HONDURAS HEATS UP

State of emergency declared after riots

By Freddy Cuevas
The Associated Press

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — President José Azcona Hoyo declared a state of emergency Friday in the country's two major cities after students smashed shop windows and overturned cars in new anti-American riots.

The presidential press office said the emergency gives police and security agencies wide powers to search premises, make arrests and hold people without trials in Tegucigalpa, the capital, and San Pedro Sula, 120 miles to the north.

It also bars street demonstrations and empowers police to restrict travel.

The violence broke out after thousands of students filled the streets Friday, shouting slogans protesting the forced deportation to the United States of a Honduran suspected of drug trafficking.

So many students had left their classrooms by early afternoon that 100 schools and both universities in Tegucigalpa shut their doors.

Shopowners boarded their windows in fear of more violence like the attack on the U.S. Embassy in the capital the night before in which five people were killed.

But looters smashed shop windows, and angry demonstrators flipped over cars. Police patrols, backed by military helicopters, sped through the downtown area Friday, picking up young people.

The government, the principal U.S. ally in Central America, said it would "will take all necessary actions to maintain order and tranquility."

Earlier, officials forced country's 140 radio stations into a nationwide hookup Friday controlled by the presidential press office.

In a communique repeatedly being read over the new network, the government urged people to "repudiate violence" and "remain calm," claiming the violence was being secretly instigated by drug barons, who were not named.

Troops and anti-riot police armed with pistols and submachine guns stopped pedestrians throughout the capital Friday afternoon and arrested those without their national identification cards.

The heavy police presence prevented protesters from staging prolonged demonstrations. About 1,000 students who planned a protest near the president's office at about 4 p.m. (6 p.m. EDT) scattered as a large contingent of riot police arrived. No one was arrested.

One government official, speaking on condition he was not identified, said that "numerous persons have been detained and remain in public security jails."

Afghan pullout no 'present' to Reagan, says Gorbachev

By Carol J. Williams
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Friday that Soviet troops will begin coming home from Afghanistan on May 15, but he added the move shouldn't be seen as "a present to President Reagan" for their upcoming summit meeting.

Soviets interviewed on the streets of Moscow welcomed the news, saying "Many people have suffered."

Radio Moscow carried a brief report on Gorbachev's speech to party activists in Tashkent following the announcement in Geneva that negotiators had agreed on a plan for settling the 10-year-old war in Afghanistan.

Gorbachev and Afghan leader Najib met in Tashkent, in Central Asia, on Thursday and declared in a joint communique that all obstacles to a war settlement and withdrawal of the Soviet forces had been removed.

The official Tass news agency did not immediately report the 57-year-old Soviet leader's speech, and the nightly TV news program "Vremya" said only that Gorbachev had met with Uzbek party leaders before returning to Moscow. But Radio Moscow led its evening newscasts with a few details of the address.

It said Gorbachev confirmed Soviet officials have observed privately, however, that they would like to have all of their troops home by the end of the year. Soviet troops intervened in Afghanistan on Dec. 27, 1979.

A senior U.S. diplomat said Friday that back-channel U.S.-Soviet diplomacy was involved in clearing the final obstacle to a Geneva agreement: the question of continued aid to the warring sides.

U.S. observers at the Geneva talks had been pressing for "symmetry" in foreign aid to the combatants, arguing that if U.S. assistance to the rebels was prohibited, the Kremlin should likewise cut off military aid to Najib's government.

Larson and other legislative leaders joined Gov. William A. O'Neill in cutting the ribbon and officially opening the building, which has been under construction for two years.

Lawmakers laud state's government

$54 million office building called 'monument to the people'

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Connecticut marked 350 years of representative government Friday and coupled the observance with a gala opening of the new $54 million Legislative Office Building.

Historians, said Senate President Pro Tempore John B. Larson, D-East Hartford, "have called Connecticut the birthplace of democracy."

"Today, in dedicating this building, we rededicate ourselves to the people of Connecticut," he told hundreds of people, including many former legislators, gathered in the opulent atrium of the five-story office building across from, and connected by tunnel to, the state Capitol.

"We pause, acknowledging we are part of a grand continuum, rich in heritage and tradition," he said. "This building is a monument to the people."

Larson and other legislative leaders joined Gov. William A. O'Neill in cutting the ribbon and officially opening the building, which has been under construction for two years.

The ribbon-cutting was also attended by 300 protesting laborers, who loudly booed the officials, complaining that electrical and mechanical work on the LOB was done by non-union laborers.

"They are trying to make this a memorial," said Francis Horan, business manager for Local 218 of the Steamfitters union. "We don't want it to be a memorial with non-union men doing the work."

The ribbon-cutting followed a parade of present and former legislators from the Old State House in downtown Hartford to the Capitol and the LOB. In all, the gala, which included a couple of bands, dancing troupes, a day-long open bar, cost $490,000. The total included the cost staff, newly printed booklets on the Capitol and LOB, and food for all.

Comments on the multimillion-dollar new building ranged from glowing praise to outrage over the expense.

Rep. Jonathan Pelto, D-Storrs, acknowledged that legislators are going to "take a lot of grief for it, but it was worth it."

But former state Sen. William B. Stanley, a Norwich Democrat who served from 1966 to 1970, said it "reminds me of Rome — before the fall."

"It's quite an edifice," he added sarcastically. He said he was worried that legislators would shift their attention to hanging on to their offices rather than serving the people.

Former state Rep. Ruby Cohen, a Colchester Democrat who was in the House from 1943 to 1973, was overwhelmed.

"I get sick when I see what's going on compared to what we had in the days when I came up here," he said. "In the old days, we just had a little child's school desk, and that was our office."

Former state Rep. David B. Smith, a Brookfield Republican, said he thought it was fitting that there is an automatic bank teller machine at the end of the tunnel leading to the new building. He said he dared not try it, for fear that somehow his own account would get tapped to help pay the bills for the new building.

At the conclusion of his speech, O'Neill joked:

"I hope some day you'll invite me down to look at your TV sets, to use your escalators, your elevators, your cafeteria, and even take a shower!"

The crowd roared.

Each of the 187 legislator's offices is equipped with some $5,000 of furniture and includes a closed-circuit television monitor. There are also showers available.

Former Rep. Al Benke, a Republican who represented Glastonbury from 1939 to 1943, said he didn't think the building was needed.

"I think they spent too much money," he said. "It's very nice, but I think it's a waste of taxpayers' money."

Former legislators agree it's beautiful

By Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

HARTFORD — "They know how to spend money," Don Genovesi, a former Republican representative from Manchester, said when he stood on the balcony of the new Legislative Office Building Friday afternoon and surveyed the splendor around him.

Walter Joyner, another former Republican Manchester representative, stepped off an escalator and said, "Fantastic. Big Bucks."

Steve Cavagnaro soon joined the pair and remarked that while he was in the Legislature as a Manchester Democratic representative in the early 1960s, the pay of representative was increased from $400 to $1,200. He recalled that the late Alan Olmstead, who was editor of the Manchester Herald, remarked then that more money would not make a better Legislature.

The three were among present and former legislators who attended a reception at the new $54 million office building after a midday ribbon-cutting ceremony.

David Odegard, a Republican senator from the 4th Senatorial District in the early 1970s, said after touring the building that "It would be a nice place to work in." But he said it did not tempt him to seek office again.

Odegard marveled at the appearance of the hearing rooms, and so did David Barry, who said, "I've never seen hearing rooms like that anywhere."

Barry, a Democrat, served as a Manchester representative for one term and as 4th District senator for two terms in the late 1960s. He served three terms as 4th District senator in the mid-1970s, but the district kept changing boundaries. In his first years it spanned both sides of the Connecticut River. It used to include East Hampton. Barry said it was as state senator that he first met a representative from East Hampton named William O'Neill.

"I think it will do for at least 150 years," Barry said of the new office building. "It's something they have needed for a long time."

The former legislators, most of whom did not have offices of their own, were impressed by the new offices current legislators will have.

Barry said he had no office in his time, except in 1979 and 1980 when he was deputy majority leader of the Senate.

Joyner said his office as a legislator was a little "two-by-four" place.

Genovesi said his office was his desk in the Hall of the House. Odegard fared better. "I had a rolltop desk I appropriated in our caucus room. I don't think anybody else but the majority leader had a office."

Retired Chief Justice Charles S. House of Manchester, whose service in the Legislature began in 1939 when he served in the House of Representatives, never had an office, even when he was Republican leader in the Senate in 1949. House marveled at the escalator that makes it possible to get from the State Capitol to the Legislative Office Building without going outdoors.

Odegard could not get over the built-in television sets at the desks of legislators in the hearing rooms. They were tuned to C-Span, which was broadcasting a seminar on campaigning for political office.

In 1943, "pay-as-you-go" income tax withholding began for American wage and salary earners.

This submarine sub-standard

LONDON (AP) — Embarrassed managers at a company building a nuclear-powered hunter submarine for the British navy have ordered an inquiry into how a large section of the vessel was welded into position upside down.

"I don't think anyone can remember quite such a blunder," an unidentified employee of the Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Ltd. in the northwestern town of Barrow told The Daily Telegraph on Friday.

Correcting the mistake to the $446 million Trafalgar-class submarine, named the Triumph, will cost up to $1.86 million, according to a trade union leader quoted by the British domestic news agency Press Association.

Mike Smith, a spokesman for Vickers, said: "A section of the SSN19 (the Triumph) has been welded into an incorrect position. An investigation is currently under way into how this occurred."

"We don't envisage there being any impact on the building program or the quality standards which apply to this submarine," he said.

Smith refused to say how the mistake occurred. The unidentified trade union leader told the news agency it was a mistake by "senior management."

Smith said he did not think the welding error would jeopardize Vickers' bid to win an order to build submarines for the Canadian navy. Vickers is pursuing the order in the face of competition from the French company Societe Navigation Atomique.

"This is a very isolated incident and we will be pressing ahead with our bid. How much it will cost to put right I don't know, but the figure of one million pounds ($1.86 million) is ridiculous," Smith said.

Jean-Pierre Lucas, naval attache at the French Embassy, told The Times of London: "I have always told the Canadians that the French submarines are cheaper and will be easier to maintain. But now I will have to remind them that if they want it the right way up they had better not look to the British submarine."

Press Association said the welding mistake is believed to have resulted from a change in shipbuilding methods at the Barrow shipyard.

The Daily Telegraph quoted workers at Barrow as saying a cylindrical hull section measuring 20 feet by 30 feet had been welded in the wrong position. The paper said it would now have to be ripped out and rewelded, which will take several weeks.

Hijacked jet lands in Cyprus

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — A hijacked Kuwaiti jetliner landed in Cyprus on Friday night after being turned away by the Beirut and Damascus airports despite the frantic pilot's pleas that he had a gun at his head.

The four-day ordeal for the more than 50 people aboard Kuwait Airways Flight 422 was not over, however, as the hooded Arab hijackers demanded that the authorities at Larnaca Airport refund the Boeing 747.

"I'll never forget this, thank you," shouted the captain of the jet when an air traffic controller told him he was cleared to land. The blue-and-white jumbo jet touched down at 9:10 p.m. (2:10 p.m. EDT) after circling for 3½ hours over the Mediterranean following a take-off from Mashhad in northeastern Iran.

Before landing at Larnaca, one of the hijackers radioed the Beirut control tower that panic had broken out aboard the aircraft as it ran low on fuel, with many of the passengers becoming ill.

A woman identified as Anware

Khaled Al-Sabah, one of three members of Kuwait's ruling Al-Sabah family on board, got on the radio and told the Beirut control tower in a choking voice: "I beg you. Allow us to land. We have no fuel left."

It sternly refused, with the controller telling the desperate pilot at one point: "Do whatever you want. Crash on the tarmac or in the sea ... We shall not let you land here."

