $1.6 billion.

Robins' plan of reorganization submitted to the court earlier this year included a $1.75 billion trust fund to pay the claims. That amount was preserved when the reorganization plan was amended to include the pharmaceutical firm's proposed merger with Rorer Group Inc., of suburban Philadelphia.

Merhige set a status hearing for Thursday to discuss how that deal could be modified to reflect the higher settlement figure he announced.

"I think we will be able to manage to fund the plan," said Robert Miller, a lawyer for Robins' stockholders.

Mark Ellenberg, an attorney for the Dalkon Shield Claimants Committee, said the judge's figure "demonstrates with certainty that the plan that had been proposed is substantially inadequate and needs to be improved."

Lump-sum plan intriguing

QUESTION: When I retire from my university position as a history professor in a couple of years, I will have the choice of taking my retirement funds in a lump sum or by monthly checks. Over a year's time, the checks would equal about 10 percent of the lump sum.

I am conscious of the security of the monthly check method, but I am intrigued with the lump-sum option. By investing the lump sum in common stock mutual funds, I feel I could receive close to 10 percent in dividends and still have my principal, which would be left to my heirs.

What is your thinking on this?

Investors' Guide
William A. Doyle

ANSWER: It's extremely unlikely you would get 10 percent dividend yield from the type of mutual funds you mention — those holding common stocks as investments. That kind of fund pays much lower dividends.

It is possible that you might get a "total return" higher than 10 percent. A mutual fund's total return is a measurement of gain or loss in investment value, assuming reinvestment of dividends and capital gains distributions to buy additional fund shares.

Let's take a look at some historical figures from Lipper Analytical Services. For the 10 years ended Sept. 30, the average total return on mutual funds was 403.20 percent — 40.32 percent annually. For the five years ended that date, the average total return was 150.54 — 30.11 percent. Just for the first nine months of 1987, the average total return was 19.74.

During those time spans, anyone who invested in the average mutual fund and annually redeemed 10 percent of his or her shares for cash came out way ahead.

But then came October and the stock market crash — more than wiping out the previous nine months' gains and taking the year-to-date total return by the end of that month into negative ground at minus 2.72 percent.

Professor, the lesson here is that there is risk in the stock market and in mutual funds. If you're willing to take on that risk, go ahead and put your nest egg into mutual funds. Risk-taking has to be a personal decision. At retirement time, however, it is wise to minimize risk.

Nonetheless, taking your retirement funds in a lump sum will probably be a good move, assuming you put that money into a rollover individual retirement account where it will be tax-deferred until you make IRA withdrawals.

How to invest the IRA money will be the tough choice. In your situation, I'd lean toward putting about 30 percent into common stock mutual funds and the rest into less volatile investments.

QUESTION: My IRA, now worth approximately $12,500, is in a bank certificate of deposit. I am 28, single with annual income under $25,000. So I am still able to put $2,000 a year into the IRA, tax deductible.

I want to put my IRA into a "higher growth" situation. I realize there is a risk factor in possibly more lucrative investments. But my IRA money is more or less locked up until I'm 59½. So I'd like to try to do the most I can with it.

What would be the best type of investment for me? And can you print the names of two or three companies with good track records and reasonable handling fees?

ANSWER: This column has consistently explained it is impossible to say what kind of investment will be "best." Yesterday's winners can become tomorrow's losers. Naming two, three or any other number would be "outing" — something I refuse to do and which editors would not allow even if I were so inclined.

Your reasoning is excellent. No-load mutual funds seem well suited for you. You can obtain a directory containing detailed information about such funds by sending $5 to No-Load Mutual Fund Association, P.O. Box 2004, Dept. D, JAF Building, New York, N.Y. 10116.

Formal gift exchange

When you consider the task of having to select proper gifts for President and Mrs. Reagan to give to Soviet General Secretary and Mrs. Gorbachev and vice versa, somehow finding the right gift for everyone on your Christmas list doesn't seem as difficult.

As is the custom for state visits, a gift exchange was part of the official pomp and circumstance of the three-day Washington summit.

The official gift list, released by the White House, indicated the Reagans and Gorbachevs had an early Christmas.

Reagan gave Gorbachev a Tiffany Philadelphia bowl, described as silver-stemmed, nine inches in diameter, engraved with the seals of the president and coat of arms of the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Reagan gave Mrs. Gorbachev a set of nine-inch Steuben teardrop candlesticks. The gift was given, according to the White House, "in a red leather presentation case lined in velvet."

For both the Gorbachevs, the Reagans presented the Soviet couple with "a personally inscribed photograph" of themselves "in a navy blue leather frame with the presidential seal at the top in gold leaf."

Gorbachev gave Reagan an "embroidered leather saddle and a case of caviar." Mrs. Gorbachev presented the first lady with a "crystal serving set and assorted chocolates."

As for the national gifts, the United States presented the Soviet Union a limited edition porcelain sculpture of seven peace doves in flight around the earth. Each of the seven doves represents one of the seven continents.

For the U.S., the Soviets presented a "polished stone centerpiece on a base."

Let's get personal

Sometimes reading between the lines of a biography can tell you more about a person than the published biographical data itself.

Take Soviet General Secretary and Mrs. Gorbachev, for example.

According to Mrs. Gorbachev's official biography, released by the White House, she "was born in about 1930." Her husband, however, was born March 2, 1931, "of peasant stock," according to Gorbachev's biography. Gorbachev's bio also indicates "as a youth he worked on an agricultural combine."

Both biographies include a short paragraph about the family. "The couple has a married daughter, Irina. Irina and her husband, both physicians, have two daughters: Ksenia is about 7 years old; her sister was born in early 1987."

The description left more than one journalist wondering whether the youngest Gorbachev granddaughter has a name.

According to the White House press office, the Soviet biographies were provided to the U.S., and "something may have been lost in the translation from Russian to English."

Room at the inn for our children

To the Editor:

It is written "to everything there is a season."

Thanksgiving, an unexpected one for the folks on Ferguson Road, Arnot and some of the other streets. The Buffalo Water Tavern closed. No more mad 5 o'clock stampede; no more cars racing up and down the streets at late hours, horns blaring, etc.; clean air to breathe; once again children can safely cross the streets; folks can sleep nights in peace and quiet.

Another season approaches. It has been called the season of miracles. Those in the Highland Park school district have heard the glorious words, "Highland Park School will reopen."

Once more the streets will have happy children walking to school. Laughter will fill the air. Stability will come to young children as the neighborhood reunites. The blooms in the garden of childhood can be beautiful. Children need to strengthen the fragile thread of hope to believe that they, too, are important to the scheme of things.

This time there will be room at the inn for children.

"Yes, Virginia, there is..."

Store deserves Juniors' applause

To the Editor:

Many people are quick to find fault with area merchants during this holiday season. However, one merchant, Paperama, deserves a

On Thursday night, Dec. 3, members of the junior prom committee were busy turning the Manchester High School cafeteria into a Winter Wonderland for our prom scheduled for the following night, when disaster struck. It was 8 p.m. and the cafeteria was only half done.

We pooled together what little money we had left and headed to Paperama. This money, however, was not nearly enough to buy what we needed. The assistant manager made a quick call to the head manager at home and received approval to donate $80 worth of decorations to the committee.

Thanks to Paperama, the entire cafeteria was decorated, and looked beautiful. The junior class greatly appreciates Paperama's generosity. This truly is the season for giving.

Murder in womb isn't the solution

To the Editor:

The column written by Nicholas Von Hoffman and published in the Herald the day before Thanksgiving was an assault on my sense of reason.

Mr. Von Hoffman states that Elizabeth (the little girl who was beaten to death her foster father) should have been aborted to prevent her later untimely death. In other words, Elizabeth's mother should have murdered Elizabeth solely because she had the first opportunity to do so.

Using this line of reasoning, all would-be mothers have the moral obligation to abort to prevent later pain, suffering and certain eventual death of the new human being. Mr. Von Hoffman is certainly confused on this issue.

He is also woefully misinformed. Right-to-life organizations are dedicated to helping a young woman with any problems which may arise from her unplanned pregnancy. Help in the form of counseling, medical care, shelter, clothes and furniture for mother and baby as well as help with adoption if the mother wishes are available. For further information, anyone in Connecticut may call toll-free anytime the Caring Network at 1-800-972-HELP. Anyone in the country can call the National Committee for Adoption collect at 202-638-0466 for similar services.

Elizabeth's fate at the hands of her foster father is certainly a tragedy. In retrospect, many solutions present themselves such as better enforcement of adoption laws and the strengthening of the Department of Children and Youth Services. Elizabeth's murder in her mother's womb is not a solution.

The next depression: not a pretty picture

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy has come a long way since the Great Depression, but the New Deal safety nets thrown up to make sure it doesn't happen again may not be enough to stop a recession.

Not the least of the factors setting you up for that recession are the $148 billion federal budget deficit and the plunge of the stock market.

The first means that the federal government will get tight with its money and the second means that you will get tight with yours.

Our sources warn that the worst scenario is a scramble by businesses and households to sell their assets to raise cash, specifically a wholesale dumping of real estate onto the market. It could happen on the neighborhood level and on an international scale. Japanese investors, who now finance much of the U.S. debt, could dump their American assets to raise cash. Assets used as loan collateral would be sold at deflated values and bankruptcy would not be far behind.

The 36 percent drop in the stock market between Aug. 25 and Oct. 19 meant a drop of $500 billion in household net worth. Preliminary government estimates show that you and people like you will be spending $60 billion to $100 billion less because of what you lost in the market. When you don't buy the big-ticket items such as cars or home improvements, and when businesses cut back their own capital spending, unemployment is likely to rise.

Our sources say you can expect major confrontations between unions and management in late 1988 and into 1989 as workers demand more job security. Low wage gains and competition from imports will mean a decline in the power of unions.

The normal federal response to a recession is to increase the money supply and lower interest rates. But if that comes in the near future, some federal officials tell us privately that the policy could backfire. Declining interest rates could cause a drop in the dollar, which would raise the cost of imported goods and rekindle inflation. In a vicious circle, the Federal Reserve Board would have to tighten its monetary policy and drive up interest rates. Then you would stop spending money again.

It isn't a pretty picture for the Fed. As we reported earlier, an unprecedented agreement may be in the offing between the Reagan administration and the independent Federal Reserve Board. The administration would make budget cuts if the Fed promises to lower interest rates substantially.

One private study concluded that even if interest rates went down by only 2 percent, the budget deficit would be trimmed by $47 million simply because of the lower interest payments on the national debt.

Insiders who keep track of these things notice disturbing similarities between the current economy and the conditions leading up to the Great Depression. The Depression taught us enough to install safeguards, such as federal deposit insurance, but even the optimists get nervous when the Roaring '20s and the Soaring '80s are stacked up side by side.

Black Tuesday in 1929 came about two months after the bull market had peaked. Black Monday on Oct. 19 occurred two months after a market peak in late August. A period of protectionism, agricultural depression, currency instability and speculation heralded both collapses.

You've got problems?

Pity the poor American artists who make their homes overseas so they can live more cheaply and be close to the source of Italian marble, foreign teachers and less costly painting supplies. The falling dollar has meant that a piece of marble that cost only $2,000 a year ago in Belgium now costs

$3,500. Canvas and frames have almost doubled in price, and painters have stooped to using friends instead of professionals for models.

The artists had depended on wealthy collectors for sales, but the collectors' disposable can has gone the way of the Down Jones index. The result is that artists in Europe are turning to teaching English, to photography, even to contract work to make ends meet. Others are giving up and coming home. One Canadian sculptor in Italy had to put off his glaucoma operation for lack of funds and return home to Canada where he could get free surgery.

Lukewarm support

Sources in Vice President George Bush's campaign organization say Bush is a worried front runner for the Republican nomination. His campaign strategists fear his support is weak, and his followers may not come out in force for the Iowa primary. Bush won that primary in 1984, and failure to have a repeat victory could turn his lukewarm supporters to another candidate. The man Bush fears most in Iowa is the Rev. Pat Robertson, who has a small but motivated following in the state. With less than 150,000 Republicans expected to turn out for the Iowa primary, every-vote counts. If Robertson makes a good showing there, Bush backers in other states could back off.

It's holiday time: How are ya?

By Chuck Stone

"It's the time of year when the world falls in love..." A time when people feel generally disposed to those they would otherwise ignore.

By Stone's proclamation ex cathedra, this period is designated as the American Festival of Holidays — five weeks of serious partying for reasons as divergent as the celebrants. It kicks off in late November with Thanksgiving and wraps up in early January with the Puerto Rican celebration of the Festival of Three Kings.

In between those two holidays, greetings are extended for Hanukkah, Christmas, Kwanza, and the New Year. Kwanza is the newest kid on the holiday block. Since 1966, many black Americans have been celebrating this seven-day, candle-lighting renewal of their African-American heritage.

The goodwill that comes with these holidays has added a festive meaning to the standard greeting, "How are ya?"

Ethnic distinctions in this greeting have always existed. For example, white people usually inquire, "How are ya?" Blacks shorten it to, "How y'doin'?" Sometimes, they vary it with "Howzitgoin'?"

Don't ask me why. Different strokes for different folks.

Far more fascinating are the different responses to the salutary ubiquity of "How are ya?" My heuristic impulses on this matter were first stimulated a few years ago when I asked a Philadelphia Daily Newsnight editor, a fellow jazz fan and good friend, "How y'doin'?"

"Man, if I had your hand, I'd throw mine in," he responded.

I looked at him in disgust, and said: "Until now, I thought you were white and respected you. Your ghetto response changes our relationship."

Blond, blue-eyed Will looked up from the copy he was editing and grinned. "How y'doin', bro?" he asked.

"Kickin', but not high," I told him. When someone sought the state of my father's health, he would reply, "Oh, I'm no trouble." I always thought that was a subliminal reassurance that he could be trusted.

In later years, as time stiffened his joints and slowed his gait, he would shrug gratefully to inquiries: "Oh, I'm able to sit up and take nourishment."

Several years ago, I called a professor at Norfolk State University. How was he doing? He exhaled with a weary swiftness, "Man, they're whipping me like they caught me stealing."

My inquiry a couple of months ago about the state of black affairs in Dallas elicited this response from a woman: "Honey, we got trouble just swimming across the lake."

For years, a national response in the ghetto was, "Country's safe. White folks still on top." When I once offered this rejoinder to former CORE Director Floyd McKissick, he mournfully replied, "Yeah, we're on the bottom and we ain't even makin' love."

Ask a brother in Harlem how's he doin': "Man, I ain't hit the numbers in months."

A friend, Jake, was about to retire. How y'doin'? "I'm doing as well as the poor people."

Here are a few more responses to run up your salutary flagpole:

"If I felt any better, I'd go to the doctor."

"I'm doin' better than yesterday."

"Workin' harder than I want, but not as hard as I should."

"Half an half." Half and half? "Yeah, half good, half bad."

And when I was single, this one worked wonders for me during an encounter of the first kind:

"How are you?"

"Oh, I'm fine."

"You sure in hell are! But I meant how're you feelin'?"

For the next few weeks during Stone's officially proclaimed American Festival of Holidays — "the time of year when the world falls in love" — we'll celebrate the splendor of our differences with wishes for Happy Hanukkah, Merry Christmas, Happy Kwanza, Happy New Year, and Felice Navidad.