After the jet touched down at Larnaca, a state of emergency was declared at the airport.

KILLED IN GAME — Israel Ramos, 19, recoils backward in the window of his York, Pa., apartment the instant he is shot Wednesday by a police officer. Ramos later died in a hospital. Police thought Ramos was holding a young girl as a hostage, but authorities report she says the drama was a charade and she was a willing participant. Ramos reportedly had a history of erratic behavior and family problems. The officer who fired the fatal shot has been placed on administrative leave without pay, pending an investigation of claims that Ramos was shot after he said he would give up.

Beauty pageant features talent

By Anita M. Caldwell
Manchester Herald

Thirteen young women from Manchester and surrounding towns will dance and sing their way to compete for the Miss Manchester title in this year's Miss Manchester Scholarship Pageant to be held at 7:30 tonight in Bailey Auditorium at Manchester High School.

And for Grace Jaworski, the 1979 Miss Manchester, who won the title the last year the pageant was held. It was a night she remembers well.

"I didn't go into it ever thinking I would win," the 27-year-old said. "I just thought it would be an exciting thing to do."

And excitement is what she got.

"It's nerve-racking the night of the pageant," she said. "You don't even hear the other speeches."

But the most unsettling part of the night, Jaworski said, was the swimsuit competition.

"The swimsuit part was very hard," she said. "You're about five feet away from the judges. It's difficult to keep a smile on your face."

Jaworski, who is an assistant teller manager at Connecticut Bank & Trust Company in Manchester, said that the swimsuit contest, contrary to many opinions, is not to see if the woman is "a figure 8," but to see if the body is toned and in shape and you can stay calm in a difficult situation.

"You're not going to win just if you're good looking," she said.

Talent, ambitions and knowledge of current events are among the major parts of the event, she said.

Jaworski applied her scholarship towards fine art painting studies at Syracuse University, New York.

Among the contestants who will have their chance at the winning title are Lisa Hastey, 18, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Hastey of Homestead Street, a student at Manchester High School, who will perform a jazz dance.

Jennifer Joy, 23, the daughter of Mr. James Joy, formerly of Manchester, is a graduate of Manchester Community College and will sing in the talent competition.

Nanette Piscottano, 18, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Piscottano of Hartford, is a student at Manchester Community College and enters the talent competition as a singer. Michele MacDonald, 18, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James MacDonald of Wells Street, is a student at Manchester High School and will also compete in the talent category as a singer.

Coreen Hamill, 20, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hamill of Server Street, is a student at the University of New Haven and will perform an Irish Step Dance in the talent competition. Apryl Sahadi, 17, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sahadi of Rachel Road, is a student at Manchester High School, and will dance in the talent category.

Rachel Blouin, 18, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stawecki of South Windsor, is a student at Manchester Community College and will dance. Terri Czerwinski, 23, of East Hartford, will dance.

Antoinette Henry, 18, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Altamont Henry of South Windsor, is a student at South Windsor High School and will perform a jazz dance.

Cathy Aude, 23, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Aude of Vernon, is a student at Hartt School of Music, West Hartford, and will sing. Karen Tompkins, 18, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brad Wright of South Windsor, is a student at South Windsor High School and will tap dance.

Cheryl Perry, 18, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Perry of Princeton Street, is a student at Watkinson School, West Hartford, and will perform a jazz dance. Carri Grilli, 18, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Gary Grilli of South Windsor, is a student at Salve-Regina College, Rhode Island, and will tap dance.

The event was open to young women between the ages of 17 and 26 who either went to school, work or live in the Greater Manchester area. Tickets are $7 each and may be purchased at the door or call Tom Ferguson at 643-1591 or Susan Tanner at 644-4849.

Action on reval request expected in weeks

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

An official from the state Attorney General's office said Friday that his office probably will not have a ruling on questions about the town's controversial revaluation for "several weeks."

The state Office of Policy and Management is reviewing how the town's revaluation was conducted in light of the fact that fair market real estate values for 1986 were used for the 1987 Grand List rather than 1987 values. An OPM official has said that 1987 values should have been used for that Grand List.

James Kennedy, the executive assistant to Attorney General Joseph Lieberman said that his office had received a request Thursday from OPM to provide a legal opinion on several questions, including whether it was appropriate to use the 1986 values. The request also asks whether any penalties might be imposed on the town if the procedures used were incorrect.

Kennedy said that attorneys on Lieberman's staff would review the request and make an oral or written response. He said the review could take "several weeks" in either case.

Meanwhile, the town has scheduled three nights of hearings by the Board of Tax Review at the end of April for appeals of assessments based on additions and deletions from the 1986 Grand List, which is now being used for the tax bills coming due July 1.

Those hearings will be from 7 to 8 p.m. on April 26, 27 and 28 in the Assessor's Office in the Municipal Buildings. New notices of increased assessments will be mailed in April but they will be only for improvements and new construction.

The notices sent out last month are void now that the town's revaluation has been postponed.

The town administration received approval on Tuesday from the OPM to set aside the 1987 revaluation Grand List and use the 1986 Grand List instead. The administration made the request on March 31, when it became clear that the Board of Tax Review would not have enough time to hear the number of appeals on the 1987 Grand List.

There was an unusually large number of appeals because the assessments of most properties increased as a result of the revaluation.

Catholic teachers get salary hikes of 11 percent in pact

East Catholic High School teachers are among those at five area Catholic high schools to receive an average 11 percent annual pay hike under a recently negotiated three-year salary agreement, the office of Catholic schools for the Archdiocese of Hartford announced.

The basic agreement was negotiated at the end of March. The salary range starting in September will be from $16,718 to $32,946 at the top of a 16-step scale.

The agreement also includes increases in supplementary stipends for athletics and co-curricular activities.

Other schools covered in the agreement are: South Catholic High School in Hartford, St. Paul Catholic High School in Bristol, St. Thomas Aquinas High School in New Britain, and Northwest Catholic High School in West Hartford.

According to H.L. Mencken, "Getting married, like getting hanged, is a great deal less dreadful than it has been made out."

BOLTON — Communicating with your children about sex, drugs, alcohol, peer pressure and family problems can be an overwhelming task. Ellen Rosenberg is doing her best to make it easier.

Rosenberg, an educator and author on communicating more effectively, spoke before about 55 people Thursday at Bolton High School. Besides explaining to parents how to communicate better with their children, Rosenberg shared with parents some of the questions asked her by students at another assembly held earlier in the day.

Rosenberg's program was funded from a grant from the Connecticut Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission.

"We take so much for granted," she said. "We just assume children know what we're feeling. ... But just because we're parents doesn't mean we have all the answers. I know there's a lot of children are holding back."

Rosenberg suggested that parents talk to their children about problems, no matter how difficult they may be. In the long run, it is better than having children feel that they can not talk with their parents, she said.

"If it's hard to say it, say it's hard to say," she said. "A lot of children feel their parents don't hear them. I'm wondering if it can be you" the children are talking about?

To prove her point, Rosenberg read a number of cards from Bolton students who expressed those same sentiments. One card read: "My parents say talk to me and when I do, they tell me to shut up."

To communicate with their children, parents also have to understand the enormous pressures children are under. Children must make decisions about sex, drugs, alcohol and peer pressure, while they also must face being teased, bullied and being ostracized for not doing what the crowd does, she said.

Often parents have to realize how difficult it is to actually say no or to make a new friend, if needed, she said.

"If you put blinders on, I worry," Rosenberg said. "Ignorance gets a lot of people in trouble. If they (children) don't have the information, how can they make decisions?"

But how parents interact with their children is a very personal decision, she said. Parents must take into account their own beliefs, ideals and feelings when talking to their children, she said.

When parents communicate with their children, they also must realize that they might not want to hear some of the answers, and that they cannot change the past, Rosenberg said.

"I'm a firm believer into turning negatives into positives," she said. "I'm also a firm believer we can't change what happened five minutes ago."

HELPING PARENTS — Ellen Rosenberg, an author and educator, spoke to parents at Bolton High School Thursday about opening the lines of communication with children. She said children don't always know what parents are feeling.

In Brief

Main flushing Monday

The town Water Division will be flushing water mains in the following areas from 7:15 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday, and Friday from Main Street between Charter Oak and East Center Street east to Autumn and Kensington.

There may be discoloration of water and reduced pressure during the flushing. If water appears discolored, the homeowner should try to avoid using it until it clears. This will prevent rust and sediment from being brought into the home's system.

If sediment does get into a home's hot water tank, the homeowner should wait until the water clears, then open the faucet at the bottom of the tank to drain the collected material, which will settle to the bottom.

If a load of wash is done when the water is discolored, the load should be done again after the water clears. Four ounces of cream of tartar should be added to help clean any discoloration of clothing. It normally takes a couple of hours for the water to clear in a home. If water appears discolored for an extended period, the homeowner should call the Water Division at 647-3115.

Street closed for work

Beginning Wednesday the town Water Division began replacing the 4-inch water main in Summer Street from McKee to Cooper streets.

During installation of the water main, the road will be closed to through traffic from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The road will be kept open for any emergency vehicles. Residents are asked not to park on the street while work is being performed.

New 8-inch cement-lined ductile iron pipe with four new hydrants and new copper service connections will be installed. This will increase the fire flow in the area. The new main and services also will ensure better water quality and eliminate the need for future service interruption for repairs.

Residents having questions or complaints should call the Water Division dispatcher at 647-3201. In case of emergencies 24 hours per day, call 647-3111.

Child abuse reporting urged

April is National Child Abuse Prevention Month. The Exchange Club of Manchester urges residents to support agencies such as the Manchester Police Department in reporting cases of child abuse. Call your local police department if you suspect child abuse.

Erosion plan OK'd

The Planning and Zoning Commission Monday approved a subdivision and erosion control plan for an 18-lot subdivision at 25 Gleason St. but asked the developer to change the name of the proposed project to avoid confusion with two other projects in the area.

The application, submitted by Ernest and Brian Reed, calls for the construction of 18 duplexes on the 5.43-acre parcel. A preliminary plan of development and zone change from Rural Residence to Planned Residence Development was approved by the commission January 20.

Although plans for the development are in compliance, Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas O'Marra asked that the name of the proposed development, Oakland Terrace Estates, be changed to avoid confusion. There is a street named Oakland Terrace, a condominium project named Oakland Terrace and another nearby housing project called Oakland Estates, Senior Planner Robert B. Hannon said.

O'Marra was concerned that the name may cause confusion during police, fire and emergency calls. Attorney Joel Janenda, representing the Reeds, said they would agree to change the name.

Thresher's loss recalled

GROTON — The 25th anniversary of the loss of the USS Thresher, a nuclear submarine which took 129 people to their deaths, was observed in memorial services Friday at the U.S. Naval Submarine Base here.

The Thresher was lost on April 10, 1963 about 220 miles off the New England coastline with 112 servicemen and 17 civilian shipyard workers aboard.

The submarine, powerless with a crippled nuclear reactor, sank deeper and deeper in the Atlantic until fierce water pressure crushed its hull and killed all aboard.

Millstone shutdown set

WATERFORD — The Millstone 2 nuclear power plant will be taken out of service so that authorities can locate and repair a small water leak inside the reactor containment building, a Northeast Utilities spokesman said Friday.

"The water is from the reactor coolant system and is mildly radioactive and it is being collected in systems that are designed for that purpose," said Robert Winkler, the NU spokesman.

The plant was scheduled to be taken out of service at 6 a.m. Saturday with repairs to be completed by Sunday afternoon and the unit back on line Monday morning, Winkler said.

Parking fight sparks murder

STRATFORD — A man was fatally shot following an argument with his neighbor over an on-street parking space, Stratford police said.

John Carroll, 52, was charged Thursday with killing next-door neighbor Stephen Raslavsky, 26, said police Capt. Harvey Maxwell.

"Apparently words were exchanged because Raslavsky thought that Carroll was in his (Raslavsky's) parking spot," Maxwell said.

Raslavsky was pronounced dead at Bridgeport Hospital at 10:05 p.m. Thursday, about four hours after the shooting, according to police.

The confrontation began as Carroll was sitting in his van parked on the street around 6:10 p.m. and Raslavsky and a friend drove up, police said.

As the two argued about the parking space, Carroll drew a .32-caliber semi-automatic pistol and fired two shots, police said. Police said one shot hit Raslavsky in the head, the other in the abdomen.

Imposters rob elderly couple

NORWALK — Three men posing as Water Department inspectors stole more than $1,000 from an elderly couple after they let the imposters in to "inspect their pipes," police said.

Once inside the home Wednesday afternoon, two of the men kept the couple busy by talking to them while the third man went upstairs, said Lt. Arthur Arway. The couple found a bedroom dresser had been rifled, Arway said.

Brian Fitzgerald, general manager of the Water Department, said the suspects apparently had no connection to the department and did not present formal identification to the residents.

Student's death is probed

CORNWALL — State police said Friday they are investigating the mysterious death of a private school student from South Africa on Easter morning.

Desmond Mphenyke, 18, was found by students and staff at Marvelwood Preparatory School after they missed him at Sunday breakfast, police said. Ambulance paramedics tried to resuscitate the man, who was taken to Charlotte Hungerford Hospital in Torrington and pronounced dead at 11:56 a.m., police said.

Lt. Richard G. Covello, commanding officer at the Canaan barracks, said Friday that police have not found any indication of foul play. "Given the fact that a very young person died suddenly, we are actively investigating," he said.

Use of 'expert' witnesses gets top grades from judges

By Larry Rosenthal
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — A large majority of the nation's federal and state judges would favor the use of non-adversarial expert witnesses in civil cases involving technical or scientific issues, according to a Louis Harris poll released here Friday.

Seventy-six percent of the federal judges and 70 percent of the state judges polled said they believed court-appointed witnesses, independent of the parties to the trials, should be allowed in such cases.

Two hundred federal trial judges and 800 state trial judges, all of whom spend at least half their time on general civil cases, responded to the telephone survey by Louis Harris and Associates Inc. of New York.

The results of the survey, conducted from October through December last year, were released at a conference on civil procedure reform at Yale Law School. The margin of error was plus or minus 3 percent, pollsters said.

While the judges showed support for using independent witnesses in addition to adversarial witnesses in complex cases, the majority of both groups opposed several other suggested reforms, including the greater use of scientific panels to advise the judiciary.

Majorities of both groups — 75 percent of the federal judges and 54 percent of the state judges — said they believed the total costs of litigation in "high-stakes" cases are excessive.

A majority of federal judges — 62 percent — said they also believed the costs of litigation in personal injury cases are excessive. But only a minority of state judges — 44 percent — thought so.

Large majorities of the federal judges — 86 percent — and of the state judges — 69 percent — cited lawyers who use the discovery process to "turn over every stone," rather than making cost-benefit analyses of what information is useful, as a major cause of the excessive costs of litigation.

Discovery is the process that allows both parties to a lawsuit to gain information from their adversaries.

A shortage of judges was thought to be the second most important cause of delays in litigation, according to the poll.

Federal judges were interviewed in all states except Maine, Vermont, North Dakota, Idaho, Nevada, Alaska and Hawaii.

Aetna Life & Casualty commissioned the study, but the polling company said it had final responsibility for the design and implementation of the survey and the conclusions.

Prosecutors get release list

WATERBURY (AP) — The state Department of Correction has sent prosecutors a list of the names of 900 inmates convicted of violent and serious crimes who are being considered for early release in order to relieve prison overcrowding.

The list contains the names of people serving time for the two most serious categories of crimes — Class A and B felonies — including murder and first-degree manslaughter, assault, sexual assault, robbery, kidnapping and arson.

It also contains the names of those convicted of sales of drugs, which is an unclassified felony with a maximum 15-year penalty.

The list was released last month to prosecutors, who have met with Correction Department employees recently to discuss their concerns about the of early potentially violent criminals.

Prosecutors were given 30 days to voice any opposition to the release of any inmates on the list by writing to the wardens of jails and prisons, said Todd Fisk, who heads the Correction Department's community release program.

He said Friday he had no information on how many people on the list have already been released.

Noting that the list was prepared at the request of the state's attorneys, Fisk said not all of those listed were being seriously considered for early release.

"We were not asked for a list of our best candidates," Fisk said.

Prisoners must be within 26 months of the end of their sentences to be eligible for early release. Fisk said the department also considers such things as whether the convict is a risk to the public and at risk to flee if he or she is released.

Chief State's Attorney John Kelly said he is opposed to the early release of prisoners convicted of Class A and B felonies.

"We strenuously object to the release of those convicted of the violent crimes and drug sales," Kelly said. "The legislature has deemed that these are the people who should get the longest sentences and they (corrections officials) are going to let them out two years early."

Connie Wilks, spokeswoman for the Correction Department, said Thursday that the state's prison release law requires that inmates be released anytime the prisons population reaches 10 percent over capacity for 30 days or more.

Although the system is apparently not at that level now, Wilks said, "We've been very close to it on several occasions."

"We perceive the program as a positive alternative" to just turning people loose when the limit is reached because those in the program are supervised and must have jobs, Wilks said.

Citizens' arrest

SOUTHURY (AP) — Ten to 13 motorists collared a man suspected of drunken driving on Interstate 84 and held him until police arrived, authorities said Friday.

A state police trooper late Thursday night found Raymond Hagerty, 29, of Danbury surrounded by people who had his hands and feet restrained "because of hostile and aggressive behavior toward them," the police report said.

Hagerty was charged with evading responsibility and driving while intoxicated, Trooper David Negri said.

"I've been in this business 23½ years, and I haven't heard of anything like this," Negri said. Police said Hagerty was traveling east on I-84 in Southbury when he swerved and sideswiped an automobile. Hagerty kept driving, but a short distance later his vehicle apparently was boxed in by other motorists, police said.

The police report doesn't say what happened next and doesn't list the names of the motorists involved.

Citizens' arrests on highways are infrequent, said Sgt. Daniel Lewis, state police spokesman. "Now and then, we get truck drivers boxing in drunken drivers," Lewis said.

L'Ambiance contractor sues over its insurance coverage

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — The general contractor on the building that collapsed here last year and killed 28 men has sued its insurance brokers, claiming that a brokerage employee misrepresented the amount of liability insurance the contractor had.

TPMI-Macomber, the general contractor on L'Ambiance Plaza, sought $3.5 million in liability insurance from Cigna Corp. after its insurer, Royal Insurance Group of North Carolina, decided in January 1987 not to renew the contractor's coverage, according to a suit filed by TPMI-Macomber

Leaky roofs might cost $10 million

ENFIELD (AP) — The cost of fixing leaky roofs at the Enfield minimum-security prison and temporarily housing inmates could reach $10 million, almost as much as it cost to build the facility two years ago, state officials said.

Last year, the state said the cost of repairing the roofs at the $11.2 million facility would be about $1 million. But, officials said, not mentioned in the estimate was the cost of new dormitories that would house inmates while the roofs are being repaired.

William H. Carbone, an under-secretary for justice planning in the state Office of Policy and Management, said the state public works and correction departments are considering two options: building new dormitories at the minimum-security prison and renovating state buildings to house inmates.

Hartford considers desegregation suit

HARTFORD (AP) — An aide to Hartford officials has recommended that the city consider suing to force the state to desegregate urban schools.

Jose LaLuz, a management analyst who works for the city manager, said in the report that the state wasn't moving quickly enough to desegregate school and that Hartford should consider joining other groups in examining legal options.

"We don't believe that the implementation will happen in the near future, and the city has urgent needs," LaLuz said. "We need to have the courts intervene."

LaLuz prepared the report for Hartford Mayor Carrie Saxon Perry. The report, presented to the City Council Thursday night, includes three other options besides a lawsuit.

Those include the council supporting legislation that would withhold state education money from towns that refuse to cooperate in voluntary desegregation plans, and the council and city Board of Education working with elected officials from nearby towns to build support for legislation financing voluntary segregation plans.

The fourth option would have the council adopt a multifaceted strategy to desegregate schools, which would include efforts to eliminate exclusionary zoning practices in suburban towns and improve transportation.

2 charged in organ theft

MIDDLETOWN — Two Wesleyan University students have been charged with stealing an antique organ from a cemetery chapel, police said.

Two women, both 20-year-old sophomores, were driving away from the Indian Hill Cemetery in Middletown when they were stopped early Thursday by a police officer who spotted a large piece of furniture sticking out of the car's trunk, police said.

Capt. David H. Knapp said that when the women were asked what they were doing with the 4-by-3-foot organ, they replied that they had taken it because it would "look good in their room."

Nancy Herzog and Hellen Papavizas were charged with second-degree burglary, second-degree criminal mischief, third-degree larceny, third-degree criminal trespass and possession of burglary tools, police said.

Both women were released on promises to appear April 17 in Superior Court in Middletown.

in Bridgeport Superior Court.

But, the suit charges, an insurance broker failed to obtain the $3.5 million policy and instead got only a $1 million policy.

Macomber has sued three brokers in Bridgeport court charging that their employee, Andrew C. Downie, had misrepresented the amount of liability insurance obtained for the contractor.

Three weeks before the collapse, the lawsuit says, Downie said the brokers had obtained a total of $3.5 million in liability coverage.

A copy of an insurance binder filed with a state agency showed that Downie signed the binder for $1 million in liability coverage April 24, the day after the building collapsed.

The brokers named as defendants are Corron & Black Corp. of

New York City, Contractors Planning Group of Farmington, and the company they formed when they merged, Corron & Black-Contractors Planning Group Inc. of New Hyde Park, N.Y.

Downie declined to comment. The companies also had no comment, William Fitzgugh, a Corron & Black spokesman, said Thursday.

The suit was filed last month in Bridgeport. TPMI-Macomber wants the court to require the defendants reimburse it for any claims paid and expenses incurred as a result of the accident, as well as pay unspecified compensatory and punitive damages.

TPMI-Macomber's insurance with Royal Insurance expired on April 2, 1987, three weeks before the April 23 collapse of L'Ambiance Plaza.

6-year-olds arrest legal

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — A 7-Eleven store that had a 6-year-old boy arrested for shoplifting bubble gum was within its legal rights, an appeals court said in overturning a $40,000 award for malicious prosecution.

A lower court judge should not even have let a lawsuit filed by the boy's parents in Orlando go to trial because state laws make age irrelevant to shoplifting charges, Judge James Dauksch of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeal said in Thursday's ruling.

The case had stirred up publicity against the owner of 7-Eleven stores, Dallas-based Southland Corp., which said it pressed charges because 6-year-old Daniel Adam Bartsch admitted taking candy bars or gum from his neighborhood store three times previously.

Shultz back from Mideast

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz arrived home Friday without a breakthrough on Mideast peace talks, but he vowed to find the time to try again "and struggle against the odds."

En route, Shultz made a surprise stop in Cyprus to make some headway on a new power-sharing arrangement in battered Lebanon.

Shultz worked out the terms with Syrian President Hafez Assad in Damascus on Tuesday. The Syrian leader did not offer to withdraw his army from Lebanon, but the United States is hoping that could occur if the country, torn by civil war for 12 years, is stabilized.

Shultz cautioned reporters in an airborne news conference not to assume the surge of Lebanon diplomacy "means some big new development in Lebanon or on the hostages."

Nine Americans are being held hostage in Lebanon by groups that U.S. terrorism experts believe are controlled by Iran.