But "blest be the tie that binds," as we offer hope for good health.

"How are ya?"

Church Bulletin Board

'Toys for Joy' still needed

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
Executive Director

Our Christmas twinkle is deepening just a bit of a nervous twitch. Although a few early bird givers have left their toys off at the firehouses, we are still far short of the number of toys and gifts needed for the Toys for Joy distribution scheduled for Friday and Saturday.

The deadline for the toys is Thursday noon. This only gives us a few hours to pick up, sort and get ready for early Friday morning. If you've been planning to reach out to the children, we must urge you, please, to drop off your gift or gifts as soon as possible at the Center Street fire station (next to the Municipal Building), the Eighth Utilities District fire station, 32 Main St., ComFed's Main Street office or at the Manchester Mall, 811 Main Street. New gifts and gifts for teens are in particularly short supply.

If you are shopping this weekend, please consider shopping for one of our children as well. Please do not wrap your gift. We would, however, be grateful for your inclusion of paper and ribbon.

The annual distribution to parents of low income families will be Friday and Saturday at the old Parish Hall, St. Mary's Episcopal Church at the end of Church Street. Only those parents/guardians who have received a letter of invitation from a local social worker, teacher, school counselor or public health nurse are scheduled for Friday's distribution.

Any Manchester/Bolton parent or guardian who is having difficulty providing gifts this Christmas is warmly invited to join us next Saturday morning, 9 a.m. to noon, Dec. 19.

A reminder: The Toys for Joy program is for parents only and children should be left at home. Parents may select one major new or good as new toy for each child in the family plus a book, puzzle and stocking stuffer.

We do ask parents to sign in (remember letters are required on Friday) and to list the ages and sex of the children in the family. MACC volunteers will be available to help you with your selection. Please bring a carrying bag (or two if you have a large family). Paper and ribbon will be available.

Our elderly friends

The deadline for gifts for our neighbors in convalescent homes is Friday. Let's make certain that no one is forgotten this Christmas, particularly those who are ill or alone. Gifts for shut-ins may be left, along with toys, at the MACC Christmas Centers.

MACC News

Our thanks to Margaret Lewin who handmade six beautiful twin size afghans and 38 pairs of adult mittens. She knits all spring, summer and fall is get ready for Seasonal Sharing.

Also to Bert and Rita Cooper, who have already brought in gifts for the elderly in memory of Riva's mother, Jonas Kopper. And to the good folk at Assumption, who "adopted" all our special concern patients at Manchester Manor Tor "just for you" giving.

And to wonderful Peter Jeffers and his sidekick, Gene Zito. Peter answered our plea by purchasing 103 blankets. Forty-four have already been allocated to the Samaritan Shelter, 24 have been set aside for emergency calls and the rest are being given to those of our low income elderly and families with special needs. Bless you, Pete.

And a special thank you to our Thanksgiving Day Meals on Wheels volunteers. Because of the Road Race, they were taking unusual detours. Several of the meals ended up being delivered by shank's mare. One of these special volunteers made individual apple pies and pumpkin and pecan tarts for her shut-ins, another had trays of cookies.

That's the kind of caring, sharing, that makes the day for those who are alone less lonely and a lot more festive. A little note from one of the recipients:

"Dear Friends, words fail me to tell you how much I appreciate the most generous Thanksgiving Dinner you brought me."

Food deliveries

The deadline for delivery of adult gifts and non-perishable foods is also Friday. Last minute Friday deliveries should be made directly to Concordia Lutheran Church to expedite sorting and packing. Perishable foods must be to Concordia no later than 8 to 9 a.m., Tuesday, Dec. 22.

Notice

The monthly MACC Peace Vigil is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, December 15 at North United Methodist, 300 Parker St.

Thank-you's

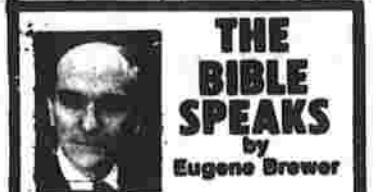

Your dollars are paying for those hot meals, for vouchers to purchase warm clothing and shoes for those in special need, for "just for you" gifts for isolated shut-ins, for meal certificates for those without cooking facilities, for special gifts for the homeless in our Samaritan Shelter. Your gift can be made out to MACC — Seasonal Sharing, Box 773, Manchester, Conn. 06040.

Thank you to all those most generous donors whose welcome contributions we have already received:

Bolton Congregational Church Society Inc., William and Mittie Kelsch, Mary Fava, Harold and Virginia Falls, Concoita Schuster, Emmanuel and Ann Hirth, United Methodist Women of North United Methodist, Amy Helwig, Ronald and Loretta Warner, Tina DePumpo, Pete and Lenore DuBardo, P. Nichols, Gladys Thompson, Thomas and Dorcas Spang, Fred and Edna, Enrico and Teresa Monaco, Violet and Jayne Koffink, Kenneth and Julia Chadwick, John and Alice Brown, Harry and Carol Schulin, James and Cynthia Brazinski, Peter and Vera Guas, Raymond Comeau, Arthur and Roberta Byom, Dorothy Senego, Elizabeth and John Hyde, Arne and Mary Sterud, Walter and Wilma Jovner.

Also to John and Kathleen Foulds, Susan Jeff, Walter and Virginia Briggs, The So and Saws, Alan and Suzanne Caschowitz, Albert and Mary Tuttle, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gever, Cosmopolitan Club, Charles and Bernice Woodbury, Louisa and Irma Dellor, Edna Christensen, John and Julie Melstos, Lawrence and Esther Mallon, John and Carol Wengertman, Francis and Margaret Coder, John and Hilgard Melderum, Fred and Elaine Copeland, Varrum and Joan Abbott, Nicholas and Sylvia LaPointe, Donald and Jane Richter, Adela Choules, Israel and Shirley Snyder, Doris Carpenter, Richard, Joanne and Michael Wright, Lyndie Hulme, Wilma McCormick, John and Barbara Smyth, Michael and Betty Ann McGrath, Margaret Dwyer, Anne Cole, Robert and Patricia Bolinger, Elsie Carlisle, Albert and Rosemary Donnestad, Alice Shea (in memory of Walter Shea), Winifred Moyer, M.D.

A century ago two well-known infidels were discussing the wonderful life of Jesus as they traveled across country by train. One said, "I think an interesting romance could be written about him." The other responded, "And you are just the man to write it. Debunk the mythical sentiment of his deity, and let him be seen as a man among men."

The novel was written — at the suggestion of Robert Ingersoll, famous for his rhetorical attacks on the Bible and Christianity. The author was Lew Wallace and the book was Ben Hur. But in the process of studying Jesus' life and character, Wallace became convinced he was more than a man.

Most skeptics have never really studied Jesus' life. Yet to the fair minded student it is the most convincing evidence for his deity. As the Scriptures say, he was without sin, Hebrews 4:15.

Ice Capades, craft fair yule events on schedule

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Jeannette Cave
Senior Center Director

A trip to the Ice Capades performance at the Civic Center is scheduled for Saturday, Jan. 16, 1988 at 4 p.m. The bus will leave the center at 3 p.m. The cost, including admission and transportation is $12.50. All monies must be received no later than Tuesday, 1 p.m.

The Arts & Crafts group at the center will present its Annual Christmas Crafts Fair on Thursday, Dec. 17 starting at 10 a.m. This is an opportunity for you to pick up your last minute gifts or extra decorations for your Christmas tree. A full array of handmade items, clocks, crafts, etc. will be on hand.

And, of course, we will celebrate Christmas a week early at the center. Also on Dec. 10, Santa Claus will come to Manchester to help with festivities. The Bennett Junior High Choral Group, directed by Mel Lumpkin, will entertain. Don't forget your grab bag gift, worth no more than $2. Those who bring a gift will be the only ones to receive one.

Be advised that there will be a non-grocery shopping trip with Wendy to Vernon Circle on Tuesday, Dec. 15. Those interested in going should call the center no later than Monday. The driver will confirm your pick-up time. The trip to the J.C. Penney outlet on Dec. 22 has been canceled.

Starting next week, the center will be distributing a survey to get feedback on the meals program. Please stop by the office and pick up a form. The results of the survey will help us to improve services to our members. To encourage your participation and your remarks, no name or signature is required on the form. After the results are tabulated the first part of next year, they will be shared with the group.

There will be no meals from Thursday, Dec. 24, 1987 through January 4, 1988. However, for those who are finished with their Christmas shopping, we will run a film, "Mr. Mom" at 11 a.m. If you need a ride to the center, do call a day in advance.

Let's remember to bring good cheer to those members who are ill. Get wells and best wishes are extended to Rita Bowler in Manchester Memorial Hospital and John Dahm in St. Francis Hospital. Condolences are extended to our exercise instructor Cleo Livingston on the passing of her mother.

Best wishes are sent to Irene Roy and Rita Bowler who are convalescing at home.

Out of hiding

Warm weather brought this squirrel out of his hiding place in downtown Manchester on Friday afternoon. Temperatures were in the 40s and were expected to be in the 40s again Saturday.

Thoughts

It is a fitting conclusion of this week of Thoughts to listen to the benediction offered by Paul in his letter "to all God's beloved in Rome, who are called to be saints..." His final words —

"Now to him who is able to strengthen you according to my gospel and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery which was kept secret for long ages but is now disclosed and through the prophetic writings is made known to all nations, about obedience to the faith — to the only wise God be glory for evermore through Jesus Christ! Amen."

Advent and Christmas would not be complete without these key words of Paul: strength — revelation — mystery — secret — disclosure — eternal God — obedience — faith. They make such a difference to each of us in our struggle to become who God intends us to be. On Christmas morning we can all sing with "heaven and nature" those immortal words of Isaac Watts set to music attributed to Handel:

"Joy to the world! The Lord is come: Let earth receive her King; Let every heart prepare him room, And heaven nature sing.

"He rules the world with truth and grace, And makes the nations prove, The glories of his righteousness, And wonder of his love.

Indeed! As we said at the beginning of the week, "take Heaven," "take Peace," and "take

See a specialist on child's pains

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 7-year-old daughter has Henoch-Schonlein purpura. She has had well over 12 episodes. She complains of stomach pains before, during and after the rash, which lasts four to five days. I was told the episodes only occur once or twice, but hers have been recurring for two years. What do you recommend?

DEAR READER: I recommend that she see a pediatrician who specializes in allergic diseases of children. Henoch-Schonlein purpura is a short-term allergic disorder of blood vessels, marked by wet skin sores and bleeding into internal organs. The doctor will want to identify the factor in your daughter's body (or environment) that is triggering the sequence of allergic reactions. The risk of repeated episodes is that eventually the kidneys may be involved, leading to chronic renal problems.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My mother, two sisters and brother died from cancer. Naturally, I'm concerned about my health. I'm 72. Recently one of my breasts started aching. A mammogram showed no cancer, but "fibroid changes." Will this problem go away?

DEAR READER: The term "fibroid changes" probably refers to the common condition called fibrocystic disease. Many women, particularly after having nursed their children, develop scar tissue in their breasts. This may be associated with cysts that are entirely benign. The scar tissue feels stringy and lumpy and can be difficult to differentiate from breast tumors. Mammograms help doctors distinguish between fibrocystic disease (which needs no treatment) and breast cancer.

Breast malignancy is not usually painful, so I'm sure that your doctor was simply being cautious in ordering breast X-rays. Nonetheless, you do have a strong family history of cancer. Therefore, periodic mammography is a reasonable procedure for you to consider, with your physician's guidance about appropriate intervals between examinations.

Fibrocystic disease is permanent but the pain and size of the cysts can vary from month to month, even in women past the childbearing years. For reasons that are unclear, some women with fibrocystic disease seem to be at higher risk for developing breast cancer. Continue to check with your doctor and follow his or her advice about how best to keep an eye on your breast problem.

What are the benefits of vitamin E? Dr. Gott's new Health Report tells what's true — and what isn't. Send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Vitamin E.

Haircut styles for military men are a cut above the rest of us

DEAR ABBY: If you have expert advisers in the military, please ask them why young men in the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines are required to have such scalped haircuts. Of course, they should not have long messy hair, but it does seem like they should be allowed to look more like the rest of the population.

These haircuts make them stand out. They look more like convicts instead of men serving their country. What in the world is the reason for this? Seems like it would make them take more pride in serving their country if they were not made to look so different.

SOLDIER'S MOM

DEAR MOM: Off the top of my head, I would say that regulation "scalped" haircuts are required in order to keep the men looking uniform, and to eliminate any question of how long is too long. It would also do away with all manner of self-expression for one who may fancy a ponytail, braids, a Mohawk or a spiked punk creation.

But just to be sure, I checked with the various branches of the military and was informed that "scalped haircuts" are required only for boot camp — for sanitary reasons and to indoctrinate the recruit during the transition period from civilian to military life. After that, many in the military elect to grow their hair to almost civilian length, provided it falls within military regulations.

DEAR ABBY: We loved the poem, "Comedy," sent in by Bertha Goff, who said she has had it for about 70 years. She also said she sent you two poems. Where's the other one you promised to print?

SENIOR CITIZENS,
BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.

DEAR SENIORS: At the risk of upsetting those who "hate" poetry, here it is:

The craziest language
We'll begin with a box and the plural is boxes;

But the plural of ox should be oxen not oxes.

Then one fowl is a goose, but two are called geese.

Yet the plural of moose should never be meese.

You may find a lone mouse or a nest full of mice;

Yet the plural of house is houses, not hices.

If the plural of man is always called men

Why shouldn't the plural of pan be called pen?

If I spoke of my foot and show you my feet,

And I give you a boot, would a pair be called beet?

If one is a tooth and a whole set are teeth

Then one may be that, and three would be those.

Yet hat in the plural would never be hose.

And the plural of cat is cats, not cose.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

We speak of a brother and also of brethren.
But though we say mother, we never say methren.

Then the masculine pronouns are he, his and him.

But imagine the feminine, she, shis and shim.

So English I fancy you will agree,
Is the craziest language you ever did see.

Weekly Health Tip

by Roy D. Katz, R.Ph.

OUTDATED MEDICATION

Most medicines begin losing potency after about 5 years - vaccines are very perishable. Outdated drugs turn into chemically different substances and may become poisonous. A woman who took outdated antibiotic capsules developed a disorder in which the kidneys leak calcium, sugar and protein into the urine. Victims develop multiple fractures and waste away. Discard your medicines when they become out-of-date.

Between the Lines

The story behind the story

By Josie

Jean Marsh

Q. Please tell me a little about Geraldo Rivera. Where is he from, how did he start, what has he been doing? We've seen him on TV and were spellbound. Mrs. H. Madorin, Santa Barbara, Calif.

A. That's just what he wants; he has always been an active proponent of emotional TV. Regarding his TV career: It began in 1970 on ABC's local newscast in New York. He'd spent the previous few years as an activist lawyer and figured that TV would give him a better forum for activism.

It did. He became widely known (and an Emmy winner) for a series exposing the inhuman conditions at an area mental hospital, Willowbrook, which was later closed. From the plateau, it was just a short hop to the network, which he joined as anchor for a short-lived show "Good Night America." When it died, he joined "Good Morning America," and a year later became a featured reporter on "20/20."

Geraldo Rivera

Anything you'd like to know about prominent personalities? Write to Josie, King Features Syndicate, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Q. I'm a big fan of "Upstairs, Downstairs" and would like to know all about Jean Marsh. Also, what has she been doing since then? Has she gotten married and had children? B.K., Mishawaka, Ind.

A. She's 53, from the section of east London called Stoke Newington, the daughter of a printer's assistant and a barmaid. (Interestingly, the accent she used as Rose the maid on "Upstairs, Downstairs" was her mother's. She had undergone diction training to lose her own Cockney years before.)

Growing up in wartime-blitzed London had a profound impact on her: She developed a nervous paralysis and had to drop out of school and, later, the dancing school to which she'd been sent as therapy.

She did learn enough, though, to be featured in the dance film "Tales of Hoffmann" when she was 15. The ensuing entree into the acting world brought her into contact with very different people from the ones to which she was accustomed — "rich, posh" people, as she described them. She married one of them, a comedian named John Pertwee, when she was 19; the marriage dissolved after two years.

She worked her way up in the theater meanwhile and in 1959, had a banner year: She appeared opposite Laurence Olivier and Geraldine Fitzgerald in a TV production and opposite John Gielgud in "Much Ado About Nothing." She continued to work, mostly playing "bored, rich ladies" in TV productions and onstage.

Her career didn't really get another major lift, though, until she and actress friend Eileen Atkins came up with the idea for "Upstairs, Downstairs," based on common elements in their working-class backgrounds. She, of course, had herself cast in the pithy role of Rose.

Since the show's production, she has appeared often onstage in this country, notably in "Travesties" in Los Angeles and "Whose Life Is It Anyway?" on Broadway. She also appeared in the movies "The Eagle Has Landed" and "Return to Oz," the miniseries "Master of the Game," TV movie "The Corsican Brothers" and briefly, in 1982, in the series "9 to 5."

Currently, she's in production with George Lucas' and Ron Howard's super-secret film "Willow" and is about to start another TV project in England.

Regarding marriage and children — no to both. She learned early on that she couldn't have children and, for that reason, felt no compulsion to marry again. She did have a long liaison with director Michael Lindsay-Hogg, though, and another with Albert Finney.

Winston Rekert

Q. I think Winston Rekert of "Adderly" is gorgeous. Please tell me if he's been in anything else. Also, is he married? P.S.B., Cincinnati, Ohio

A. He's Canadian — born in Vancouver — and has been in a number of Canadian productions, some of which have aired in the United States. Among his film credits are "Walls," "Heartaches," "Suzanne," "The Blue Man," "Toby McTeague" and "High Stakes," which are new to us, and "Agnes of God," which was filmed in Canada.

He's also done TV: a six-part miniseries called "Brothers By Choice," a series, "Danger Bay," and a guest spot on "Night Beat." After its prime-time run, "Adderly" returned to its late-night time slot and you should be seeing it and him there the rest of the season. He is married, to a photographer, and they have two sons, Dylan and Carson.

Taming highway hostility and rage

Tips on keeping cool while coping with crowded roads

By George S. Benjamin, M.D., and Steve Franzmeier

For starters, it hadn't been the best of days at work. You had to stay late again, and as you walk to the parking lot, thoughts of problems left unsolved on your desk mingle with worries about what you may have to face at home. You step into the car, slam the door and twist the ignition key a little harder than necessary, anticipating the worst.

On the roads approaching the highway, it begins. Every traffic light turns red just as you get to it, and every open lane you switch to suddenly clogs up. Cars in front of you keep hitting their brakes, cars next to you keep trying to cut you off, cars behind you keep nuzzling up to your rear bumper.

You decide you've had enough. As another car starts to slip in front of you, you hit the gas. He pulls back, but tries again. You throw a block again. And so on. You are, at least for the moment, among the 12 percent of men and 18 percent of women who reported to University of Utah psychologist Charles Turner that they "could gladly kill another driver." So, for that matter, is the guy trying to pull in front of you.

Estimates vary on the degree to which anger and frustration contribute to the millions of traffic accidents that occur on the road each year. But experts throughout the country agree that there is an epidemic of anger on America's highways. And there's every indication the problem will get worse.

For example, the United States Department of Transportation predicts that metropolitan traffic jams will become four times worse, in terms of drive time from point A to point B, by the end of century. A lot more time to sit, stew and think angry thoughts.

Frustration (primarily from lack of control over time), physical and emotional discomfort (as when the air conditioning breaks down) and boorish behavior by other drivers are all prime ingredients for hostility on the road. Too often, such anger is translated into careless, reckless and violent driving.

"Some drivers revel in the feeling of power they get when driving an automobile," says Sergeant Edward Aldridge of the Houston Police Department's Accident Investigation Unit.

"They decide that, for once, they are going to right a wrong. So they dispense 'street justice' on the spot."

Despite our best efforts to keep such revenge fantasies to ourselves, we all occasionally run the risk of playing them out with the accelerator pedal. That's why we can all use some help in deflecting rush-hour rage before doing something we would later regret.

Richard Evans, chairman of the Health Psychology Division of the American Psychological Association, places rush-hour drivers into three categories:

Type A (10 to 15 percent of drivers): Hostile and aggressive, hard driving, quick to anger. Such people are obsessed with reaching their destinations by a scheduled time. They overreact to traffic incidents. Periodically, they channel their anger into aggressive road behavior. Their egos are closely tied up with their driving. Incidentally, such people are also considered by some authorities to be prime targets for heart attacks.

Type B (30 to 40 percent): Laid-back. These drivers take rush hour in stride. They view the things that other drivers do as all just part of life, making anger an irrelevant response.

The remaining rush-hour drivers: They are angry to one degree or another, says Dr. Evans, but they rarely act on that anger. Instead, they internalize it — until they get home. Then they're apt to take it out on family members, or the dog.

If you fall into third group, there are several steps you can take to inch away from the destructive responses of the Type A's and toward the healthier ones of Type B's.

• Before you slip behind the wheel, remind yourself that you are bound to encounter aggressive or inconsiderate drivers, and decide ahead of time to react with a cool head instead of more hostility.

• Admit to yourself that you have no control over the behavior of other drivers. It makes more sense to view their behavior as part of the environment; hostile, aggressive drivers simply come with the territory.

• When you feel yourself getting angry, count out loud as a way to force a pause before you react. Then seize the moment to appeal to your own good sense. Say, "If I take my anger out in my driving, I'm going to hurt myself or someone else sooner or later — maybe this time."

• When another driver throws down the gauntlet, use good common sense and back down from the situation. One Illinois state trooper suggests taping this motto to your dashboard: "It's not chicken to live."

• Whenever possible, drive in a car pool or at least with one other person. The conversation can help defuse your emotional

North Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

- Always watch the behavior of other drivers.
- Keep your vehicle fit; regularly check oil and coolant levels, windshield wipers, tires (both for signs of wear and proper pressure), brakes and lights.
- Wear seat belts, preferably with a shoulder harness.
- Be alert to road hazards — curves and hills, bumps, potholes, soft shoulders.
- Adjust your driving to weather conditions. Use low beams in dense rain and snow; high beams will only reflect the light back in your eyes.

• Keep your driving skills up to snuff; know how to handle skids and slick surfaces.

• In traffic, maintain proper following distance by practicing the "two-second rule." When the driver ahead of you passes a fixed object, count off two seconds ("one-thousand one, one-thousand two"). If you pass the object before the end of two seconds, you're too close; slow down.

If you are being tailgated, extend the count to four seconds. That way, if the person in front of you stops suddenly, you'll have time to slow down gradually to avoid being hit from behind. And, because you'll be driving more slowly, you will encourage the driver behind you to pass you.

• Be advised: Statistically, the most dangerous time to drive is 2 a.m. Sunday mornings. ■ responses to infuriating actions by other drivers.

SAFE DRIVING TIPS
Anyone who doubts that unsafe driving is a health hazard need only scan the statistics. In 1985 alone, there were 45,600 traffic fatalities and 1,700,000 disabling injuries on the road in the United States. The following driving safety tips are from the National Safety Council. Shelley Long gets cheers at home

By Jane Ardmore

"Cheers" made it to the top and made Shelley Long famous. "One hundred and twenty episodes of the series, which I can't believe (when she finally left "Cheers" it was recorded in headlines); the growing strength and beauty of my marriage to Bruce (Tyson), the investment counselor with whom she fell in love virtually on sight and married six months before the series started; my baby, Juliana, who isn't a baby anymore, at 2 years and 5 months, she's a little girl; and four feature films." The last of which, "Outrageous Fortune," with Bette Midler, established her as a film star and has built audience expectation for the recently released "Hello Again."

When we met this time she had just returned from a three-month location shoot in New York — with Juliana of course, and Bruce came in every other weekend.

She was bubbling with the joy of playing Lucy Chadman, the happy housewife who chokes on a too-large bite of South Korean chicken ball and dies, leaving behind her husband (Corbin Bernsen), a successful plastic surgeon whose ambitions had had involved her in a social whirl where she felt clumsy, her adorable 18-year-old son (Thor Fields), her job as a volunteer at the Happy Garden Day Care School and her sister Zelda (Judith Ivey), an eccentric spiritualist.

One year to the day after Lucy's demise, Zelda, who has been feverishly researching ancient lore about bringing back the dead, recites an incantation beside the grave and to her utter amazement, Lucy returns, alive, well and not remembering her death at all.

She dashes home to her safe suburban life, only to find strangers living in her home. They tell her that the former owner has moved to New York. Confused, Lucy goes to the hospital where Zelda claims she died, checks with the handsome doctor (Gabriel Byrne) who tried to save her life, and finally realizing what has happened, rushes off to New York for a romantic reunion with husband Jason, only to find him in bed with her best friend, Kim, now the new Mrs. Chadman.

"I really like this Lucy," says Long. "I have discovered that each character I play, not only do I want to experience that person as much as possible in order to play the part, but having her experiences and the experiences that go with filming her, affects me as a person. So with each role, I become a little different. Even the name Lucy. This is my second Lucy. Remember Lucy Van Patten Brodsky in 'Irreconcilable Differences'? I'm also a big fan of Lucille Ball. And now Lucy Chadman. It's a name created to be unique in itself. I don't know that there are any Chadmans in the world but Lucy claims it for her own and makes it distinctive. This lady is a housewife and loves being just that. I'm not a housewife but I sure like being in my home and being with my family. I've treasured my personal time since I left 'Cheers.'

"It was tough leaving the series. I really cared for all those people, cast and crew, and about Sam and Diane's relationship...that level-headed, down-to-earth man Ted Danson plays so well, who has as (does) every man I've ever known, some difficulty understanding women. For Sam to struggle with that and for Diane to struggle with Sam's caliber of person, was a fine dynamic experience.

"It was hard to let go of that and of Diane who was not Shelley Long but who was such a part of my life for so long, I cried at the wrap party. But I really couldn't go on with that time schedule. I'd promised myself when I married and when I made the choice of having a child, that I would not work so hard that I'd destroy my health or my family. I want a personal life as well as a career.

"I used to take Juliana to the studio and Bruce and I would have late dinners together and mini-vacations. But I didn't know my own house. Bruce had found it while I was on location in San Francisco for 'Money Pit.' We still had three weeks to go and the house was such a hot property we had to make an offer for it without my even seeing it. He sent me pictures and I liked it and said go ahead. It's a wonderful house, but we had a lot of remodeling to do and it was like living in one continual mess while the house was being redone. Then I was off on location again, trying to decorate by long distance. It's only now that I'm beginning to enjoy and organize our home base.

"So I can identify with that side of Lucy. I do need the career side which Lucy doesn't, but I certainly understand her love for her family and her house and her feeling that this is her career. I've known women like this who have gotten married young, whose main goal has always been family. Some of them never even got to college, they just met their dream man and walked down that aisle.

"A great idea for the film, don't you think? Great fun to do — sometimes silly, sometimes poignant, because it has to do with relationships, with family, with us as individuals. It's our life time. How long does each of us really have and what are we doing to do with that time? And if you should have a second chance, what would you change?"

"The people who really love Lucy are glad to see her as his her son and his wife and her own kooky sister. And of course, in due time, the handsome doctor who tried to save her... very important that, because soothsayer Zelda has found one tiny line in the incantation that explains that Lucy must find true love before the next full moon or she'll die all over again!"

Long obviously had a great time. "Oh, yes, I loved it. Nothing in the film is so serious that you have to worry; you're just there. The world has turned and I asked them all, 'Is it possible to go back to work a month after you've had a child? They said, 'If you are prepared for it mentally and physically.' So I walked every day and it was great. I had my baby March 27, 1985, a month after the finish of the 'Cheers' season and two and a half weeks before the beginning of 'The Money Pit.' Then the first two weeks, we were in rehearsal, so by the time we went to camera, I'd lost my excess weight and was feeling wonderful. So was Juliana. I'd taken her right with me to San Francisco, plus a nanny and extra help for the weekends; and Bruce flew in every other weekends and we talked by phone every day.

"Separations are something he and I truly hate (when she did 'Irreconcilable Differences,' she insisted it be shot in L.A.) and we agreed from the first that it would never be more than for two weeks. Actually, it has seldom been that. Bruce believes in taking things as they come but I sometimes jump ahead. I've thought, 'Suppose something did come up, a terrific part in a picture to be made abroad.' Well, one of our dreams has been to spend time in Europe, perhaps six months or more, choosing a country that felt right to us and staying long enough to absorb the culture. We would love to travel and have never had time.

"My dreams of motherhood more than came true, and I have just begun. There are new lessons every day. This is a kind of creativity different from anything I've experienced. I love to write, I love to act, love to sing, and singing pays off nicely. Juliana loves my singing."

Motherhood has given Long something she otherwise might not have had: time. "It's lovely to know that I'm going to be able to have some space, for my friends, for myself and of course, for us, that I can get the house the way I want it without making snap decisions. I can only tell you I'm grateful for the experience. Motherhood has made me a better person, a better wife, a better actress."

"I had been married briefly during the time I was producing commercials in Chicago and although that didn't work, I'd know that I'd marry again. I like being in a relationship, marriage really feels right to me and I'd learned a lot more what I could do to make a better relationship, and what kind of man..." Within a year, she and Bruce were married.