Man gives, gets a heart

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — The Stanford University Medical Center has performed a rare transplant operation in which a man gave his heart to another and then received the heart and lungs of an anonymous donor.

The patients were doing well Thursday, said Vaughn Starnes, chief of the center's heart-lung transplant program.

In the "domino" operation April 1, John Hasenkamp received the heart of Steve Rasmussen, who got a new heart and lungs.

Starnes said Rasmussen, 28, of Santa Cruz, was near death from lung disease but his heart was healthy. Hasenkamp, 48, of Redwood City, had a damaged heart.

Spending spree sparks arrest

DALLAS (AP) — Three people who spent more than $5,000 in 10 minutes at Neiman-Marcus were arrested in a $500,000 heist of an armored car, police said.

The two men and a woman, all in their 30s, were arrested Thursday shortly after the Neiman-Marcus manager noticed them buying gold jewelry, clothing and shoes with cash.

The manager notified police because the three were dressed in jeans, old shirts and tennis shoes, police said. Authorities recovered all but about $10,000 of the estimated $500,000 taken Wednesday from an armored car by two men wearing ski masks and armed with a shotgun and a pistol.

Murderer of 42 dies

BOMBAY, India (AP) — Raman Raghav, a psychopathic murderer who confessed to killing 42 people with an iron bar in a 1962-68 spree, has died of a kidney ailment after nearly 20 years in prison, police said Friday.

Raghav, 63, died Thursday in a hospital in Poona, 77 miles southeast of Bombay.

He had been in Yerwada Jail in Poona since 1968 when he was found mentally deranged and unfit to stand trial. He spent 16 years in solitary confinement.

Swaggart quits his church as its officials defrock him

By Guy Coates
The Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — Television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart on Friday announced his resignation from the Assemblies of God shortly after the church said it was defrocking him for rejecting punishment it had ordered for "moral failure."

Swaggart said at a news conference that he knew dismissal was inevitable but insisted he had no choice but separating from the church to save his Bible college and $140 million-a-year worldwide ministry.

Shortly before Swaggart made his announcement, the Executive Presbytery of the Assemblies of God, headquartered in Springfield, Mo., said it had dismissed him as a minister for refusing to stop preaching for a year.

It had ordered the punishment after Swaggart confessed publicly to unspecified sins after reports linked him to lewd acts with a New Orleans prostitute.

"We believe that to stay out of the public for a year would totally destroy the television ministry and greatly adversely impact the college," Swaggart said in a statement.

"Because of the nature of this situation, we are forced to take a position that does not answer all of the questions nor solve all of the problems. But we feel we have no alternative or choice," he said.

Reagans' reap benefits of income tax reform

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Reaping the benefits of tax reform, President Reagan and his wife Nancy made more money and paid less taxes last year than in 1986, it was disclosed Friday.

The Reagans' tax liability for 1987 was $86,638, 25.1 percent of their $345,359 gross income. In 1986, their tax bill had been $92,460 on a total income of $336,640, or 27.5 percent.

In other words, they made $8,719 more in 1987 than in 1986 but paid $5,822 less in federal taxes.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the sweeping tax reform law that was applied for the first time to 1987 returns "had some effect but not very much" on the Reagans.

The tax revision package that had been championed by Reagan eliminated many deductions and lowered tax rates. For the richest Americans, such as the Reagans, the maximum rate dropped to 38.5 percent last year, down from 50 percent in 1986.

The Reagans' returns offer a glimpse into their private life.

For example, Mrs. Reagan sold three drawings by Japanese artist Fujita that she inherited from her mother, the late Edith Luckett Davis. They sold for $33,000, and were reported as a $31,350 capital gain after deduction of a sales charge.

The Reagans reduced their reportable charitable contributions, from $30,487 in 1986 to $25,407 in 1987. The tax return showed $14,995 were given in cash contributions that were not identified. Fitzwater said $14 of that amount were donated by Mrs. Reagan to the Community Foundation of Greater Washington from residuals for appearing on the television shows, "Different Strokes" and "One to Grow On."

Besides the unidentified cash contributions, Reagan also gave $11,312 to his alma mater, Eureka College in Illinois. Of that amount, $1,312 was a fee for appearing on the 25th anniversary of Johnny Carson's "Tonight" show.

Far right likes verdict

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — The far right exulted Friday in a victory in a seditious conspiracy trial, but others said the very freedoms of the country they attacked allowed the white supremacists to exist.

"The jury's verdict speaks for a growing patriotic sentiment to 'just say no' to black power in America," said Richard Barrett, 42, of Jackson, Miss., a lawyer for the Forsyth County Defense League in Georgia.

"The jury's verdict announces that pro-majority Americans are not a cult, but are a rising voice of the silent majority," he added.

Barrett briefly attended the federal court trial, which began Feb. 16 and ended Thursday with an all-white jury's acquittal on all charges of the 13 white defendants. Nine of them were accused of plotting to overthrow the government by violence and set up an all-white nation in the Pacific Northwest.

"What I find interesting is that the system they hate so much has set them free," said Norman Gissel, a lawyer from Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. He is chairman of the Kootenai County Task Force on Human Relations, which was formed to resist movements advocating racial violence after the Aryan Nations was based at nearby Hayden Lake.

Eva Sears, spokeswoman for the Center for Democratic Renewal in Atlanta, said the verdict makes it "clear that it's not possible to rely on legal solutions."

98-year-old alien becomes citizen

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A 98-year-old woman who moved to the United States in 1927 on Friday became the first person to gain citizenship under the amnesty program allowing aliens to legalize their status.

"It seems like it is not true," Clara Escobedo de Martinez said in Spanish after the ceremony. "It is so big, it seems like a fairy tale."

The widow and great-grandmother sat in a chair, raised her hand and took the oath of allegiance to the United States in Spanish from U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela.

A cake inscribed "Congratulations Citizen Clara" and a special luncheon held by the Immigration and Naturalization Service awaited her at the Fort Brown Motor Hotel about a quarter-mile from the Mexican border.

INS district director Jerry Sewell said the reception was his agency's way of thanking Mrs. Escobedo for being a public relations agent for the one-year amnesty program ending May 4.

Mrs. Escobedo appeared on parade floats and television commercials and helped motivate other aliens to apply under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 offering legal residency and ultimately citizenship to those able to prove they have lived here illegally since before 1982.

She is not the oldest person to apply for amnesty under the program; that distinction apparently goes to Carlos Romero-Gaitan of Los Angeles, a 101-year-old Mexican who was smuggled into the country in the back seat of his son's car 14 years ago.

Mrs. Escobedo said she had always planned to become a citizen during her first 35 years in this country, but kept putting it off.

She never learned to speak English, but the requirement does not apply to applicants over age 50 with more than 20 years of U.S. residency.

She learned how to say at least one English word on Friday.

"Citizen? Citizen?" Mrs. Escobedo said haltingly under her daughter's coaching.

"I am American citizen," she finally said, with a broad smile.

Jackson confronts Jewish concerns

By Alan Fram
The Associated Press

Jesse Jackson, reaching out to Jewish primary voters in New York, said Friday he was trying to "heal relationships" that frayed during his 1984 presidential campaign. Republican George Bush, his own nomination secure, surveyed the Democratic race and said "I wouldn't trade" places.

The Democrats focused on New York and its April 19 turning-point primary with 255 delegates, with Michael Dukakis and Albert Gore Jr. both waging war on drugs.

Jackson, campaigning in Manhattan, was asked by reporters about his relationship with the Jewish community, severely strained since he referred to New York as "Hymietown" during his 1984 presidential bid.

"Our own commitment is to end any vestiges of racism, of anti-Semitism, or sexism..." Jackson said. "We've sent a message no one can miss."

A poll released Friday by the Marist College Institute for Public Opinion showed Jackson was supported by just 9 percent of Jewish voters. Michael Dukakis was the choice of 68 percent of Jews surveyed, while Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee was favored by 10 percent.

Jews make up one-fourth of the voters expected to cast ballots in the state's contest. Jackson would not say whether he has agreed to meet with Jewish groups, but he said, "We continue to build relationships, we continue to heal relationships."

Longtime Reagan associate sentenced for illegal lobbying

By James Rowley
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Lyn Nofziger, a longtime associate of President Reagan, was sentenced Friday to 90 days in prison and fined $30,000 for illegally lobbying the White House.

U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Flannery allowed Nofziger, the former White House political director, to remain free pending appeal of three felony convictions of violating the Ethics in Government Act.

"I thought things were going to go better than they went," said Nofziger, 63.

But "in my heart of hearts, I don't believe I'm going to serve time because I don't believe a prison sentence is justified even if I were guilty. And I repeat that I am not guilty," he said.

President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, issued a statement from their vacation home in California: "Lyn Nofziger is a dear friend of many years and our prayers are with him."

Addressing the judge before he was sentenced, Nofziger said he wanted to "iterate my belief that, despite my conviction, I have done nothing ethically, morally or legally wrong."

"I am an honorable man," Nofziger told Flannery. "Like other honorable people, I have gone through life making mistakes, doing stupid things. I doubt that there is a person in this room who hasn't. But I am not a criminal and I think the record of my life will bear out that statement."

Nofziger shook hands with friends and kissed his wife after the sentence was pronounced. He shrugged when a well-wisher offered words of sympathy.

Outside the courthouse, Nofziger angrily charged that independent counsel James C. McKay "set out to get me."

"He makes mountains out of molehills. He has exaggerated, he has misstated and I think he has lied," Nofziger said. "I don't think he is an honorable man."

Nofziger was convicted Feb. 11 of three counts of illegally lobbying then-presidential counselor Edwin Meese III and other White House aides on behalf of the scandal-ridden Westech Corp., a marine engineers union and the manufacturer of the Air Force A-10 anti-tank plane. The contacts were considered illegal because they occurred within a year of Nofziger's departure from the White House staff in early 1982.

Second battered toddler dies

NEW YORK (AP) — A battered 3-year-old being used as a panning prop died just after a concerned passerby sent her to a hospital, the second death in two weeks of a toddler who lived at the city's largest welfare hotel, police said Friday.

The girl's mother's boyfriend was charged with murder.

Maya Figueroa had "bruises and contusions on her face, back and neck. Some of these bruises appeared to be recent," police Capt. Michael Gardner said at a news conference.

Police questioned the girl's mother, Elise Vasquez, 32, who was in Bellevue Hospital after giving birth Wednesday to her fifth child.

The girl was pronounced dead Thursday evening, 20 minutes after she arrived at New York University Medical Center, said Aaron Rosenthal, assistant chief of Manhattan detectives.

An autopsy Friday indicated the toddler died of blunt force injuries to head and abdomen with internal injuries and bleeding, said Ellen Borakove of the city medical examiner's office.

The case was officially ruled child abuse and a homicide, she said.

The girl had been sent to the hospital by a man who saw her on a street corner with Benito Sanchez, 29, who had been panhandling, police said. Maya was in a stroller and her 18-month-old brother was in Sanchez's arms, Rosenthal said.

"Maya appeared to be in serious condition with trauma at least around the face," Rosenthal said.

He said Sanchez had a habit of using the children to panhandle.

Sanchez is a drug abuser with a past record who came to the United States in May 1980 with the Cuban boat lift, Gardner said.

Blood drive successful

To the Editor:

Many thanks to the students of Coventry High School for sponsoring their most successful blood drive yet — 93 units of blood were collected with 30 first-time donors! The students recruited donors, volunteered at the blood drive, and prepared food for donors. Thanks to the students, blood was provided for hospital patients throughout Connecticut. Thank you, Coventry High School.

Just one more mistake

To the Editor:

Who's minding the store? The latest revaluation snafu is just one more in a long line of mistakes the town administration has made.