"I checked with all my doctors: my gynecologist, our M.D., we talked to people in the medical community in general,

Ask Dick Kleiner

* Dear Dick: In the mid '70s, there was a game show on CBS called "The Match Game." Who was the host of that show? And how long did it last? — M.P., Dahlart, Texas.
* Dear M.P.: That was Gene Rayburn's show. It started in 1975. The last time I looked, it was still on.
* Dear Dick: I am saddened by the fact that my favorite shows on Saturday night on NBC are gone — "Armen" and "277." Are they gone for good? — D.C., Rock Hill, S.C.
* Dear D.C.: Be of good cheer. When NBC's fall schedule starts, in September, the Saturday night line-up will consist of "The Facts of Life," "227," "The Golden Girls," "Armen" and "Hunter." So you have all that to look forward to.
* Dear Dick: Is Barbara Walters presently married to Merv Griffin? — G.R.B., Kalamazoo, Mich.
* Dear G.R.B.: No, but this is another case of the names being close. Barbara is married to Merv Adelson, not Merv Griffin.
* Dear Dick: My husband and I have a bet going on this question: he says the Leo G. Carroll who played "Topper" is the same person who played Pancho in "The Cisco Kid" movie. I say no. Who is right? — G.C., Fort St. Lucie, Fla.
* Dear G.C.: You win. But I can understand the confusion. The names are similar. Leo Carrillo, an American of Mexican descent, was Pancho. Leo G. Carroll, an English actor, was Topper; he also was Mr. Waverly in "The Man From U.N.C.L.E."
* Dear Dick: I have a bet with my family on this. I say the Monkees made a movie, but my family does not think so. Can you settle this for me? And, if they made a movie, is it available on video cassette? — B.N., Pasadena, Texas.
* Dear B.N.: Yes, the Monkees made a movie, and a pretty good one. It was called "Head," and came out in 1969. According to my lists, it is not available on cassette.
* Dear Dick: Please help settle an argument. Is the actress who plays Sandy, in the show "Throb," the same person who played Maude's daughter on "Maude"? If not, what else did she play in? — C.B., Moncton, N.B., Canada.
* Dear C.B.: No, two different ladies. Adrienne Barbeau was Carol, Maude's daughter. Diana Canova is Sandy. Diana has had a few sitcoms of her own before this — "I'm a Big Girl Now," "Foot in the Door" and "Soap."
* Dear Dick: My favorite television show is "Murder, She Wrote." And, being a piano player, I would love to know what the name of the theme song is. I have taped the portion of the introduction and learned it by ear, but would love to get the music to learn the entire song. Can you help? — D.T., Temple, Texas.
* Dear D.T.: Not much. The problem is that it has not been published, so no sheet music is available. That theme — and it is a good one — was written for the show by John Addison, and he two girls took turns in the part. Were they the twins Lindsay and Sidney Greenbush, or was it just one girl named Lindsay Sydney Greenbush? — Mrs. J.G., Galesburg, Ill.
* Dear Mrs. J.G.: Two girls, twins, Lindsay and Sidney Greenbush took turns playing Carrie Ingalls.
* Dear Dick: My mother thinks David Bowie is 37. My best friend thinks he is 45. I disagree and I believe he is 40. How old is he really? — N.R., Dorothy, N.J.
* Dear N.R.: You're right on the button. He was born on Jan. 8, 1947, making him exactly 40 years old.

Astrograph

Your Birthday

Dec. 13, 1987

The year ahead looks like it will be a very active one for you socially. A raft of new people may enter your life. Some will usher in opportunities, others may bring problems.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Winning and achieving are noble aspirations, but if you attempt to do so at the expense of others today, it will be a hollow victory. Major changes are ahead for Sagittarians in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It could prove embarrassing today if you get into a discussion regarding a matter about which you know little. Don't try to pass yourself off as an authority.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) When doing business with others today, even if they are friends, don't take anything for granted. Insist on proof that they'll stand behind what they sell.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Nothing much of value is likely to be gained today if you try to put a business deal together in a social setting. Do it in the proper environment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's essential that you keep your wits about you at all times today. If a crisis arises, reserve judgment until you have all the facts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you want to keep your budget in a healthy condition, it's best you start trimming non-essential expenditures as of today before things really get out of hand.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be extremely careful today about imparting family secrets to someone. You don't want what you've said distorted or later used against you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You won't be immune from being criticized yourself today if you start finding faults with others. Don't open up a can of worms that will be difficult to reseat.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Financial matters must be handled with the wisdom of Solomon today. If you get careless or do something irrational, you could end up in a bind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might have to deal with several temperamental companions today. If everyone gets off on the wrong foot, trivial issues could be blown out of proportion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try to be thorough and methodical today. If you're careless, that which you attempt to do will be done in a slipshod fashion and may have to be reworked later.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 23) Determine your own priorities today. Otherwise, you might end up striving to meet goals someone else set that are of no value to you.

Exercise doesn't enlarge breasts

Increased chest muscles give appearance of larger bosom

By Dr. June Reinisch

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Is it possible to increase bust size through exercise? And if it is, how much?

DEAR READER: No exercise will increase the amount of breast tissue; therefore, it is not possible to increase breast size with exercise.

What can be changed are the muscles under the breasts. Exercise designed to strengthen and firm the pectoral (or chest) muscles may slightly increase the measurement around the bust, even though the breasts themselves are not enlarged.

Exercises that improve posture may also help to give an illusion of larger breasts. When the back is straight and the shoulders are back and down, the breasts may appear larger even though their actual size remains the same.

Safe exercises that firm and strengthen pectoral, back and shoulder muscles might produce some modest appearance of change and would also be good for your overall fitness and health. However, devices that claim to actually increase breast size are a waste of both your time and money. If you are very unhappy about your breast size, breast-augmentation surgery is worth consideration.

Drug problems

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am a 60-year-old man and have been taking various medicines for high blood pressure for more than 30 years. I took two drugs in combination for quite a while and thought they were responsible for gynecomastia (breast enlargement) and other undesirable changes. However, I stopped using those two drugs eight years ago and these changes have not improved.

My breasts are very sensitive, particularly the nipples, and bother me a great deal. Is there anything I could take to desensitize my breasts? I do not wish to have reduction surgery.

Studies of adolescents have shown that most are very aware of their own physical changes, but they feel that their own growth is either too slow or too fast, even when they clearly do match normal development

The Kinsey Report

DEAR READER: The cause of gynecomastia (which may occur in both or only one of the male breasts) is not always clear, even though more than one-third of older men have some degree of breast enlargement.

Several medications used to treat high blood pressure are known to cause gynecomastia in some men. However, when a medication is the sole cause, the breast size usually is partially or completely reduced when the drug is stopped, unless it is replaced by another drug with the same side effect or unless something else was causing the gynecomastia.

It's important to try to diagnose what is causing the breast enlargement, especially if discomfort occurs, because this can be one sign of several serious illnesses, including breast cancer, liver failure and hormonal imbalances. Other possible causes include alcohol consumption and obesity.

Have you already been tested for hormonal changes and evaluated for liver, kidney or other malfunctions? If not, consult an internist or an endocrinologist. If you've already had these tests, ask your physician to send the results to a specialist for a second opinion.

I'm not aware of any existing medication that has the sole effect of reducing gynecomastia and nipple sensitivity, regardless of what is causing the problem.

Your treatment options will depend on what, if anything, is found. For example, if it is discovered that you have a high level of estrogen and that this is not caused by a tumor of one of the hormone-producing glands, taking drugs with an antiestrogenic action may reduce breast size and sensitivity.

Breast-reduction surgery does satisfactorily reduce the size of the breast, but may not reduce their sensitivity. This type of plastic surgery can also relieve the psychological problems some men have when breast enlargement impairs their sense of having a sexually attractive male body.

It's important that you check your breasts regularly and report any lumps, thickening or other changes to your physician. I also urge you to make sure that you've had a thorough examination and tests to rule out any life-threatening condition. Don't just assume that the gynecomastia was caused by drugs and that nothing can or should be done.

Trying patience

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 17 and will be a senior this year. These past few months I've become concerned because my penis is not growing. It's been the same size for about the past year. I've tried to be patient, but now I wonder if something is wrong.

I shave regularly, hair is starting to grow on my chest and I have a lot of hair under my arms and around my penis. Masturbation doesn't seem to be helping it grow, either. Should I see a special doctor?

My parents don't know about this, nor does anyone else. Is there some medicine I could take?

P.S.: I'm starting to have a serious girlfriend and would be totally embarrassed if I couldn't have sex with her. Please try to put this in the paper before next weekend.

DEAR READER: Your letter suggests that your penis had been growing, but that you have not noticed further growth recently. For most young men, the penis begins to grow between the ages of 10 and 15 and has reached most of its adult size between ages 12 and 17, although a few completely normal boys will begin earlier or reach their adult size later.

One method of describing pubertal development uses several different characteristics to assess five stages of growth. For example, the stage in which body hair increases (such as chest hair, which is different from underarm, pubic or facial hair) also includes some further lengthening and thickening of the penis. However, it would be normal for the growth rate at this stage to be slower than it was when the pubic hair was increasing rapidly.

It is not unusual for young men to worry about penis size. Because such worry can hamper

Exercises that improve posture may also help to give an illusion of larger breasts psychological and social development. It's worth asking your physician about it at your next visit. If a penis has made no growth at all by age 17, then it may be necessary to be referred to a pediatric endocrinologist for tests and treatment.

Unfortunately, many young men have a great deal of misinformation about puberty, adulthood and sex. For example, whether one masturbates or not has no effect on the rate of penis growth or on the size of the penis in adulthood. There are also potentially harmful false expectations. Even many adult men are not aware that the size of a non-erect penis bears little relationship to its erect size. This means that, regardless of various sizes when flaccid, nearly all adult men have penises measuring between 4 and 6 inches in length when erect, a length quite sufficient for intercourse and the satisfaction of a partner.

Studies of adolescents have shown that most are very aware of their own physical changes, but they feel that their own growth is either too slow or too fast, even when they clearly do match normal development.

If one accepts the myth that only adults have sexual feelings, then an adolescent may interpret his or her increased interest in sex, sex fantasies and sexual feelings as a sign of adulthood rather than as just one more sign of normal puberty. The decision to begin having sex with a partner should involve reflection on aspects other than whether one's equipment has reached a sufficient size.

It can be difficult to sort out feelings about physical changes, sexual issues, cultural and religious values and expectations. Find an adult who can help and who can also give you factual information.

Some physicians are good at this, especially those who specialize in adolescent patients. Some clergymen, school counselors, Boy Scout leaders and other adults who work with children and young adults also have special training in this area.

Fact or fiction?

DEAR DR. REINISCH: My wife and I are trying for our second child and I need to know if something is fact or fiction. A friend told us that three other couples got pregnant because the husband took cold showers or baths, and that this increases the sperm count. Is this true?

DEAR READER: There is evidence that heat can interfere with sperm production, but this is usually after prolonged exposure to heat and certainly would not be reversed by a few minutes spent in a cold shower or a cold bath.

When a low sperm count has been determined to be caused by heat — for example, by wearing tight underwear (which holds the testicles too close to the body, so that sperm production is reduced by the higher temperature of the body) or by regular long soaks in a hot tub, a man is told both to avoid the behavior and that it may take several months for the sperm count to increase. This is because it takes about 70 days from the time a testicle produces a sperm cell until it appears in ejaculated semen, as a fully matured sperm that is able to swim.

In fact, there is speculation that prolonged exposure to cold (such as working in a cold storage area) may be as detrimental to the sperm count in some men as is heat exposure.

If you and your wife have been trying unsuccessfully for a pregnancy for more than 12 months (not using contraception, her menstrual cycles are regular, and you've had intercourse during her most fertile time just before ovulation), then it's time to check on what's delaying conception.

One of the first tests will be a sperm count, and you can ask at that point if high temperatures might be involved if a low sperm count is found.

Until then, you should continue doing whatever was successful in conceiving your first child, and forego the cold showers. The usual folklore about cold showers is that they will dampen the man's enthusiasm for having sex or becoming sexually aroused, and you certainly would not want to risk that when your goal is to have a second child.

Ladies in the limelight of comedy

By Richard Mintzer

Watching "I Love Lucy," "The Carol Burnett Show" and wonderful television appearances by Phyllis Diller, Joan Rivers, Shelley Winters and Lily Tomlin have not only brought us laughter, but have served as the inspiration for many of today's 300-plus female comics.

Like their male counterparts, the ladies of comedy bare their soul nightly to late-night audiences at comedy clubs across the country. They talk about men, dating, dieting, television, politics, religion, sex and everything else from a woman's point of view. And as the field becomes more competitive, the comedienne must find a style, or a character, that will help her stand apart from the crowd.

All comics, male or female, want to be remembered and distinguished by their act. They hope to hear their audiences walk out commenting on "The Tall One," "The Fat One," "The Housewife," "The Flirt," "The Shy One" or whatever character they've evolved their real personality into for the stage.

Among the leading funny ladies on the current comedy scene is Roseanne Barr, the overweight housewife who, after several "Tonight Show" appearances, recently had her own HBO hour-long comedy special. Barr, who honed her skills in Denver, moved to the L.A. area where she rose to stardom talking about the kids, the husband and food ("I love a good Nestle's Crunch omelet").

Southern-born Brett Butler has seen dramatic progress in her five-year comedy career. She has advanced from doing a set between bands in Southern rock clubs, to two appearances on the "Tonight Show," and a full schedule of bookings across the country. Butler, who describes herself as "the girl behind the girl next door," presents a unique blend of clever toughness. She openly acknowledges that women face the problem of sexism: "I know what you're thinking, if someone had taught her to make biscuits she wouldn't be up there."

Nothing, on the other hand, would keep this self-acclaimed rebel from the stage. With her Southern drawl, she talks about her old boyfriends from the South: "One was part tractor," she explains, then describes losing her virtue to a guy in a pickup truck: "You sure look purdy in this light, but I'm gonna have to cut 'em out before the dogs and the helicopters find us."

At the other end of the spectrum is Rita Rudner, whose soft-spoken, mild-mannered approach to comedy has earned her eight appearances on "Late Night With David Letterman," plus several appearances on HBO specials. With a gentle smile, Rudner delivers brilliant one-line observations about her life: "Neurotics build castles in the air, psychotics live in them, my mother cleans them."

Rudner, a Florida native, left a Broadway dancing career and has spent the past six years putting her act together. More recently she's been taking it on the road throughout Europe, and on to Australia.

To describe Margaret Smith as unique would be an understatement. Her approach to comedy centers around the bleak, dark side of life. She delivers such observations with conviction in a most deadpan manner. "When I was 9," explains Smith, "my family started calling me a murderer because my turtle died. I was just trying to make him look pretty, so I combed his head... off." Smith's intelligent humor requires an attentive audience.

Her late-late club spots, at 2 a.m., often pose a problem performing before a semi-sober crowd. Nevertheless, she has gained a cult following from her "Letterman" appearances. She feels as comedy continues to gain mass exposure, the audiences will become increasingly sophisticated, which will create an eagerness to listen more closely. This will assist the most clever comics, such as Margaret Smith.

The quintessential Jewish American Princess (JAP) Karen Haber has channeled her love of Joan Rivers into a personality that thrives on shopping, men and getting married... not necessarily in that order. In a voice that could be categorized as a cross between a squeak and a whine, she delivers direct set-ups and sharp punch lines. Haber, who made several appearances on "The Late Show," with and without Joan Rivers, has her character so well defined that she enjoys exploring new subjects through the character's eyes, such as a JAP's look at world politics or sports.

Most of the successful female comics say they enjoy the creative (writing) process as well as being on stage. Carol Leiffer, a 10-year comedy veteran, feels it's important not to aim her material only at women. Her versatile writing style and successful career as a stand-up comic earned her a writing position on the staff of "Saturday Night Live."

Steve Allen protege Joy Behar is a perfect example of a funny lady with an uninspiring career path. Whereas Brett Butler was a truck driver, and Margaret Smith a chef, Behar was a teacher, a receptionist, a secretary and finally a comic. She is now hosting an hour-long cable TV show entitled "Way Off Broadway" which thus far has had Behar far outshining the lackuster production.

Behar, like Carol Leiffer and many of her other contemporaries, enjoys spontaneity, and will seize the opportunity to create an impromptu laugh. Whether spontaneous or scripted, funny material is the bottom line. Much of their material is culled from real-life experiences, with a bit of exaggeration.