Perhaps if they spent less time giving our money away to the mall and hassling the Eighth District, they could spend more time doing a better job on the basics.

The PZC vote is another mess — the chairman, Al Sieffert, had stated a week before to the press that he intended to vote against the Eighth. He claimed he didn't want to get into the money or politics of the matter.

Come on now, Mr. Sieffert. Isn't it true that a few years back when Ted Cummings was suing the district, trying to destroy it, that you donated money to help him? I think an ethical man would have abstained from voting.

Now the town is suing us, and we must once again raise money for legal fees. Perhaps we'll have a giant garage sale in the Don Willis garage.

We might even make enough for a few extras for our volunteer fire department's 100th anniversary. The latest Yankee magazine had a nice article about the volunteers here in the Eighth.

Siestas at the post office

To the Editor:

No one likes to be told what to do or how to do it, but prior to government cutbacks the post office did not have siestas between 1 and 2 and didn't close on Wednesday afternoon.

Since I've never used the post office at night, I don't know if it was ever open at night; and how much use it got at night, or how many people flocked to it. It's now open two nights and, as stated, closed Wednesdays.

It would seem that if you really wanted to serve the people you would close one hour early on a given day instead of irritating people who aren't taking a siesta, and go back to one night a week and be open Wednesday afternoon.

The closing of Bloom's mind

By Chuck Stone

A best-selling book from academia means one of two things. Either serious readers are devouring its literary elegance or dilettantes are pretentiously displaying it to demonstrate a momentary collision with scholarship.

Allan Bloom's controversial best seller, "The Closing of the American Mind," seems to be the case of the latter. During a recent television interview, for example, the president of the University of Miami (which does not usually confuse pursuit of truth with the conquest of athletics) ostentatiously arranged a copy of Bloom's book on his desk.

Bloom's compelling work should be read, but for the same reasons people read other disturbing magnum opuses that influenced the history of intellectual thought, such as Arthur Gobineau's "Inequality of the Races," Karl Marx and Friedrich Engel's "Communist Manifesto" and Adolph Hitler's "Mein Kampf." For Bloom has written a racist book.

Why, then, its popularity? It's probably because Bloom uses his respectability and his erudite mind to justify all of the mindless insecurities Americans harbor about universities, university graduates and black students.

The subtitle of his book is "How Higher Education Has Failed Democracy and Impoverished the Souls of Today's Students." A more accurate subtitle would be: "How to Finish Black Students for Traumatizing Academics With Guns and Affirmative Action." Throughout his incontinent jeremiad, Bloom impeaches today's black students for 1969 sins of black students during his tenure at Cornell University. On one page, he hails universities as "melting pots." On the very next page, he says, "a large black presence in major universities ... (has) proved indigestible."

He indicts blacks for not melting "as have all other groups," but winks his moral eye at other ethnic and religious enclaves on college campuses — Newman Clubs for Catholics, Hillel Clubs for Jews, Hispanic Clubs and Asian-American Associations.

Discussing his Cornell trauma, Bloom uses the terms "black militants," "black radicals" and "black students" interchangeably. (They all look alike, anyway.) In a section on "The Decomposition of the University," he begins his incrimination by referring to "the guns of Cornell," a 1969 incident when armed black students seized an administration building.

Bloom finally emerges from his anti-egalitarian closet with this line: "Affirmative action, at least in universities, is the source of what I fear is a long-term deterioration of the relations between the races in America."

Translation: Send the darkies back to the plantation.

But a more dangerous omnipresence repeatedly threads its way through Bloom's epic. He falls back on an elitist obsession with Plato's "Republic" ("for me, the book on education") to justify his inferences and opinions. He argues that college education is pedagogically bankrupt, that the M.B.A. as "the moral equivalent of the M.D. or law degree" is a "great disaster," that Walkman-wearing college students are "spiritually detumescent" in their "primal slime," and that "no public career these days ... has much to do with humane learning."

Not so, dissents an equally distinguished scholar. In an essay, "The Open American Mind," Wesleyan University's Henry R. Luce Professor of Democratic Institutions, Robert C. Wood, optimistically reminds us that "interaction in scholarship and teaching at the boundary lines where disciplines intersect" requires "trust, not disparagement of our fellows."

"Trust extends to the students, and that relationship is also reciprocal."

Bloom's problem is that deep down in his scholarly gut, he really doesn't trust democracy. But then, neither did Plato.

Your Neighbors' Views

What has been your impression of the town's property revaluation?

"I don't know. I think they probably could stand doing that over again and getting it right. There's too much discrepancy ... I got charged for acres, and we can't even build on that lot. So what good is it? They charged me for a lot ... and then you can't do anything with it. I mean if you could build on it, great ... I really didn't register a complaint. I was just going up there to talk to them. I don't know whether complaining would have done any good, but I just wanted some questions answered."

Sam Crispino

"Well, not reading up as much as I probably should have. I think the people that are going to be most affected by this are the people like my folks who have had a house for a number of years and it's almost all paid for. And all of a sudden, you know, their taxes are going to go sky high, from what I can figure out."

"I didn't get the tax bill yet, but I imagine that it will go up ... I've lived here all my life; I was 14 when I came here ... I don't think they always use the tax money that wisely. I mean, now that I'm thinking about it, you get darn little for it, when you figure it out."

Cassie Moriarty

"I'm a little confused on it, if it's going up or not ... The way they worded it, it's going up one-third or something like that. You've got to figure a third or something like that. I was a little confused about it."

Art Rivard

"I don't think it's good; it's too much ... I don't remember how much it's going up. I forgot now ... No, I didn't go down to talk to anyone. They wouldn't change anything, I don't think."

George Poltras

"I felt that I had to have some sort of an explanation of some things, like the acreage, the extra acreage and the other buildings, and I just wanted somebody to talk to about that ... They haven't responded as yet. They sent me a letter, to go to the assessor and the Board of Tax Review ... I had been there two weeks before. And I was kind of waiting for them to come up with an answer for me, but they didn't ... I think they could have handled it much more efficiently in my case."

The fanciest imported spiders and poisons

WASHINGTON — The list of contaminated food imports that the federal government stops at our borders every month is enough to push a person away from the breakfast table.

It is the job of the Food and Drug Administration and the Customs Service to weed out harmful imported food, medicine and other products. Some is destroyed; the rest is shipped back to where it came from.

The FDA list of detained products is confidential, but we have obtained that list for last September. It is disturbing, not so much for what was caught, but for what may have slipped through because the government doesn't have the personnel to examine every item.

Our estimate after examining the list is that last September alone, the FDA held up 6,000 tons of food that was defective, diseased, improperly la-

Jack Anderson

- beled or otherwise unacceptable. Here is a sampling from the FDA's grocery list:
- 875 pounds of dried barley from Hong Kong with spiders and mites in it;
- a ton of corn flour shipped from Mexico that had mycotoxin poison in it;
- 5,250 pounds of rice noodles from Thailand with "rodent filth" spicing them up;
- 600 pounds of prawn crackers from Indonesia that had salmonella in them;
- 3,975 pounds of cookies from West

Germany that had been colored with an additive the FDA has declared unsafe;

- 500 almond cakes from Italy spoiled by mold;
- 21,250 pounds of frozen mahi mahi fish from Taiwan with levels of mercury higher than the FDA allows;
- 906 pounds of swordfish from Chile that had "decomposed" — no doubt a real treat for the FDA inspectors to discover.
- 35,560 pounds of strawberries from Mexico that had been sprayed with an unacceptable pesticide;
- 29,925 pounds of chocolate mints from the Netherlands with both "insect filth" and "rodent filth," which just goes to show that you can't fault insects and rodents for their good taste.
- Food is not the only item scrutinized by the FDA. The list included large lots of dinner ware from Asia that were sent back because of their lead content. Here are some other non-food items declared unacceptable:
- 3,600 units of eye makeup from

- Taiwan with unsafe coloring;
- 12,000 bottles of baby oil from Mexico that were not labeled in English;
- 136 fluid ounces of French perfume that violated chlorofluorocarbon regulations — a kind of eau de ozone;
- 105 tablets and capsules of "new drugs" from West Germany that had not been approved by the FDA;
- 300 tablets and capsules of penicillin from Thailand that had inadequate directions;
- 10 fluid ounces of wart remover from "Pacific Islands Trust Territory" that included an unapproved new drug;
- 1,200 acupuncture needles from the Peoples Republic of China with inadequate directions and warnings;
- 198,300 units of "3D glass" that were of impact resistant;
- and, as we reported in an earlier column, 5.55 million condoms from several countries that contained holes or otherwise did not meet FDA standards.

Thoughts

Look at your life

Are you lost? Are you discouraged? Have you given up? I live just a daily drudge? Is it meaningless? No more happiness? Fell unloved? Hope is dead?

All this week I have pointed the way to a new life, to new hope, new happiness for you. Haven't you heard? Haven't you seen? Still lost and hopeless? Perhaps you don't want to change and find a better way.

If you will go to a Christian church and listen. If you will get out of your usual habits and rise up on Sunday morning and go to a nearby church. If this is too much for you turn on your TV or radio on Sunday and listen. There is hope. There is life. There is meaning to our struggles here. Just listen.

Then dig out that Bible of yours or get one from some bookstore or church and read it. You can find this new life, new hope and new strength for living. It is there for the taking.

Thousands of choirs all over the world sing out the message. Thousands of preachers share the message in pulpits across this world every week. Thousands of church buildings are open and pointing to God. Faith can be found. Hope is there. Aliveness is available. Try it. Seek it. You will find a new life for yourself.

God is alive. His nature breaks forth in new life. Look into the face of a little flower. You will see it. God is reaching out to you everywhere. Don't you see it? Everything points to a living Lord. Open your eyes and look. What a wonderful life awaits you. Death is no more a dread. Only life beckons you on. And some day you will see your loved ones and friends who have physically died but live on. Life goes on. It is available now. It is yours for the taking today. Believe it, my friend!

Hundreds joined us for walk

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
Executive Director

To our considerable surprise, between 400 and 500 people joined the Way of the Cross on Good Friday. Highlights: Faces of those who were actually carrying the cross. The wonderful cross-section of those who came to pray and walk with Christ: our elderly, many with a cane or spouse's arm to aid them; our young families with their children (picture a red wagon full of small ones), and youngest pilgrim of all was Pastor Paul and Martha Johnson's 2-month-old son, Stephen.

The many Manchester clergy, who during a week so filled for them with special responsibilities, found time to join the Walk. The many who were able to walk and pray the whole Way of the Cross, including friend Doty Hogan, who has had both knees replaced and walked the entire way.

Because so many more people came than we had anticipated, we ran out of programs at the very beginning of the Walk. To all who shared your program with others, our thanks. To those who planned to join us along the way, particularly our St. James readers, our apologies. Friday's worshippers moved along much more quickly than we anticipated when we walked the route earlier and we were erecting the cross and saying the closing prayers at Center Church an hour before our projected time for closing.

The response and enthusiasm have encouraged us to begin to plan for next year. Among helpful suggestions and offers: a portable PA system (it was difficult to hear on the street), a time monitor, more programs (Yes, indeed!), using the streets instead of the sidewalks (would require a parade permit). Let us hear if you have more ideas.

We want to thank the committee who did the planning for us: the Rev. Kim-Eric Williams, who first proposed that we consider a walk to replace our traditional three-hour worship service and drafted the prayers and petitions; the Rev. Newell Curtis, who designed the map and bulletin inserts and his Center staff who ran them off; the Rev. James Meek and the folks at Community Baptist who put together the programs; Barbara Baker, Joan O'Loughlin, the Rev. Joseph Milton and the Rev. Martin Scholsky, who were the other partners in a very able planning committee.