While Roseanne Barr's household image is making her a household name, these other "Ladies of Comedy" are quickly gaining the recognition they've worked so long to ascertain. The countless hours of waiting by the bar to get a late-night spot, the endless auditions and tedious rewrites won't be forgotten as they each become "overnight sensations" to the public.

Comedy is a serious business, and these women know that as they achieve success and strive toward sitcoms and films, there are actresses, secretaries, teachers and housewives showcasing their talents all over the country as they make the transition into comedy.

A trio of new comedienne to watch for emanate out of the New York clubs. They include the soft-spoken, attractive, shy blond Anita Wise, who hails from Pennsylvania, and uses her squeaky voice to her advantage. "I'd answer the phone at the office, and they'd say, very good, now is your daddy there?" Wise has already appeared on the "Today" show, and is playing the college circuit.

Kathleen Garridy, originally from the small town of Deal, N.J., has just left the secretarial world for comedy. Now a late-night emcee at the New York's Catch a Rising Star, she talks about the office, and her theory of taking permanent jobs on a temporary basis.

And finally Ulica's Patty Rosboro, now touring the country, presents a high-energy, physical, slightly raunchy act. This attractive brunette thinks nothing of tying herself up in Scotch tape in the middle of her act. She has an abundance of enthusiasm, and is honestly enjoying herself while pleasing her audience.

Essentially, for a successful comedienne that's what it's all about, having fun, putting on a good performance and leaving them laughing. ■

Dining In

Ethnic traditions of holiday breads

By Philomena Corradeno

How often have you said, or heard friends say, "I wish I'd gotten my mother's recipe for her holiday breads. I'd watch and sometimes grease the pans but I never bothered to learn."

Maybe it's time to revive traditions we can pass on. Get the younger ones involved so they won't be echoing those regrets someday.

Most ethnic groups have their own holiday breads. They may all be the same basically but some little twist sets each apart — shape, flavoring, garnish.

Bread-baking is such a satisfying hobby. Just an ordinary, everyday yeast bread sends tantalizing aromas through the air. When you add spices, flavorings and fruits, the fragrance is too much to resist.

These lovely breads may be baked ahead and frozen... if you can keep the family at bay when the delicacies come out of the oven.

Store-bought stollen is available all year, but the Christmas variety is in a class of its own. Here are Holiday Stollen, plus a variation called German Christmas Bread and Hutzelbrot.

HOLIDAY STOLLEN

- 1/2 cup seedless raisins
- 1/2 cup chopped mixed candied fruits and peels
- 1/4 cup orange juice
- 5 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup slivered almonds, chopped
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons grated orange peel
- 1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
- 1 package rapid-rising yeast
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1/2 cup (1 stick) margarine or butter
- 1/2 cup water
- 2 eggs, at room temperature
- confectioners' sugar, optional

In a small bowl, soak raisins and fruit in orange juice.

Set aside 1 cup flour. In large bowl, mix remaining flour, slivered almonds, sugar, orange peel, lemon peel, salt and yeast. This attractive brunette thinks nothing of tying herself up in Scotch tape in the middle of her act. She has an abundance of enthusiasm, and is honestly enjoying herself while pleasing her audience.

Stir in fruit-orange juice mixture and eggs; mix in only enough reserved flour to make soft dough. On lightly floured surface, knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes.

Divide dough in half; roll each half to 10 x 7-inch oval. Fold long side over to within 1/2 inch of opposite side; seal seam. Place on greased baking sheets. Cover; let rise in warm draft-free place until double the size, about 50 to 55 minutes.

Bake at 375F for 25 to 30 minutes or until done. Remove from baking sheets and cool on wire racks. If desired, dust with confectioners' sugar.

Yield: 2 cakes.

GERMAN CHRISTMAS BREAD

- 6 cups unsifted all-purpose flour, divided
- 1 1/2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ground mace
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cardamom
- 2 packages active dry yeast
- 1/2 cup warm water (110-115F)
- 1 cup milk, scalded
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted, divided
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten
- 1 cup golden raisins
- 1/2 cup diced mixed candied fruits
- 1/2 cup blanched, slivered almonds

Combine 5 cups of the flour, cinnamon, mace and cardamom; set aside. Dissolve yeast in warm water; set aside. In a large mixing bowl combine milk, sugar, salt and 1/4 cup of the butter. When temperature reaches 110-115F, stir in yeast; mix well. Beat in eggs. Gradually stir in the flour mixture and enough additional flour (about 1 cup) to form a firm dough.

Turn onto a floured board. Knead dough, gradually adding raisins, candied fruit and nuts; knead until smooth. Place in a greased bowl; turn to grease top of dough. Cover and let rise in a warm place (85F) until double in bulk, about 1 hour. Punch down dough; let rest 10 minutes.

Divide dough in half. Roll each half into a rectangle 6 x 10 inches. Fold sides of dough to center, stretching to make a long loop, wide in the middle and narrow at the ends. Place on a greased baking sheet; repeat with remaining dough. Brush tops with remaining 2 tablespoons melted butter. Cover and let rise in a warm place (85F) until double in bulk, about 45 minutes.

Bake in a preheated 375F oven until browned and breads sound hollow when tapped with knuckles, 30 to 35 minutes. Let cool on wire racks. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar. Wrap tightly to store.

- 1/2 teaspoon ground cardamom
- 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1 1/4 cups milk
- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 2 teaspoons vanilla extract
- 3 eggs
- 1 cup golden raisins
- 1 cup maraschino cherries, halved
- 1/2 cup mixed candied fruits
- 1 cup chopped walnuts
- White Glaze
- walnuts for garnish

In a large bowl of an electric mixer combine 3 cups of the flour, sugar, yeast, lemon peel, salt, cinnamon, cardamom and nutmeg. In a saucepan combine milk and butter; heat just to warm (butter does not need to melt). Add vanilla. Pour liquid into flour mixture; beat at high speed for 2 minutes. Beat in eggs one at a time. Add 1/2 cup more flour and the raisins, cherries, candied fruits and walnuts; beat at high speed for 2 minutes. With a wooden spoon stir in remaining 5 1/2 cups flour or enough to make a soft dough.

Turn out onto a lightly floured surface; knead until smooth. Place in a lightly greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover and let rise until double in bulk, about 2 hours.

Punch down dough. On a floured surface knead lightly. Cut into 12 equal parts. Roll each part into a rope about 10 inches long. Using 3 ropes at a time, shape into braids. Place braids on 2 greased cookie sheets. Cover and let rise until double in bulk, about 1 hour. Bake in a preheated 350F oven until bread sounds hollow when tapped with knuckles, about 45 minutes. Cool on wire racks. Spoon White Glaze (recipe follows) on top of braids and sprinkle with walnuts.

Yield: 4 braids.

WHITE GLAZE

- 1 1/4 cups confectioner's sugar
- 2 tablespoons milk
- 1/4 teaspoon vanilla extract

In a small bowl stir all ingredients together until smooth.

King's Cake, also called King's Ring and King's Bread, has its roots in French and Spanish lore. It's a fun cake-bread with a tiny token hidden in the dough before baking. Traditionally King's Cake is served on Little Christmas, January 6, otherwise known as Epiphany or Twelfth Night.

Yield: 2 loaves.

HUTZELBROT

- 6 1/2 cups all-purpose flour, divided
- 2 packages active dry yeast
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon ground anise seed
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1/2 cups water
- 1 cup milk
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
- 1 (14-ounce) package figs, chopped
- 1 (12-ounce) package pitted prunes, chopped
- 1 (10-ounce) package pitted dates, chopped
- 1 cup diced dried pears or apples
- 1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
- 1/2 cup diced candied orange peel

In a large bowl of an electric mixer combine 2 1/2 cups of the flour, yeast, sugar, cinnamon, salt, anise and cloves. In a medium saucepan combine water, milk and butter. Heat over low heat until lukewarm (butter does not need to melt). Pour into bowl containing flour mixture. Beat at low speed until blended. Beat at high speed for 3 minutes. With a wooden spoon, stir in remaining ingredients; mix well. Stir in enough flour (about 2 1/2 cups) to make a soft dough.

Turn out onto a lightly floured board; knead in enough flour (about 1 1/2 cups) to make a smooth dough. Place in a lightly greased bowl; turn dough so that greased side is up. Cover lightly with a towel; let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk, about 1 1/2 hours.

Punch down dough. Cut into 2 equal parts; shape each part into an oval; place on lightly greased baking sheets. Cover lightly; let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour. Bake in a preheated moderate oven (375F) until golden and bread sounds hollow when tapped with fingers, about 35 minutes. Remove bread to wire racks and cool.

Yield: 2 breads.

SCANDINAVIAN CHRISTMAS FRUIT BRAIDS

- about 9 cups all-purpose flour (unsifted), divided
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 packages active dry yeast
- 1 tablespoon lemon peel
- 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Next is a spiced Scandinavian Fruit Braid with walnuts, raisins, maraschino cherries and glace fruits.

Schwarzenegger is a star

In movie theaters

The Running Man (R) His English is still barely above the grunt level, and his acting continues to give new meaning to the word "stiff." But Arnold Schwarzenegger is a full-fledged movie star — a cartoon-style mock-fascist palooka who can single-handedly send an action movie into box-office stratosphere. Witness Arnie's latest smash, "The Running Man," a gory, slam-bang blend of "Rollerball," "Blade Runner" and other apocalyptic thrillers. "The Running Man" is set in the 21st century. The government and media have joined corrupt forces and the energies of the citizenry have been co-opted — sublimated into a life-and-death gladiatorial TV game show hosted by a smarmy closet-sadist ("Family Feud" host Richard Dawson).

Arnie plays a muscle-bound cop who has been framed and then entered as a contestant on the TV show. That dark-eyed spitfire Maria Conchita Alonso ("Moscow On the Hudson") co-stars as a woman who at first betrays Arnie to the authorities, only to realize that he's innocent of the charges leveled against him. So much for the movie's attempt at a love interest for Arnie who, with his narcissistically maintained super-physique, seems somehow too self-sufficient for sex anyway.

The movie is splashily designed, and the glitzy, ominously caricatured TV game show milieu is darkly compelling. Richard Dawson as the sleazeball emcee is an inspired stroke of casting. There are some smart touches, like the sweet little old lady in the audience who turns out to be a rabid authority on blood sports.

Still this is basically a dumb, bloody action film that gooses audiences the same way the TV game show within the movie does. The actors don't get much help either: They're primarily of value in terms of how good (and mean) they look running this way and that in their spandex body suits. Poor Yaphet Kotto, that chunky, first-rate character actor who plays one of Arnie's cohorts: Spandex doesn't do Kotto justice at all. Grade: **

House of Games (R) Playwright David Mamet

Filmmaker

Robert DiMatteo

"Gleengary Glen Ross" makes an auspicious directorial debut with this slow-building new-style film noir. It's the portrait of a repressed psychiatrist (Lindsay Crouse, Mame's wife) who sets out to help one of her clients and ends up the patsy of a series of dangerous con games.

The terrific Joe Mantegna co-stars as the chief con, a charming scoundrel who awakens the shrink's passions — to devastating effect. The movie is full of twists and turns, not all of which work dramatically, and Mamet has directed his actors in studied, resolutely minimalist fashion. But the approach pays off: The movie is marvelously sly and unsettling, one of the most distinctive American films of the year. Grade: ****

New home video

Outrageous Fortune (R) Touchstone, $89.95. Shelley Long and Bette Midler pair up — entertainingly — as two acting-class students who discover they have the same two-timing boyfriend (Peter Coyote). This witty machine of a commercial comedy takes the formula of male-buddy action movies and gives most of the cliches a good spin. Grade: ***

Yankees deal for Santana

DALLAS (AP) — The New York Mets broke up their 1986 World Series champions a little more Friday when they dealt shortstop Rafael Santana to the New York Yankees hours after trading away relief pitcher Jesse Orosco.

The deal that sent Santana to the Yankees was the first between the two intra-city rivals ever to involve a major-league player. Four minor-league players were also included in the deal.

Going to the Yankees with Santana was left-handed pitcher Victor Garcia.

The Yankees gave up catcher-outfielder Phil Lombardi, outfielder Darren Reed and left-handed pitcher Steve Frey.

Santana was the second member of the 1986 World Series champions to be traded Friday.

Earlier in the day, Orosco went to the Los Angeles Dodgers in a three-way, eight-player trade that also involved the Oakland Athletics. The Mets acquired minor-league right-handed pitchers Jack Savage, Kevin Tapani and Walt Whitehurst.

The deals were made at the site of the winter meetings — which officially ended Wednesday — after many of the executives had departed.

"We're pleased to be able to obtain Rafael," Yankees General Manager Lou Piniella said at a news conference. "One of the things we were seeking at the meetings was an experienced major-league shortstop, and I feel we have satisfied those needs by obtaining him."

"He is a solid fielder who can help us at the plate and is a proven major-league talent."

Santana, 29, batted .255 last season, hitting five home runs and driving in 44 runs. He was acquired by the Mets from the St. Louis Cardinals after the 1983 season. Ironically, the infielder from the Dominican Republic spent his first four years in organized ball with the Yankees after signing as a free agent in 1976.

Garcia, 21, had a 3-8 record with the Mets' Class A affiliate at Columbia in the South Atlantic League in 1987.

Lombardi, 24, hit .268 with Columbus of the International League this year, and had one hit in eight at-bats for the Yankees. He also played in 20 games for Albany of the Class AA Eastern League and hit .250.

Reed, 22, played for Albany and Columbus during the 1987 season. He hit .329 for Columbus in 21 games and hit .319 with 20 homers in 107 games for Albany.

Frey, 24, was 2-1 for Columbus with a 3.04 earned run average and six saves.

The transaction was the first between the two teams since Aug. 2, 1979, when the Mets bought pitcher Ray Burris from the Yankees.

Surgery on Burt called successful

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Nose tackle Jim Burt's back surgery was a "complete success," the New York Giants' team physician said Friday.

Burt underwent a four-hour operation Thursday at the Hospital for Special Surgery in New York City for the removal of two discs in his lower back. Burt originally was to have only one disc removed.

Team physician Russell Warren, who performed the surgery, said Burt was "up and walking around" Friday morning and that he had regained some strength in his left leg.

Burt had complained about numbness in the leg. Warren said Burt will remain at the hospital for five to six days and will wear a corset when he returns home. His rehabilitation is to begin with swimming, Warren said.

Burt, in his seventh season with the Giants, injured his back on Nov. 22 in a game against the New Orleans Saints. His last game was the following week against the Washington Redskins.

Giants Coach Bill Parcells said earlier this week that the 28-year-old Burt could be lifting weights as early as March.

Eight players were traded Friday in deals affecting three teams. Among those traded (from left) were: Matt Young and Bob Welch of the Dodgers, Jesse Orosco of the Mets and Alfredo Griffin and Jay Howell of Oakland.

Mets send Orosco to L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers gave up one of the kingpins of their starting rotation, hard-throwing righthander Bob Welch, to obtain shortstop Alfredo Griffin and relief pitchers Jay Howell and Jesse Orosco in a three-team trade Friday.

After more than nine years of a Dodger career alternating between brilliance and arm problems, Welch was sent to the Oakland Athletics along with reliever Matt Young. A rising star with Seattle in 1986, lefthander Young had a disappointing season with Los Angeles in 1987.