PEOPLE HELPING PEOPLE — Homelessness is a popular topic these days and a hot item with the media. As a result, the shelter and soup kitchen programs of MACC have received considerable coverage over the past several years. In spite of the emphasis on emergency shelters, the best way to handle homelessness is to prevent it when possible. Preventing eviction of family units is particularly critical. Once a family loses an apartment, the start-over-again costs are prohibitive. The required security deposit (more and more often 1 1/2 or 2 months rent) and the first month's rent, plus the costs of turning on the utilities (deposit plus start-up charges), will (even with a hard-to-find $500-a-month apartment) easily run over $1,000. The larger the family, the more difficult to find housing and the higher the start-up costs.

The churches have been involved in "sheltering" almost from the formation of the conference 14 years ago when they established a Human Needs Fund for Manchester residents. More than 90 percent of the fund is used for emergency housing assistance. Ten years ago about half of the housing-assistance dollars were used to help families with security deposits. As housing costs rose, we've placed our emphasis on keeping families in place. Last year most of these housing dollars were used for rent assistance to keep a family from losing their home.

Because we have a very limited number of dollars in the fund to use for financial aid ($21,301 last year), we set priorities, helping families with children. Couples without children or single individuals are not considered for financial assistance with housing unless they are elderly and/or handicapped. Sounds like we discriminate? We do. With limited money it is most important to keep families intact and in their home because of the difficulty and cost of start-up. Couples and singles often "bunk in" with family and/or friends while they save for security deposits and rent. Finding a place to "bunk in" is much more difficult for a family.

Because the conference has taken this approach, Manchester has not experienced the number of homeless families seen in other communities.

This Human Needs Fund is one of the basic programs of our Department of Human Needs, and actually "shelters" more Manchester people each year than the Samaritan Shelter. Eighty-five Manchester families, including several hundred men, women and children, received housing-related emergency financial assistance last year, through the fund and Room-at-the-Inn (another MACC financial aid program).

Because Manchester churches, organizations and concerned citizens are the sole source of these dollars, we would like to share with you the guidelines for disbursement of your monies:

1. The recipient must be a Manchester/Bolton resident.

2. The recipient must not be eligible for any other kind of assistance or have other resources. (If a family can, for example, take out a loan to get through the crisis, they are not eligible for aid from the Human Needs Fund.)

3. Payments must be made directly to the landlord.

4. Financial assistance can only be provided once in any year. The fund also provides small grants to assist clients with immediate medical needs. These dollars are almost entirely allocated to prescriptions, often doctor-prescribed medication for no- or low-income men and women suffering from mental illness. For some of our neighbors, these medications make the difference between being functional and non-functional.

Thanks to you, the Human Needs Fund provides help when help is most needed. An important source of dollars for the fund is the Seasonal Sharing Appeal. Any dollars leftover after the holiday outreach are transferred into the Human Needs Fund.

THANK YOU! — Our thanks to recent contributors to the Human Needs Fund:

To our very generous benefactors Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Sloby and George Ripley, Harold and Carol Rovigno, who for years have pledged monthly support to the fund, the Miller family, Walter and Grace Homan, Frances Gard, Donald and Lillian Peterson, Rosalie Whitesell, to the members of the Manchester Memorial Hospital Credit Union, the Manchester Emblem Club #231, the Friendship Circle of Emmanuel Lutheran and the Chai Group of Temple Beth Shalom, who make a monthly donation designated for Manchester youngsters in need.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
by Eugene Brewer

Marriage has been in decline for two decades in America, as divorce and living together without marriage have increased dramatically. Some observers see these trends as natural adjustments and no cause for alarm. However, without considering the moral issues involved, the social costs now and in the future are alarming. An editorial in The Family in America calls attention to these.

A lower birthrate is creating intergenerational tension as fewer people support the burgeoning Social Security costs. Singles are less healthy than marrieds. Psychiatric disease is greater for the 25-44 age group than for those over 65. Welfare costs of illegitimacy are skyrocketing, and the problem feeds on itself. Economic deprivation, pressures toward suicide, and crime rates mount as marriage erodes. Once again, we've ignored God's way (Genesis 2:24) to our own hurt. Only a revived spiritual perception of marriage can reverse this devastating trend, Matt. 19:5.

They weaved silken history

Quilts made in Manchester shown at historical museum

By Nancy Pappas
Manchester Herald

MORE THAN 100 years ago, Susie C. Walker sat in her Manchester home and pieced together brilliantly colored scraps left over from silken dresses. When she had put together enough silk to make a coverlet, Walker added embroidered flowers and other figures, then added backing and quilted the work.

That silk bedcover was completed in 1875, and it remained in private hands until it was donated to the Manchester Historical Society. For years it sat in the society's archives at the Cheney Homestead, protected from the elements, but out of the public's eye.

But on Sunday afternoon, the Walker silk — along with many other quilts of historical significance — will move into the spotlight, as an exhibit of 60 quilts opens at the Manchester Historical Museum from 1 to 5 p.m. at 126 Cedar St.

The exhibit, to be called Quilts and Flowers, will open the museum's 1988 exhibit season. Fresh flower arrangements, provided by the Manchester Garden Club, will sit among the quilts for the seven-week duration of the show.

Of the 60 quilted works in the show, more than 40 have a strong Manchester connection, said Marjorie Knight, who has acted as an informal curator for the exhibit. They were made in Manchester, were stitched from fabrics woven in Manchester, or are owned by Manchester collectors.

The Walker quilt, which is exhibit chairman Sara Robinson's favorite, fits all of those categories.

The exhibit will present quilts as historical artifacts, as well as contemporary works of art. In the introduction to the show's catalogue, Robinson wrote: "To the quilter, a quilt is a piece of 'living history,' speaking in voices long past."

Among the historical pieces in the display is a piece called Rocky Glen. Believed to have been made in Putnam, between 1875 and 1900, it looks extremely contemporary, with navy blue pin-dot triangles against a white background.

This is known as an "Only God is Perfect" quilt, explained Knight. Some women deliberately made a mistake in the design so as not to compete with God for perfection.

One of Knight's favorite pieces in the show, Old Lowell, is a busy combination of patterns, made from cotton milled in Lowell, Mass. It was sewn in this decade by Sally Palmer Field, a well-known quilt authority who will speak on May 22 about "200 Years of New England Quilts."

The society has planned speakers on almost every Sunday of the exhibit, said the society's president Jay Savery. On opening day, Patricia Mangino will speak on "Today's Quilts." She teaches classes and workshops and has been involved in several quilters' guilds.

Other speakers will include Marjorie Knight on April 17, speaking about how to make a quilt, and Joyce Trainer on April 24, talking about Colonial gardens.

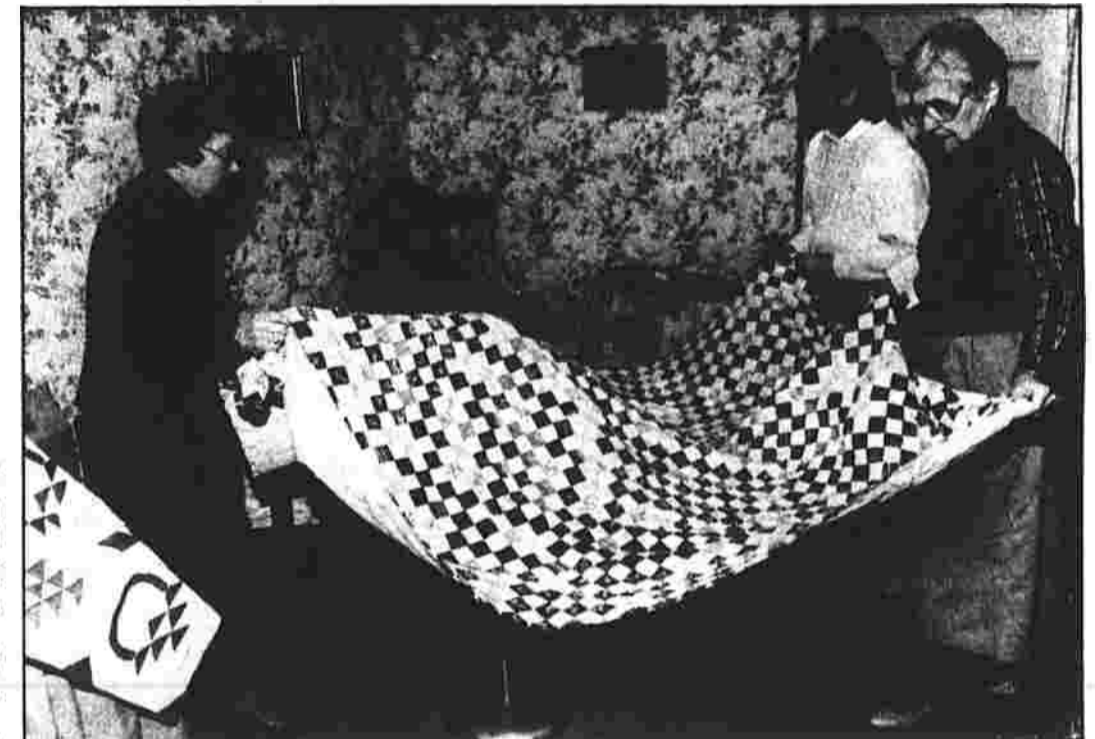

On May 1, Mary L. Stevens, who received a doctorate in folklore from Wesleyan University, will speak and show the film "Anonymous Was A Woman."

"She has done a great deal of work on the place of women in the 19th century," said Robinson. "Her approach will be to explain that much of the folk art which we now cherish was produced, unsigned, by women."

Coincidentally, the Wadsworth Athenaeum in Hartford is hosting an exhibit of quilts, as well. "I wish we could say that it was planned together," said Savery. "But that is not the case."

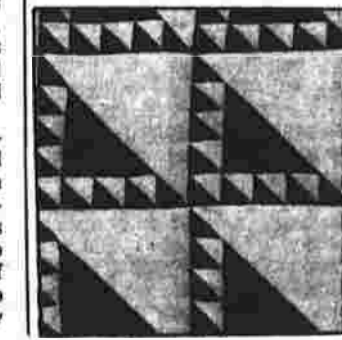

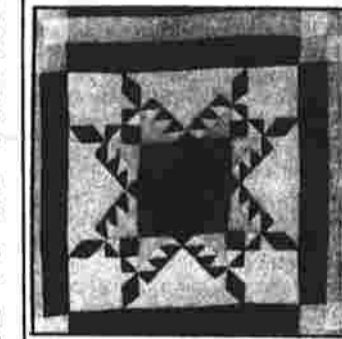

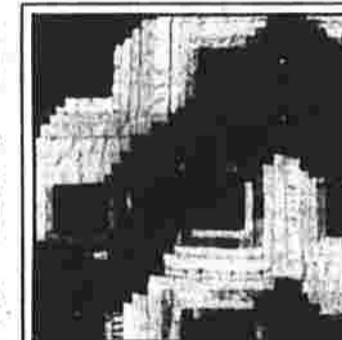

However, in an effort to avoid direct competition, certain dates on the Manchester museum's schedule have been left open, Robinson said. One of these is May 15, when the Athenaeum will have a quilt evaluation clinic and an afternoon of three lectures.

The Manchester Historical Museum is open on Sundays and Thursdays, 1 to 5 p.m. Although there will be no formal presentations on Thursdays, the members of The Mulberry Quilters, who have helped with many aspects of this exhibit, will be on hand to answer questions about both new and old quilts.

CHECK IT OUT — Sara Robinson, left, works with Maureen Lescoe and Marjorie Knight to check a quilt which will be displayed in an exhibit that opens Sunday at the Manchester Historical Museum, 126 Cedar St. Robinson is the show chairman, Lescoe and Knight are members of The Mulberry Quilters, who have helped to pull the show together.