The Dodgers, trying to stop a slide of two straight losing seasons, obtained Griffin and right-handed reliever Howell from Oakland along with left-handed relief pitcher Orosco from the New York Mets.

Orosco was a regular-season and World Series hero with New York in 1986, but struggled for much of 1987.

The Mets ended up with three minor-league pitching prospects in the deal, which was completed two days after the official close of the major-league baseball meetings in Dallas.

The three right-handers obtained by the Mets were Jack Savage from the Dodgers and Kevin Tapani and Walt Whitehurst from Oakland.

Mets Vice President for player personnel, Joe McIlvaine, said: "We feel we've really helped the club with three young pitchers who are only a year away from the big leagues."

Both the Mets and Athletics had been after Welch in several days of talks with the Dodgers, whose bullpen and infield defense were glaring problems in 1987.

"I like Orosco, he's a winner," Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said in Dallas. "We feel that we've got two good relief pitchers. The benefit of this trade is that we filled in a couple of positions that we needed to. We felt that when the season was over, we had to really change our ball club.

"I feel real bad about Bob Welch. Last night I was really sick to my stomach about Bob Welch — he's helped me win playoffs."

Sandy Alderson, Oakland's vice president of baseball operations, said the three-way deal was complicated.

"There were so many different turns in the road, it was hard to know what was around the next corner," he said.

"We came to the meetings looking for hard-throwing right-handed pitchers. Now we have three of them," the Mets' McIlvaine said.

Savage had a combined 5-10 record with San Antonio and Albuquerque in 1987 and had no record and a 2.70 ERA in three games with the Dodgers.

Flach, Seguso American hopes

By Robert Millward
The Associated Press

LONDON — Wimbledon champions Ken Flach and Robert Seguso lost their last round-robin match Friday but still advanced to the semifinals of the $200,000 Masters Doubles tennis championships.

Flach and Seguso were the only Americans to reach the semifinals of the 16-man competition, despite losing 6-3, 7-6 (7-5), 6-1 to countrymen Gary Donnelly and Peter Fleming.

Because of the round-robin format, Flach and Seguso, who are aiming for their 20th career doubles title, already were assured of a semifinal berth before their match against Donnelly and Fleming.

The Wimbledon titlists face Spain's Sergio Casal and Emilio Sanchez in the first semifinal Saturday. The other semifinal matches Czechoslovakia's Miloslav Mecir and Tomas Smid against defending champions Stefan Edberg and Anders Jarryd of Sweden.

Edberg and Jarryd needed to capture only one set in their final group match against Australians Laurie Warder and Peter Doohan and won 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 7-6.

Mecir and Smid, who already have won four doubles titles this year, breezed to their third victory of the competition by beating American Paul Annacone and South African Christo Van Rensburg 6-2, 6-1, 6-4.

Casal and Sanchez, who lost their opening match in straight sets to Flach and Seguso, bounced back to win their next two, including Friday's 7-6, 6-4, 7-6 victory over Americans Scott Davis and David Pate.

Mecir and Smid scrambled through their opening match against Edberg and Jarryd on Wednesday despite losing the first two sets and then being 5-3 down in the fifth.

But they roared through their next two dropping only one set with Mecir providing the spectacular shots and Smid playing solidly behind a booming serve.

Eastern Michigan facing major task

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Eastern Michigan has the tough task of ending a string of one-sided losses by Mid-American Conference football teams in the California Bowl when the Hurons play San Jose State on Saturday.

Pacific Coast Athletic Association teams have rolled up 118 points while winning the last three games and have limited their MAC opponents to just 27 points. That was in sharp contrast to the first two games in 1981 and 1982 at Fresno State's Bulldog Stadium. Both were decided in the last minute with the MAC winning the first game and the PCAA the second.

Eastern Michigan's Hurons, 9-2, will have an experience handicap in this year's game against the San Jose Spartans, 10-1. The Hurons have never been in any of the six previous Cal Bowls, while the Spartans will be appearing in their third, the most recent a 37-7 thrashing of Miami of Ohio last year.

The Spartans are the nation's top passing team with quarterback Mike Perez throwing for 3,260 yards in 1987, good for 22 touchdowns. San Jose's Guy Liggins led the nation in receiving yardage with 1,208.

Eastern Michigan quarterback Ron Adams had 1,427 yards on the year in a balanced attack that featured 1,112 yards running by tailback Gary Fattou.

"The thing that's been fun about coaching Gary is from fall to spring and from spring to fall each year he gets better," said Huron coach Jim Harkema. "To already be fairly talented and to get better — that is pretty significant. That is why he's where he is at today."

The Spartans' top runner, Kenny Jackson, had 818 yards on the ground and 309 receiving for 16 touchdowns.

Righetti's 'loyalty' is tested

NEW YORK (AP) — Japan's yen for American baseball talent has triggered a feud between New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner and his best reliever, free-agent Dave Righetti.

Steinbrenner says Righetti's loyalty to the Yankees will be tested by the multi-million dollar contract he has been offered by a Japanese team.

"It's a nice decision for him to make ... if it's real," he said. "But it's also a chance to see if it's only money (he wants). They all talk about Yankee pride and loyalty. Well, if it's only money, then he's got to go."

Righetti, who has saved 138 games for the Yankees over the past four seasons, was upset by Steinbrenner's remark.

"I've pitched my butt off and I haven't gotten into any trouble and now he questions my loyalty?" the 29-year-old left-hander said. "I don't need that. That offer is real, and I'm considering it."

Published estimates of the Japanese offer have ranged from $8 million to $20 million. Neither Righetti nor his agent, Bill Goodstein, will identify the team or the amount of the offer, but Goodstein said it would make the pitcher the highest-paid player in the history of team sports.

"The offer is for real," he said Friday. "We're not talking about a rumor."

Some published reports have identified the Japanese team as the Tokyo Giants, while others have named the Yakult Swallows. A Giants official acknowledged that the team is interested in Righetti, but denied that an offer has been made.

"We're at the stage of determining whether he wants to come to Japan," he said.

Righetti, who saved a major-league record 46 games in 1986, said he was shocked at the amount of the Japanese offer.

"It's a staggering amount of money to play baseball," he said from his home in San Jose, Calif. "I have to take it very seriously."

Righetti has until Dec. 15 to decide whether to accept arbitration with the Yankees. If he turns it down, he can still negotiate with the team until Jan. 8.

"We want to make a decision as soon as possible, and put an end to all the speculation," Goodstein said. Righetti, who made $800,000 last season, is reportedly asking the Yankees for a three-year contract worth about $1.5 million per year.

Yankees General Manager Lou Piniella said the team recently increased its offer to Righetti, but Goodstein called the increase "so negligible, I didn't even notice it."

"Dave was underwhelmed by the Yankee offer and overwhelmed by the Japanese offer," he said.

Steinbrenner said he was disturbed by the Japanese offer. "If they want good relations with American baseball, they better be careful," he said.

Although Righetti is seeking a three-year contract, Goodstein said the pitcher would be willing to sign for one season.

"It all depends on the situation," he said. "There's a lot of issues involved besides money, like the role that David will play on the team. Money has never been the pre-eminent issue, and it still interesting conversation over the phone with Tom," Goodstein said. Goodstein said Grieve and Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine are "from a different generation than a lot of people you become accustomed to dealing with in baseball. They're much more identifiable to people like Righetti or myself."

Yankee Owner George Steinbrenner (left) and General Manager Lou Piniella are wondering now if ace reliever Dave Righetti will sign a staggering offer from a team in Japan.

NBA today

Los Angeles Clippers of Seattle (10:30 p.m. EST). After an off-day Friday, the teams complete a home-and-home series with the SuperSonics looking to avenge Thursday's 113-66 blowout victory.

Akron Oilers, Rockets, scored 19 points, grabbed 14 rebounds, blocked seven shots, handed off six assists and made four steals in Houston's 98-83 victory over the Utah Jazz.

The Los Angeles Clippers' 113-66 victory over Seattle Thursday night was their seventh of the season against 10 losses. Last season, the Clippers did not win their seventh game until Jan. 31, when they beat Utah 114-110 to improve their record to 7-27.

Reserve forward Brad Sellers of Chicago scored 17 points and blocked four shots in the fourth quarter to help the Bulls to a 111-105 come-from-behind victory over Milwaukee.

New York backup center Bill Cartwright equalled his season-high of 23 points on 8-for-10 shooting and grabbed six rebounds in just 21 minutes Thursday night, leading the Knicks to a 113-97 triumph over the Denver Nuggets.

Sports in Brief

Warriors suspend Chris Mullin

OAKLAND, Calif. — Chris Mullin was suspended for Friday night's game by the Golden State Warriors, a day after missing a practice, for the second time this season.

Mullin failed to show up for practice on Thursday and was barred from practice on Friday as well as the game against the Atlanta Hawks. Coach George Karl, who met with team officials Thursday night to discuss the situation, said the starting guard also would be fined.

The Warriors are off to a 3-13 start for the NBA season, although Mullin's scoring average has improved to 17.7 points a game from 15.1 last season.

Hulbert, Tway in golf lead

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Mike Hulbert and Bob Tway shot a 13-under-par 59 Friday to surge into a five-stroke lead at the halfway point of the $600,000 Chrysler PGA team championship.

Hulbert and Tway, runners-up a year ago, had 11 birdies and an eagle at the Palm Beach Polo and Country Club for a two-round score of 120, 24 under par.

The teams of Jeff Stuman-Robert Whren and Fred Couples-Mike Donald were tied for second at 125. Jim Neiford-Richard Zokol were another stroke back in the best-ball tournament.

The 72-team field will be reduced to the best 28 scores and ties after Saturday's third round.

Knicks sign Billy Donovan

NEW YORK — Guard Billy Donovan, who helped Providence gain the NCAA Final Four last season, has signed a one-year contract with the New York Knicks, the NBA club announced Friday.

The move reunited Donovan with his former coach, Rick Pitino, in his first year with the Knicks. Donovan, a third-round pick by Utah, was cut by the Jazz late in the preseason. As a senior at Providence, Donovan averaged 20.6 points and made 97 3-point goals.

Mack Lobell to be retired

NEW YORK — Mack Lobell, the fastest trotter in history, will stand at stud in 1988 under an $8 million syndication. It was announced Friday.

The 3-year-old colt will stand at the Fair Winds Farm of Edward K. Mullen at Cream Ridge, N.J. Mullen co-owns Mack Lobell with Lou Guida's multi-member One More Time Stable.

"What Mack Lobell did this season on the track was a tremendous boost for harness racing, but his impact on the sport could be even greater by his accomplishments at stud," said Guida, who managed the colt's racing career and put together the syndication.

Figini wins World Cup downhill

LEUKERBAD, Switzerland — Michela Figini of Switzerland won a treacherous World Cup downhill race Friday by 12 hundredths of a seconds, holding off another tough challenge from the revived Austrian women's team led by runner-up Sigrid Wolf.

In the first race of the winter in Switzerland, the home team posted its third straight win — all downhill — out of six races so far.

Switzerland's Brigitte Oertli placed third, 39 hundredths of a second behind Figini, who also posted the best intermediate times. Fourth place went to Elisabeth Kirchner of Austria in 1:50.94, and fifth to Laurie Graham of Canada, a veteran in her ninth World Cup season, who finished in 1:51.44.

Blues acquire Paul Cavallini

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Blues said acquired rookie defenseman Paul Cavallini from the Washington Capitals Friday in exchange for either a 1988 or 1989 draft choice.

Cavallini, 22, a former member of Team Canada, is the brother of St. Louis left wing Gino Cavallini. The 6-foot-1, 202-pound Blues newcomer had scored twice and assisted on three goals for Washington in 24 NHL games.

A team spokesman said the Capitals have a choice of using either a second-round choice St. Louis previously acquired from the Montreal Canadiens in next summer's draft or the Blues' second-round pick in 1988 as compensation for Cavallini.

Saints and Oilers collide in must-win situation

By The Associated Press

The New Orleans Saints and Houston Oilers meet in a Sunday collision that will end the hopes of one of them for a first NFL division championship.

The Saints, 9-3, a game behind first-place San Francisco in the NFC West, and Houston, tied for first with Pittsburgh and Cleveland with a 7-5 record in the AFC Central, each must win its remaining three games to get a divisional title. New Orleans, however, has clinched at least a wild-card playoff berth.

Houston has all three remaining games at home, with Pittsburgh and Cincinnati to follow the Saints. After the game at the Astrodome, the Saints will play at Cincinnati, then entertain Green Bay.

The Oilers will be counting heavily on the passing of quarterback Warren Moon, whose 17 touchdown passes this season are the most by an Oiler since George Blanda's 17 in 1966.

New Orleans will be trying to extend its winning streak to seven games behind the passing of Bobby Hebert and the rushing of Rueben Mayes. The nine wins is a club record.

In other Sunday games, Pittsburgh is at San Diego, Cincinnati at Cleveland, Buffalo at Indianapolis, New York Jets at New England, Miami at Philadelphia, Denver at Seattle, Minnesota vs Green Bay at Milwaukee, Dallas at Washington, New York Giants at St. Louis, Los Angeles Raiders at Kansas City, Atlanta at Los Angeles Rams and Detroit at Tampa Bay.

Monday night, Chicago, which has clinched the NFC Central title, is at San Francisco, which has clinched a playoff berth. Each has a 10-2 record.

Steelers at Chargers: Both these clubs also could win division titles by sweeping their final three games, but ending a three-game losing streak is the first order of business for the Chargers, 8-4, and one-half game behind leading Denver in the AFC West. The Chargers lead the series 4-4, with the Steelers' last win at San Diego coming in 1977.

Bengals at Browns: Cleveland, which can clinch AFC Central with three straight wins, will be trying to beat the Bengals, 4-8, for the second time this season and snap a two-game losing streak. The series is tied at 17-17. Bernie Kosar of the Browns has thrown a touchdown pass in 14 straight games.

Bills at Colts: Colts, who lead the AFC East for the first time this late in the season, will be trying to retain sole possession of first place. At 7-5, they hold a one-game lead over the Bills, Miami and the Jets. Buffalo is winless in three games in the Hoosier Dome.

Jets at Patriots: Veteran Steve Grogan, who has been injured, will make his fourth start at quarterback for the Patriots, 5-7, replacing Tom Ramsey, who started the three previous weeks. Tony Eason, the No. 1 quarterback, is out for the season.

Dolphins at Eagles: Miami's Dan Marino can match Sonny Jurgensen for third place on the all-time list of 300-yard passing games with 25. Defensive end Reggie White of Eagles, 5-7, is two sacks from equaling his club record of 18 in 1986.

Broncos at Seahawks: The Broncos, 8-3-1, can clinch a playoff berth with a win in the Kingdome and with a loss by either Cleveland, Houston and Pittsburgh. Denver has won five of the past six against the Seahawks.

Vikings at Packers: Minnesota, 7-5 in the NFC Central, can clinch a wild card with a win over the Packers plus losses by St. Louis and the Rams. Green Bay, 6-7-1, won the first meeting this season 23-16.

Cowboys at Redskins: The Redskins, 9-3, have clinched the NFC East title, while the Cowboys, 5-7, are on a three-game losing streak. The Cowboys' Tony Dorsett, now playing behind Herschel Walker, needs 23 yards to join Walter Payton, Jim Brown and Franco Harris as the only players to rush for 12,000 yards in a career.