Here's the Answer

QUESTION: We want to refinish the floor in our living room. The old finish is stained, scratched and generally in bad condition. We want to remove it. I have been told it can be done with a hand scraper. Is this so? If it is, what kind of scraper should we use?

ANSWER: Forget about the hand scraper. It may be OK for a small area, but not for a sizable floor. Your best bet is a floor sander. Rent an electric one from a dealer who rents power tools. Sometimes your neighborhood hardware store handles floor sanders. You also should rent an edging sander. Be sure the dealer shows you how to attach the paper to the sander and how to operate the machine. The most important thing in handling this machine is not to permit the sander to touch the floor unless it is moving. If it rests on the floor for even a moment when the machine is not moving, it will oversand at that point and you will have a difficult time getting everything level again. The sanding will cause a lot of dust in the room where you are working, even though it has a dust bag. Keep the door to the room closed and be prepared to use some kind of vacuum cleaner and attachment as soon as you finish the sanding.

Tidbits for homeowners

By Andy Lano
The Associated Press

From various sources come these bits of information for homeowners:

If you think San Simeon, the former William Randolph Hearst residence in California, is tremendous, you can buy one that's a lot bigger. It's the Otto Kahn residence in Cold Spring Harbor, N.Y., which is up for sale. The 170-room house and 22½ acres of land, known as Oheka Castle, can be bought for $52 million. It encompasses 112,000 square feet of living space, compared to the 40,000 square feet of San Simeon. It was originally built in 1921 by Kahn as a weekend retreat and is being sold as a single family home, largest in the country. No trouble keeping warm in it. Besides a huge central heating system, it has 39 fireplaces.

Young couples having a difficult time trying to buy a new house may find the above data about the Kahn place a bit overwhelming, but just as disturbing is the news that the median home purchase price in the nation increased last year to $95,000, up from $58,000 in 1979. The figures come from the U.S. League of Savings Institutions.

On the House

which says total household expenses went up even faster than housing expenses. Not true, though, in 11 western states, where home buyers had to dig deeper in their pockets than everyone else to pay their monthly expenses — mortgage payments, real estate taxes, utilities and insurance.

Federal Bureau of Census figures show the percentage of American families who own their own homes has declined every year since 1980, going from 65.6 million to 63 million. Owner-involved construction is seen as one solution to the affordability crisis in housing. The 1988 program of Miles Homes offers owner-involved home builders a package that includes pre-cut materials, cash allowances to cover site work, foundations, permits, well and septic systems and other professional labor services. The Minneapolis-based firm also offers a plan with no down payment.

Condominium purchasers in a Great Neck, N.Y., development get a chance to have a custom-designed residence via a computer program that permits adapting the square footage to their individual needs. Kraus Enterprises helps buyers through the first-ever computerized multimedia design display program visualized on four split screens. That makes it a virtual certainty that no two apartments ever will be alike.

A survey by Weyerhaeuser Co. shows real estate appraisers believe well designed and maintained landscaping adds an average of 7.8 percent to the sale price of residential property. The survey was handled for North America's largest exporter of forest and paper products by Trendonomics and the National Gardening Association. It sampled 1,234 members of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers. The appraisers who cited qualitative factors such as appearance and condition were more numerous than those who cited such quantitative factors as replacement and installation cost, which usually are used to determine dollar values in other areas of real estate appraisal.

Identify pests to control them

By Earl Aronson
The Associated Press

For gardeners who don't like to use chemical pesticides, there are other ways to control some insects and diseases. However, before acting, you should identify the pests causing the damage. Edwin D. Carpenter, professor of ornamental horticulture at the University of Connecticut, says gardeners can resort to direct methods for control. These include physical and mechanical controls, biological control agents, botanical spray materials, miscellaneous sprays and dusts, and insect-eating birds.

Physical and mechanical controls used to disrupt the life cycles of pests include traps and other devices such as hand-picking, caterpillar barriers, mulches, seedling collars, row covers and cold frames.

Predators such as praying mantis, cats and others can be introduced, but it may not be wise to keep them in the garden, Carpenter says.

You can attract some birds that are insect-eaters, Carpenter says, but others will enjoy your fruits, vegetables and ornamental plants. So you must determine how much damage you'll allow to your garden crops.

Parasites — generally insects that lay eggs within other insects — may be those that feed and develop in only one type of insect. Pathogens such as Bacillus thuringiensis are effective against a variety of caterpillars such as cabbage worms, Japanese beetles and cankerworms.

Botanical pesticides, Carpenter explained, are sprays or dusts that are plant-derived, non-persistent materials. Rotenone, pyrethrum, sabadilla and ryania are available at garden shops. The first two can be toxic, so handle carefully. Both may be artificially made and available as rotenoids or pyrethroids.

Other spray materials include insecticidal soap, dormant oil, insect and animal repellents, pheromones (sex attractants), diatomaceous earth and boric acid. Read labels carefully.

Indirect methods, also called cultural controls, include use of resistant plants, garden sanitation, crop rotation, soil management, timed plantings and harvesting, and habitat modification.

Use resistant plant species and cultivars. Choosing plants subject to attack from fewer insects and diseases reduces time and maintenance expense.

Regarding sanitation, remove plant and weed materials infested by insects or diseases. Overwintering debris becomes a source of infection. Don't put it on the compost pile.

Crop rotation is recommended to control vegetable diseases. Grow tomatoes, squash and beans in different places each year to halt buildup of soil problems.

Manage the soil. Poor, unfertile, poorly-drained, sandy soils and inadequate watering produce weak plants more susceptible to insect and disease attack. Healthy plants resist insects and diseases better.

Timed plantings and harvesting refers to planting crops early or late to miss heavy pest infestations without adversely affecting crop performance. So learn about the life of major pests in the area.

Grow a number of crops rather than just one. Monoculture encourages serious pest outbreaks. Many pests attack only specific groups.

Eliminate food and shelter sources for animal pests, including brush piles and other debris where they can nest and feed.

In short, your garden may need a combination of direct and indirect control.

Dollar-cost averaging protects you

Sylvia Porter

Will stocks, bonds or other investments rise, fall or remain stable? Like most investors, you are unsure. Then why not consider staggering your purchase with dollar-cost averaging instead of investing a large sum all at once? You may not make a big score, but you probably won't take a bit hit either.

The time-tested rule is to have a stake in a variety of investments with a diversified portfolio. But being diversified does not simply apply to "what" you invest in. It also applies to "how" you invest. Dollar-cost averaging allows you to diversify the prices at which you buy and sell. That way you won't buy securities at what turn out to be unusually high prices.

Say you plan to invest $4,000 in a stock mutual fund. By dollar-cost averaging, you might invest $1,000 every third month. Some investors dollar-cost average using six-month or yearly intervals. You won't make a mint. If you invest $4,000 all at once and stocks soar, you will be in the catbird seat. On the other hand, if stocks nosedive, you will be in the hot seat. By investing $1,000 every three months, you'll be reducing your risk.

The way it works: If your dollar-cost average, you won't wind up buying securities at an average price. You will wind up buying them at a below-average price. Why? When the price of the securities declines, you'll be able to buy more shares.

Let's say a stock or mutual fund is selling at $15 a share. In three months, the price drops to $10; three months later, it climbs to $25; three months after that it drops to $20. Add up the prices ($70) and divide by four: The average share price is $17.50.

You buy $1,000 worth of shares every three months — 66.67 shares at $15, 100 at $10, 40 at $25, 50 at 20. Divide the number of shares you bought (256.67) into $4,000. Your average purchase price is $15.58 — less than the average price of $17.50.

Or, to put it another way, if you had bought $4,000 worth of shares at the average price of $17.50, you would now own only 228.57 shares worth $4,571.40 — not 256.67 shares worth $5,133.40.

Dollar-cost averaging is designed for conservative investors. After all, if you had been wise (or lucky) and bought $4,000 worth of shares at $10, you would have 400 shares — and would have doubled your money to $8,000. On the other hand, if you had bought at $25, you would have only 160 shares worth $3,200.

You can practice dollar-cost averaging in a rough way by re-investing dividends from stocks or distributions from mutual funds. (It would be only rough because the size of dividends and distributions may vary.)

You can use the technique on different types of investments — precious metals or certificates of deposit, for example. But dollar-cost averaging is most suitable when you buy securities where prices bob up and down, yet tend to go higher in the long run, like stocks.

What about selling? If you're not sure whether a security's price will rise or fall, but you need money, consider selling over a period of time.

But don't regularly sell a dollar amount of shares — like $1,000 every four months. You'll wind up selling more shares at the lower prices. Sell the same number of shares at intervals.

If you use dollar-cost averaging with stocks that you buy through a broker, not by reinvesting dividends or direct contributions, take into account commission costs. Staggering purchases and sales may raise the commissions you will pay. By and large, it's better to practice dollar-cost averaging with mutual funds that charge no commissions.

Keep in mind that dollar-cost averaging isn't a sure road to riches. If you stagger investments into securities that keep going down, you'll wind up with smaller losses than otherwise — but losses nonetheless. Dollar-cost averaging is no substitute for being an informed investor and choosing your investments wisely.

Is 'world-class' car really worth it?

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Consumer Reports

General Motors is heavily promoting this year's models as the first of a new generation of "world-class" cars. Indeed, GM's cars are new; they're the models the company hopes to sell into the 1990s.

The Buick Regal coupe is the first of the new generation on the market. Other Regals will follow — as will its counterparts, the Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme and the Pontiac Grand Prix.

What's different, in the main, is front-wheel drive, a relatively small engine and an aerodynamic body design — all significant design changes.

Consumer Reports' auto engineers recently tested the two-door Regal Limited with a 2.8-liter V6, the only engine offered.

For comparison, the engineers tested competing Ford and Chrysler coupes. The Ford is the Mercury Cougar LS with a standard 3.8-liter V6. The rear-wheel-drive Cougar — twin to the Ford Thunderbird — is the only familiar face in the group. It's been produced in pretty much the same form for seven years.

The Chrysler is the Le Baron Coupe Premium with a standard 2.5-liter four. A V6 isn't offered. The old name was applied to a new design last year.

All are comparably equipped with luxury and convenience options. List prices range from about $15,700 for the Regal to about $16,200 for the Cougar and Le Baron.

The Cougar was clearly the winner, delivering the kind of ride and front-seating comfort you'd expect of a big coupe. Handling, braking and operating controls betray a seven-year-old design, but engine response and fuel economy are up to today's standards. A major point in the car's favor is its reliability: The Cougar and its twin, the Ford Thunderbird, have for many years been among the most reliable domestic cars. And Consumer Reports' readers who own them are more likely than the typical car owner to say they'd buy them again.

The Chrysler Le Baron coupe, newly designed last year, is little more than a K-car (Dodge Aries/Plymouth Reliant) with style. While the car doesn't offer much to generate excitement, its handling and braking are quite respectable. Buyers who feel the need for more get-up-and-go can opt for a turbocharged engine.

Consumer Reports' most recent survey of owners shows the Le Baron, in all its configurations (sedan, convertible and station wagon), as average for reliability and average for owner satisfaction.

The newly designed Buick Regal coupe features front-wheel drive, a relatively small V6 engine and an aerodynamic body design. But these significant changes haven't made much difference in the level of performance, convenience and comfort. This coupe still lags behind the competition, both foreign and domestic.

The Regal's ride feels a little firmer than that of past Buicks, and its V6 engine a little sharper.

Income tax questions and answers from Changing Times

QUESTION: I changed jobs last May and now discover that doing so cost me more than $2,000 in extra Social Security tax. My combined salary was $74,000, from which a total of $5,291 in FICA tax was withheld. I thought the maximum social security tax last year was about $3,000. Is that limit per job instead of per taxpayer, or was I overtaxed?