Giants at Cardinals: The Giants, 4-8, will be seeking a sixth straight win over the Cardinals, 5-7. A 30-7 victory over St. Louis Oct. 23 was the first of the season for the Giants, who lost their first five games. This could be the Cardinals' farewell to St. Louis.

Raiders at Chiefs: It will be a sort of homecoming for Raiders running back Bo Jackson, who has rushed for 553 yards on 78 carries. Jackson plays baseball for the Kansas City Royals.

The Raiders are 5-7 and the Chiefs, 2-10. Falcons at Rams: Atlanta won the first meeting this season, but the Rams, 5-7, are on a four-game winning streak. The Falcons got their third victory against nine losses by beating Dallas last week.

Lions at Buccaneers: Quarterback Vinny Testaverde, the No. 1 draft choice in the NFL in 1987, will make his first home start for Tampa Bay, 4-8. The Lions' 2-10 matches the league's worst record.

Jackson's return divides fans in Kansas City

By Doug Tucker
The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Families in western Missouri have been divided before. The Civil War did it. The 1965 World Series between St. Louis and Kansas City did it. And now there is the return of Bo Jackson.

It is an event that demands an opinion. Bo Jackson, the promising power hitter for the Kansas City Royals, returns this weekend as Bo Jackson, the sensational running back for the Los Angeles Raiders.

Jackson, the Heisman Trophy winner who turned his back on football to play for the Royals, still says he has no intention of abandoning his baseball career. But his success on the football field has people wondering.

People are also wondering what kind of reaction Jackson will get Sunday when he steps on the field against the Chiefs.

One radio station is sponsoring a "Bo's Welcome Home Party" complete with royal blue beer. Another station is sponsoring a poster contest in which Jackson — in whatever uniform — is the topic. And Arrowhead Stadium is expected to have more than 65,000 people, well above the post-strike average of 40,193.

Included in the crowd will be Kansas City Royals Manager John Wathan. "It's my son's birthday Sunday and I promised I'd take him to see Bo run," Wathan said.

But how will the crowd react. "We'll have about 15 people in our group and my son Steve says he's going to cheer for Bo no matter what anybody else does," said Joe Fisher, a season ticket holder to both the Kansas City Royals and Kansas City Chiefs. "But I'm afraid Steve will be in the minority. At least at the start of the game."

Maybe it will be like it was across the parking lot last summer at Royals Stadium after Jackson said he had signed with the Raiders but still meant to make baseball his long-term career — a mixture of hisses and cheers from people who aren't quite sure what to make of Jackson.

"When people heard that Bo had signed with the Raiders, they got the same feeling you get when your girlfriend leaves the dance with another guy," said Chuck Spinello, whose family operates a popular mid-town bar and grill.

"A lot of people felt kind of betrayed. I've heard people say things like, 'I hope the Chiefs break both his legs.' But not everyone feels that way. The more knowledgeable fans in this town can't do anything but admire such a great, great athlete."

The matter is complicated by the fact that Jackson plays for the Raiders, arch-rivals of the Chiefs since the early days of the American Football League.

"Back in July, I was certain I would be booing him this week," said Fisher, a manufacturer's representative for industrial paper products. "The Raiders, of all teams! But now I feel different. It's hard not to like somebody who's so marvelously talented."

A poll by WDAF-TV in Kansas City asked viewers, "Will you be rooting for or against Bo this weekend?"

When votes were counted, 615 said they'll be for and 745 vowed to be against.

"I'll tell you one thing — if he has the kind of game like he had against Seattle, everybody will be on their feet cheering for him," Fisher said.

Against the Seahawks on Monday night two weeks ago, Jackson rushed for 221 yards in one of the finest games any NFL runner ever had. His three touchdowns included a goal line collision that knocked Brian Bosworth onto his wallet and a Raider-record 91-yard sprint.

Many ticket-holders may be in a booing mood anyway. Last year, the Chiefs went 10-6 and broke a 15-year playoff drought. Then they immediately fired their head coach, John Mackovic, and plunged to the bottom of the league. They'll limp into Sunday's Raider clash with a dismal 2-10 mark.

"A lot of people might cheer Bo as a way of expressing their disgust with the Chiefs," Fisher said.

Jackson was an instant hit in Kansas City when he spurned guaranteed millions from the Tampa Bay Buccaneers to sign a relatively modest pact with the Royals in 1986. His titanic batting practice shots became such a daily spectacle that it was dubbed "The Bo Show."

After a whirlwind 53-game minor league stay in which he batted .277, Jackson was brought up in September and belted what is believed to be the longest home run ever hit in Royals Stadium.

IOC prez says games in Seoul won't be halted

By Larry Siddons
The Associated Press

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — The head of the International Olympic Committee said Friday that demonstrations and other problems surrounding next week's presidential elections in South Korea will not affect the staging of next summer's Games in Seoul.

"We are satisfied. Even with all these election difficulties, we are satisfied," IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch said. "They support the Olympic Games."

Samaranch also said he met in China two weeks ago with the head of the North Korean Olympic Committee, Kim Yu-Sun, and told him the international panel was "somewhat concerned" over prospects for breaking the stalemate over holding some Olympic events in the North.

North Korea has threatened to lead a communist-bloc boycott of the Seoul Games if its demands to co-host them are not met. Jan. 17 in the last day for accepting invitations to the Games, and Samaranch said he did not expect the communist countries to respond until just before the deadline.

In Seoul, presidential candidate Kim Young-Sam said Friday that if elected he would make an "epoch-making proposal" to open the way for North Korea to participate in the Games. He did not elaborate on the plan, but also said he would invite 5,000 North Koreans to the Olympics as guests of South Korea, if he is elected.

Pistons 114, Bullets 108

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Joe Dumars scored eight of his 22 points in the final 4:25 Friday night as the Detroit Pistons held off the Washington Bullets for a 114-108 victory and the best start in the club's NBA history.

It was the Pistons' fifth consecutive victory, improving their record to 12-5, bettering their previous best of 12-6 in 1985.

Detroit led 82-67 with 3:40 remaining in the third quarter, but the Bullets, getting 10 points from John Williams and nine from Terry Catledge, outscored the Pistons 30-16 to cut their lead to 98-97 with 6:36 remaining.

It was still a one-point game, with Detroit leading 101-100, when Dumars went to work. He hit a pair of free throws, a 17-foot jumper, a 12-footer and two more free throws down the stretch.

Mavericks 108, Suns 104

DALLAS (AP) — Sam Perkins scored six points in overtime, including two game-clinching free throws with two seconds left, to carry the Dallas Mavericks to a 108-104 NBA victory over the Phoenix Suns Friday night.

It gave Dallas Coach John MacLeod a win over the Suns in his first meeting against the club that fired him last February after 14 years with the franchise.

Perkins had two field goals and hit two free throws in the overtime period.

Fairfield coach signs new pact

FAIRFIELD (AP) — Mitch Buonaguro has signed a new four-year contract to coach the Fairfield University basketball team through the 1990-91 season, the university announced Friday.

Buonaguro was named Fairfield's head coach on April 4, 1985. He has compiled a 41-25 record going into Saturday's game at Iona. In his first two seasons, he led the team to two Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference championships and two appearances in the National Collegiate Athletic Conference tournament.

NHL Roundup

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Hakan Loob and Jim Peplinski each scored two goals in the second period as the Calgary Flames beat New Jersey 5-1 Friday night, dealing the Devils only their second loss at home this season.

After trading goals in the first period, Calgary scored four straight goals by Loob and Peplinski to seal its 12th win in 15 games against the Devils. New Jersey had a 12-1-1 record at the Brendan Byrne Arena before Friday night's loss.

Nordiques 3, Jets 3

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Michel Goulet scored with just 21 seconds left in the third period as the Quebec Nordiques tied the Winnipeg Jets 3-3 in the NHL Friday night.

Goulet, who earlier in the period saw his hard shot from the point glove by Jet goaltender Eldon (Pokey) Reddick, scored after Quebec had pulled netminder Mario Gosselin in favor of an extra attacker.

Penguins 6, Islanders 4

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mario Lemieux scored his 25th goal and had four assists and Paul Coffey scored his first goal with his new team as the Pittsburgh Penguins ended a five-year winless streak against goaltender Billy Smith with a 6-4 NHL win over the New York Islanders Friday night.

Smith lost to the Penguins for the first time since April 4, 1982. He had been 12-0-2 in that span. The Penguins succeeded on four of six power play chances to go 5-1-1 in their last seven games.

Coffey, acquired in a seven-player deal with Edmonton recently, scored on a power play 17 seconds into the third period with a 30-foot slapshot past Smith.

Cheney hoop looks for another winning year

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

After experiencing only its fourth winning season in the previous 30 years last season, the Cheney Tech boys' basketball team will attempt to continue the successful trend.

The Beavers wound up 11-10 during the 1986-87 campaign. But they've lost four of five starters from last year's contingent, including senior Willie Ortiz who averaged 9.2 points a game. He didn't come out for the team this year.

Obviously, for Cheney to duplicate last year's effort will be a tough task considering the numerous question marks which face sixth-year Tech Coach Aaron Silvia.

"We're very young. There's no doubt about that," Silvia said. "We have a lot of question marks. A lot of these kids never played varsity before let alone start on the varsity."

The main offensive and defensive weapon the Beavers will rely heavily upon will be 6-foot-8, 205-pound junior Terrance Phillip, who averaged 11 points and 10 rebounds a game a year ago.

"He (Phillip) has been working on his game. He did go to (basketball) camp," Silvia said. "It's noticeable that he's played (in the offseason). Some of the things he had to work on he has. He's a strong player and more confident. He understands the game better. He's also an outside threat now."

Cheney will tap off its 1987-88 season Friday night at home against Bacon Academy of Colchester.

A newcomer who has been impressive in the preseason and should lend able support to the Beavers' offensive production is 6-foot freshman Anthony Evans. "He (Evans) has a lot of ability. He's a scorer," Silvia said.

Along with Phillip up front, Silvia will utilize the services of 6-foot-1 sophomore Sean Walstedt, 6-foot-2 senior Mike Sills, 6-foot-2 sophomore Chris Jones and 6-foot-1 sophomore Chris Haues.

At the guard slots, a pair of juniors, 5-foot-9 Troy Maxfield and 5-foot-8 Steve Friedrich will split the ballhandling duties with 5-foot-8 senior John Parsons and 5-foot-8 Kevin Toolan.

Despite the fact that many of his players are unproven, Silvia can use up to 10 or 11 people.

"We've never had that luxury," Silvia said. "All of them are going to play. I think we'll be competitive. We already have two guys (Phillips and Evans) who are going to make us competitive. I'd like to make the (state) tournament again."

Cheney is in the Charter Oak Conference East Division along with Bolton, Coventry, RHAM and Bacon Academy. Silvia would like to make the COC postseason tourney. "We were only a couple of games away from making it (COC tourney) last year," he said.

Schedule: Dec. 18 Bacon Academy H, 22 RHAM A, 26 East Windsor A, 28 Tolland H.

Jan. 5 East Hampton A, 8 Vinal Tech H, 12 Bolton A, 15 Coventry A, 19 Rocky Hill A, 22 Cromwell H, 26 Portland A, 29 Bacon Academy A.

Feb. 2 RHAM H, 5 East Hampton H, 9 Vinal Tech A, 11 Bolton A, 16 Coventry H, 19 Rocky Hill H, 23 Cromwell A, 26 Portland H.

Terrance Phillip (31) will be back in the Cheney Tech lineup when the Beavers open the season Friday at home against Bacon Academy.

Records OK'd at TAC meeting

HONOLULU (AP) — Twenty eight American records, including a controversial indoor mark by hurdler Greg Foster, were approved Friday at the annual convention of The Athletics Congress.

The Records Committee of track and field's national governing body approved 14 indoor and 14 outdoor records.

However, six American records set at last March's NCAA Indoor Championships at Oklahoma City were placed on pending status until uncertainties surrounding the measurement of the track are resolved.

Foster was given approval of a 7.36-second clocking for the 60-meter high hurdles last Jan. 16 at Los Angeles. The performance had been questioned because of suspected starting irregularities.

The mark now will be submitted to the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body for the sport, for approval. Previously, the IAAF had approved Foster's time of 7.46 during a semifinal heat at the World Indoor Championships last March as the world record.

Meanwhile, long jumper Jackie Joyner-Kersey had her performance of 24 feet, 5 1/4 inches, at the Pan American Games at Indianapolis approved as an American record. The effort also tied the world record of East Germany's Heike Drechsler and has been submitted to the IAAF for approval.

Distance runner Lesley Welch had one mark approved and another disapproved. Her time of 8:44.05 last Feb. 1 in an indoor meet at Boston was disallowed because it came in an unsanctioned meet. However, her 8:44.68 performance in the USA-Mobil Indoor Championships Feb. 27 at New York was approved as an American record.

Whalers happy out of basement

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

HARTFORD — Since the Hartford Whalers seemed to have finally dislodged themselves from the basement of the Adams Division, the team's monthly press luncheon took on a fresh look of positivism.

Whaler Coach Jack Evans spoke of the current status of the club which has struggled from Day 1 of this season. President and General Manager Emile Francis, the noted orator of the day, related his reasons for the team's slow start this year and his philosophies on trading and establishing a winning hockey tradition in the "Insurance City."

The Whalers (11-12-5) have won three consecutive games, which ties their longest win streak of the season, and they have risen from the depths of the division. They are currently tied for third place with Buffalo.

"WE HAVE WON THE last three games which has done wonders for the spirit of our team," Evans said. "I think the spirit and intensity are back on the team." Hartford, which hosts Los Angeles tonight at 7:30, is glad to have extricated itself from last place in the division.

"Coming out of the basement was one of the best feelings I've experienced this year," Evans said.

Following Evans' remarks, Francis took the floor and added some drama to the mid-day atmosphere. A general feeling of ease has overtaken the club and, apparently, management also which allotted Francis time to explain why he thought club began so poorly. Trade talk rumors surrounding the team during its skid was also taken up by Francis.

"WE WERE NOT PHYSICALLY ready to play coming out of training camp," the 61-year-old Francis said. The Whalers scored just eight goals in their first five games. "There's a certain nucleus of players you have to build on. For the team to win, certain players have to play well."

Without mention, these 'players' included Kevin Dineen, Ron Francis, Dave Tippett and Sylvain Turgeon. Dineen and Turgeon were both injured during camp. "If they can't (perform) someone else has to pick up the slack. Unfortunately, nobody picked up the slack."

Posed with the question concerning lack of size on the team, Francis took exception. "We have people who give 100 percent," he said. "By no means are we the Edmonton Oilers. I'm concerned with how big a heart he has."

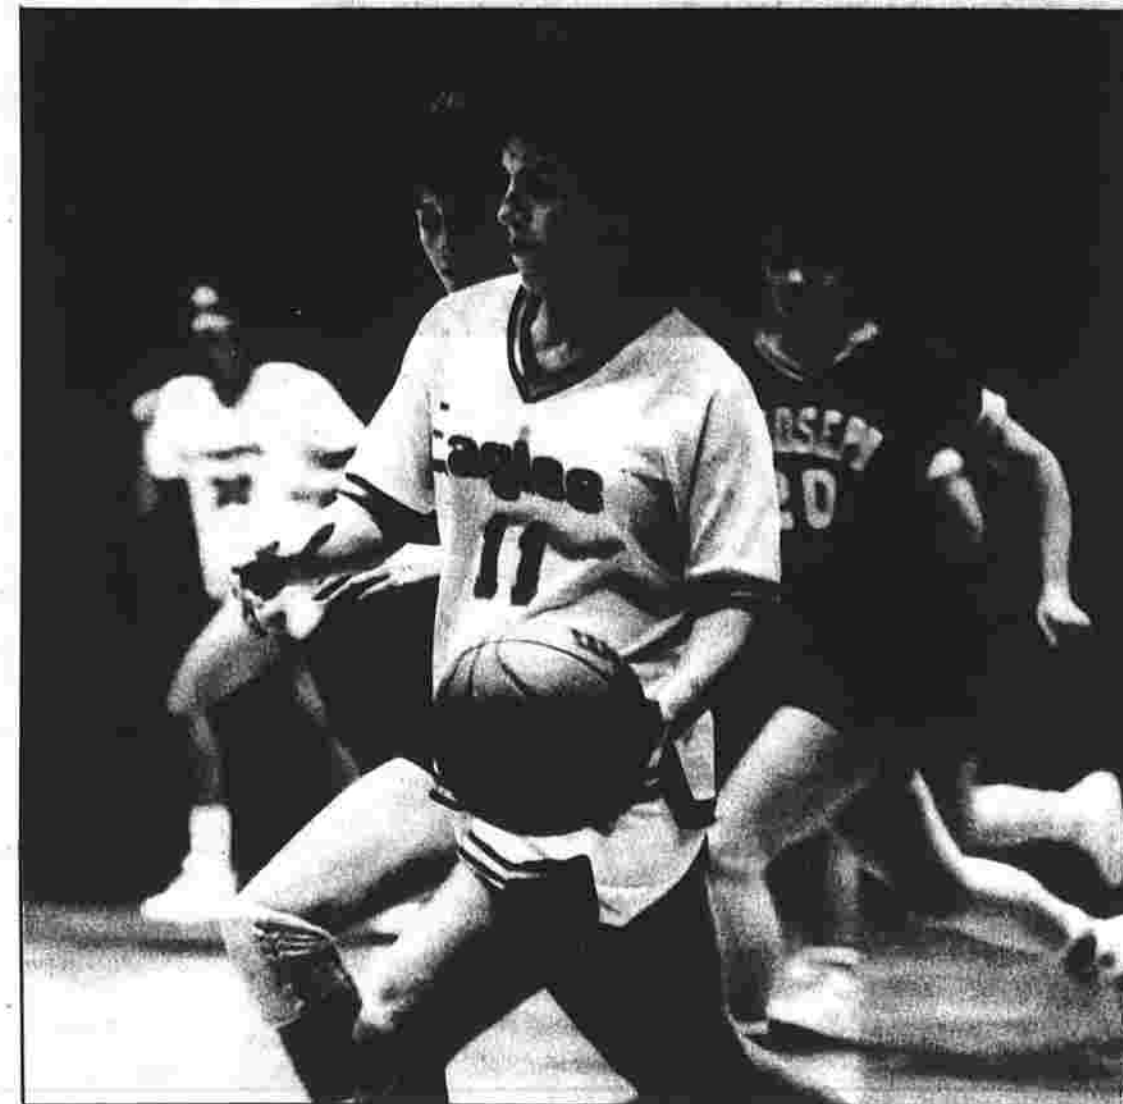

IN REFERENCE TO THE trade talk Francis flatly stated that they (trade rumors) weren't spread just because of the club's sub-par performances. "The right time to make a trade is any time provided it will improve your team," Francis said.

Francis said trading is the third of three choices a club has to improve. First is to extract the most talent from what you have and second is to utilize your farm system.

Parity in the league is the at the highest level much to the dismay of Francis. "The last two years is as close to parity as before the (NHL) expansion," he stated. "As far as I'm concerned, parity stinks. Nobody is going to run away and hide. (But), it's great for the fans."

Lastly, Francis spoke of building tradition in Hartford. "Tradition is built on winning. We're attempting to establish tradition."

WHALER NOTES — Peter Wheeler, executive director of the Connecticut Special Olympics, presented Ron Francis with an award for his outstanding service with the organization. The Founders Trophy, established in 1985 to recognize front office staff, players and players' wives who have performed extraordinary services and to the organization and to community service, was presented to Tippett, Joel Quenneville and Phil Langan, the Whalers' public relations director. Francis continues to lead the team in points with 30 (12 goals, 18 assists) while Dineen, John Anderson, and Dave Babych each have 24.

East Catholic's Karen Mozdzierz (11) dribbles up court during Friday's game against St. Joseph. Mozdzierz netted 20 points and grabbed 8 rebounds but it wasn't enough as the Eagles bowed, 55-45.

Disaster strikes East girls

A disastrous third period spelled the difference as East Catholic dropped a 55-45 decision to St. Joseph in All Connecticut Conference girls' basketball action Friday night at the Eagles' Nest.

East is now 0-2 for the season while St. Joseph is 2-0. East's next game is Tuesday at home at 7 p.m. against South Catholic.

St. Joseph had leads of 11-10 and 27-22 after two turns before moving to a 41-26 lead after three quarters. "We had a bad third quarter," cited

East Coach Donna Ridel. We turned the ball over nine times. We gave the ball away too much."

Kim Filla had 16 points and Edurna Egurbide 10 to lead the visitors. Five-foot-4 junior guard Karen Mozdzierz led East with a game-high 20 points. She also led the Eagles in rebounding with 8.

That, according to Ridel, was part of the problem. "We were getting killed on the boards tonight. The big people inside were not doing a proper job. We matched up size-wise pretty well," Ridel said, adding her inside players are short of experience. Amelia Bearse had four steals for the Eagles.

ST. JOSEPH (55) — Dana Luzetti 31-3 7, Edurna Egurbide 24-7 10, Karen Luchun 03-6 3, Michele Pasillo 23-6 7, Kim Filla 6 2-4 15, Lori Filla 20-0 4, Amy Ripke 3 1-2 7, Mary DiJulio 10-0 2. Totals W 16-28 55.

NFL is ordered to pay damages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Labor Relations Board on Friday ordered the NFL to pay between $21 million and $25 million in wages and bonus incentives to striking football players who were barred from playing in games on Oct. 18 and Oct. 19.

The agency also said in a complaint filed by its Baltimore regional director, Louis J. D'Amico, that players on teams that might have been but are not in postseason playoffs because of the outcomes of the Oct. 18-19 games are entitled to playoff bonuses of $6,000 or $10,000 each. The complaint — the equivalent of an indictment in the labor law arena — said the NFL Management Council illegally discriminated against the players who struck by not allowing them to play the weekend after they unconditionally ended their 24-day walkout.

Absent an appeal, the NLRB complaint gave the owners 20 days to make the payments the striking players. But the management council said it will appeal the case to an administrative law judge.

"The returning of the complaint is the first step in the judicial process," said John Jones, a spokesman for the council. "We believe the reporting deadlines were fairly administered and properly announced and everybody was aware of them."

A hearing on the complaint was scheduled for Feb. 8 here. Depending on how far each side wants to take appeals, it could be as much as two years before any of the players receive any money awarded under the complaint.

After the law judge rules, either party can appeal that decision to the full 5-member board. And its subsequent decision can be appealed to a federal appeals court.

LAKERS NIP THE CELTICS

NBA Roundup

BOSTON (AP) — Magic Johnson hit a long bank shot at the buzzer after a disputed call cost Boston the ball Friday night, giving the Los Angeles Lakers a 115-114 NBA victory over the Celtics.

Boston went ahead 114-113 on a free throw by Danny Ainge and appeared to wrap up the victory as Kevin McHale grabbed the ball from Johnson after Ainge missed the second free throw.

With McHale holding the ball and Johnson calling time out, referee Mike Mathis blew his whistle, granting the Lakers time. Mathis told the Celtics he had blown the whistle before McHale got the ball.

With the clock still showing three seconds, Johnson took a pass from midcourt, took a couple of steps and threw up a jumper on one foot.

The shot capped repeated comebacks for the Lakers in their first meeting with Boston since dethroning the Celtics in a six-game NBA final last June.

Boston led 89-83 at the start of the fourth period, but Los Angeles refused to quit, even after being down 111-105 with 2:33 left.

Mychal Thompson made a pair of baskets and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar a free throw. Robert Parish scored on a layup to give Boston a 113-110 lead, but Michael Cooper tied the score with a 3-point shot with 45 seconds left.

The game's 16th tie stood up until Ainge, fouled by Johnson while driving for a layup, hit his free throw.

Los Angeles took a 32-30 lead in the first period despite 17 points by Boston's Larry Bird. The Lakers edged in front after five second-period deadlocks, until Bird and Jerry Sichting scored baskets just before the half.

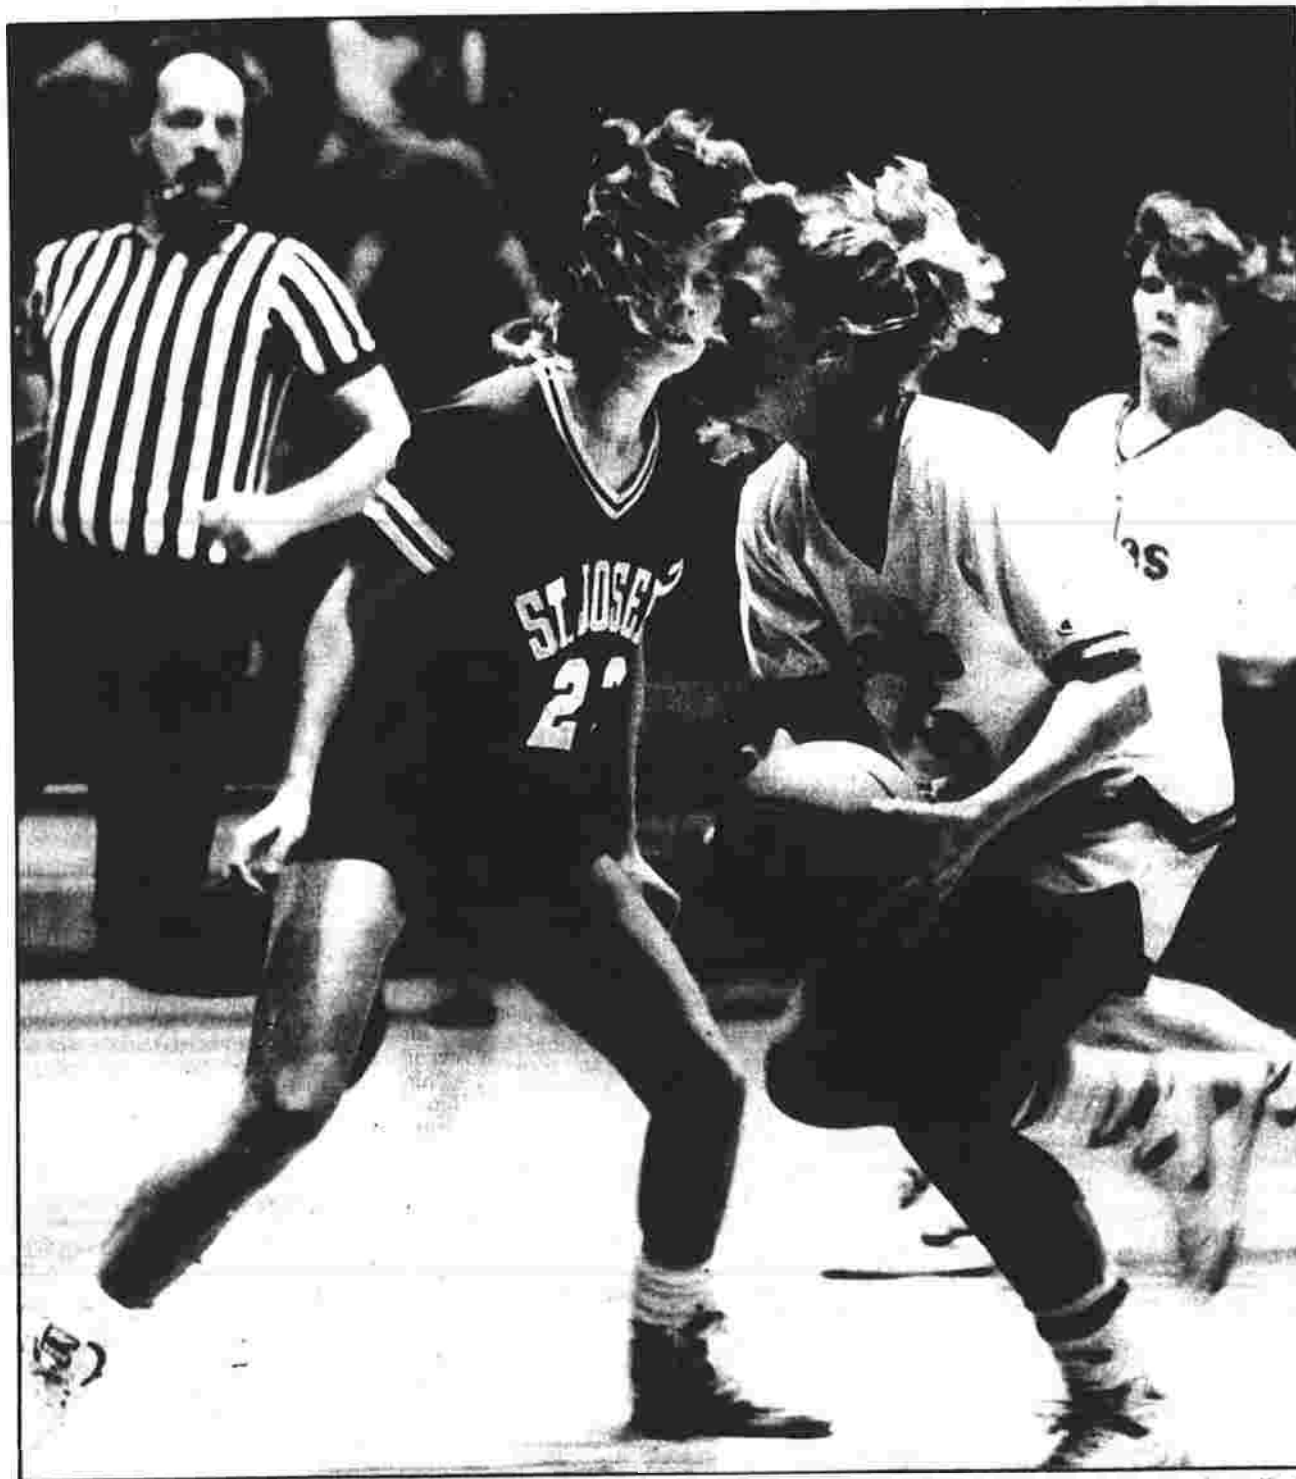

That gave the Celtics a 60-58 advantage at the intermission. The Celtics then scored the first 13 points of the third period.

However, the Lakers came back to tie the score 83-83 with just under two minutes left in the third quarter. Dennis Johnson then made two free throws, Bird scored on a layup and Fred Roberts on a dunk in the final 56 seconds of the period.

Abdul-Jabbar led Los Angeles with 23 points. Byron Scott and Michael Cooper had 21 each and Magic Johnson 18 points and 17 assists.

Bird led all scorers with 35 points.