ANSWER: The same limit applies regardless of how many jobs you hold during the year, so you were overtaxed. The good news is it's relatively easy to get your money back. The Social Security wage base for 1987 was $43,800, and the tax rate for employees was 7.15 percent. That means the maximum FICA tax anyone owed on wages was $3,131.70.

Employers are supposed to stop withholding the tax once earnings exceed the wage base. But you never surpassed that amount — as far as either employers knew. When you started the new job, you started out again at zero in terms of the wage base.

You can reclaim your money by taking a credit on your 1987 return. You don't even have to file an extra form. The excess Social Security tax — the full amount you paid minus $3,131.70 — is entered on line 58 of Form 1040 as a prepayment of your income tax.

QUESTION: I'm used to getting a refund, so I was shocked when the bottom line of my return showed I owed an extra $800. Apparently I didn't adjust my withholding soon enough last year. Is the IRS going to add insult to injury by making me pay a penalty plus the extra money?

ANSWER: Not if the underpayment is due to having too little withheld from your paychecks. So many people had so much trouble with the IRS W-4 withholding forms during 1987 that the agency decided to waive the penalty. The IRS figures the decision will cost the government about $87 million.

Its generosity applies only if too little was withheld from your checks. If the extra you owe can be blamed on your failure to pay enough in estimated quarterly tax payments — on income from investments or self-employment, for example — you can still be hit with a penalty, which ranges from 9-11 percent of the overdue amount.

If your adjusted gross income for 1987 is no more than your salary, you are safe from any underpayment penalty.

FOCUS / Advice

Male self-exam important

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Why don't doctors show men (and teen-age boys) how to examine themselves for testicular cancer? Most people seem to think that only elderly men need to worry about this.

Kinsey Report
June M. Reinisch, Ph.D.

DEAR READER: I don't know why all boys aren't told about the importance of self-examination of the testicles. Perhaps it is because some physicians are embarrassed about sex. In those cases parents should give this information to their sons. If a parent is not sure how to explain this, call the local cancer society and ask for a brochure.

In the United States, testicular cancer is found in about 4 of every 100,000 white men each year. The rate is lower among men of other races. This cancer is most common between the ages of 20 to 35, but also occurs among younger and older men.

Males who have an undescended testicle or who have a testicle that descended into the scrotum several years after birth are at a greatly increased risk. If detached at an early stage, testicular cancer can be treated effectively, preserving the capacity to function sexually and to father children. Symptoms can include enlargement of a testicle or a feeling of heaviness in a testicle, but the most common symptom is a small hard lump (similar to a pea) on a testicle.

most cancerous lumps are on the front or side of a testicle, check with a physician if you're not sure what you're feeling is normal or is a change from your last self-examination.

The vast majority of lumps or changes felt in the scrotum and around the testicles are various cysts or accumulations of fluids and usually are not a sign of a serious disease. But because a lump or change can be cancer, it's important to have every lump or change checked by a physician as soon as possible.

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Is it possible for a woman who is not a mother to secrete a milky liquid from her breasts?

DEAR READER: Yes, but she should be examined by her physician because this can be a symptom of a serious problem. This can also be caused by some medications and often stops if the medication is changed (but any change in medication should be monitored by a physician). Do not stop taking medication without first talking to your physician.

Fumbling is better than nothing at all

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you had a letter from "Debat-ing in N.L.," describing her hurt and disappointment from not hearing from close friends following her serious accident.

I have recently had a similar experience. My daughter just had an illegitimate baby, and I left home to be with her and lend my support. On my return home, I told my friends, and now the fact is generally known — as it should be. What dismays me is that almost everyone I know has dropped the subject, and it is never mentioned. In my heart, I know they are puzzled about what to say, but the word from here is to say something — even if you aren't sure of what to say.

DEAR ABBY: I would like you to settle a major family dispute once and for all. I am a 20-year-old college student who comes from a working-class family and grew up in a blue-collar community. The dispute is this:

PROFESSION OR TRADE, RIVER ROUGE, MICH.

DEAR P. OR T.: I agree with you, and so does Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, which defines a profession as "a calling requiring specialized knowledge and often long and intensive academic preparation."

PEOPLE LOVER

You hit the nail on the head when you said, "People are puzzled about what to say," but not everyone would welcome an inquiry about a child in prison or some other embarrassing or unfortunate happening. Much depends on how close a friendship exists between you. Talking openly does clear the air, but I wouldn't presume to console a friend about an embarrassment — unless he or she initiated the subject.

Some readers seem shy

DEAR DR. GOTT: I keep asking myself, "Why don't your readers ask these questions of their own doctors?"

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: I, too, have wondered about this. I receive about 2,500 letters a week; some readers are apparently shy about asking their doctors questions face-to-face; others have asked and received incoherent replies. Still others, unfortunately, don't have a family doctor in whom to confide. In addition, doctors vary in their willingness and ability to answer questions.

For my part, I'm delighted to have readers question me. Your letters keep me on my toes, instruct me, stimulate me and give me a rich source of material to answer. I answer every readable question in one form or another; so if you write, be patient. I have a large stack of questions, and I'll get to yours before too long. If you have a question, write. If you don't agree with my answer, write. If you want to congratulate, grouse, chew the fat — write.

I enjoy my literary house calls and I want to get your letters. I value them. They let me know that I am doing a good job — or that I have stubbed my toe. I believe an educated, informed patient is a better patient. I like the prospect of working with you and your doctor to improve your health and knowledge of disease.

Thank you for writing; keep 'em coming.

DEAR DR. GOTT: For 35 years I've had perfect size 10 feet. In the past few weeks, my left foot has gone to 11 and my right foot is 12. My arches didn't fall and I can't identify any other cause.

DEAR READER: Since your foot bones stopped growing in adolescence, I assume that your increasing shoe size is due to swelling of the soft tissues of the feet. The most common cause of this condition is edema, the accumulation of excess fluid in tissues outside the blood vessels. See a doctor to determine the reason for your enlarging feet.

Electric aurora

Scientists think a single aurora may carry millions of megawatts of power, enough to provide all the electricity the U.S. would ever need if the energy could be harnessed.

Your Birthday

April 10, 1988

In the year ahead, your greatest opportunities will be those that can help further your ambitions. You're entering a long cycle of achievement.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today, you could be more optimistic than realistic about something for which you're hoping. Unless you come down to earth, you're not likely to grab the brass ring. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which sign is romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Views about which you feel strongly could be in conflict with those of your companions today. If you press them too fervently, you could put a damper on everyone's day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Generosity is a virtue, but don't misuse it today by impulsively favoring the wrong people, while ignoring those who are truly deserving.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your worst enemy today could be a well-intentioned friend who may enthusiastically urge you to get involved in something that does not serve your best interests.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It will be easier for you to make promises today than it will be for you to keep them a bit further down the line. Think before committing yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A labor-saving technique you'll consider today could complicate your work. It's best to stick to methods that have proven applicable to the task at hand.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you want to take a risk on something chancy today, go it alone. Friends will be upset later if you talk them into backing a loser.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone you like very much might come to you for advice today. Unfortunately, you may tell this person only what he/she wants to hear instead of stating the cause of the problem.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're an effective salesperson today, but it's best not to try to sell others on ideas in which you don't sincerely believe yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Indifference and carelessness are two factors with which those of your companions today. If you press them too fervently, they could cause a pain in your purse.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll be pretty good at getting things started today, but if you don't ride herd on them until they are concluded, there's a good chance the end results will be undesirable.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone who is rather aloof might try to extract information from you today that was told to you in strict confidence by another. Keep your guard up.

change as the opponents enter the auction, as does bidding strategy.

Because West was not vulnerable he risked coming in with a two-heart overall. He knew that he wanted a heart lead at any contract, but particularly if North happened to play no-trump. However, that but-in bid by West swung South from supporting his partner's spade suit to bidding no-trump himself in order to protect his heart king at trick one. North carried on to game in no-trump despite a minimum 13-point opening, because he upgraded the value of his diamond queen as a fitting card in responder's suit. Although West did well not to lead a heart, the favorable location of the diamond king made nine tricks at no-trump easy for declarer.

Note that four spades by North would have short shrift with East leading through South's king of hearts, but East's four-card spade holding is also crucial to defeating a spade game.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books.

Heavy rain

When seven inches of rain fell within 30 minutes at Cambridge, Ohio, in July 1914, the air was so full of water that anyone stepping outdoors found it difficult to breathe. It was one of the severest rainstorms ever recorded in the United States.

1988 Academy Awards mark a turning point

By Dick Kleiner
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

LOS ANGELES — So far in this election year, there is no clear-cut favorite. Unlike in past races, the field appears to be wide open. We're not talking politics here — we're talking Oscars.

The Academy Awards will be presented on Monday (ABC-TV, 9 p.m.). The electorate — the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences — has had some strange and difficult choices.

"This year's nominations," says a Hollywood veteran, "represent a revolt against the Hollywood establishment."

"There's no change," suggests another old-timer. "People look at the nominees and see a few strange names and think that means something. It doesn't. Every year there are one or two unexpected names."

"The old guard is losing out," states a former MGM executive. "The old guard is still there."

"They are still in control — (Gregory) Peck and (Charlton) Heston still wield a lot of power."

Actually, the 1988 Oscar nominations can be seen as a turning point in the movie business.

In previous years, there was a direct correlation between box-office receipts and Oscar nominations.

Some nominees this year are from films that were hardly blockbusters — Marcello Mas-troianelli for "Dark Eyes," Jack Nicholson and Meryl Streep for "Ironweed," Sean Connery for "The Untouchables," Sally Kirkland for "Anna" and Norma Aleandro for "Gaby — A True Story." When you have to explain to people who some of the nominees are, that's a major change from past balloting.

There are those who believe all this represents a belated effort on the part of the academy to recognize achievement.

"I am impressed with the nominations this year," says Eva Marie Saint, an Oscar winner herself for "On the Waterfront" in 1954. "This year's movies were very good — for the first time in a long time, there were a lot of movies I wanted to see, and I love to go to the movies."

Saint, was, however, disappointed not so much with who was nominated, but with who wasn't. Everybody has a pet disappointment. In Saint's case, it was that her old friend, Lillian Gish, wasn't nominated for Best Supporting Actress for her work in "The Whales of August."

One prevalent opinion is that a few people got robbed — especially James L. Brooks, the director of "Broadcast News," which garnered seven nominations.

"How can they nominate it for Best Picture and for all those other categories," a Hollywood producer asks, "and not give the director a nomination? How do

BARBRA STREISAND
... "Nuts" overlooked

SALLY KIRKLAND
... "bought" nomination

they think it became a Best Picture or got all those nominations, if the director didn't have something to do with it?"

Also overlooked — again — were Steven Spielberg (director of "Empire of the Sun," which got six nominations) and Barbra Streisand for her performance in "Nuts." The academy just doesn't like either of them.

To one executive, the Streisand omission is indicative of the end of one of the most infamous of Hollywood/Oscar traditions — block voting. The studios get behind a picture and request — demand, actually — that all Academy members on their payroll vote for that picture.

"Nuts" was a Warner Bros. picture, and, reportedly, that studio urged its Academy-member employees to vote for it, particularly for Streisand as Best Actress. The film got nothing.

"This represents an enormous breakdown in the studio system," the former MGM exec says. "There was obviously no block voting this year. Warner Bros. has many votes, but 'Nuts' didn't get one nomination."

Of course, block voting was never the force it was cracked up to be — though the studio tells you how to vote, the ballots are secret, so nobody really knows.

"Still," he continues, "it was in your own best interest if your studio got a lot of nominations. Oscars mean money at the box office, and the more prosperous the studio is, the more secure your job is."

Nevertheless, the decline in block voting and in overall studio control of the voting is a boon to independent films. This year's nominations reflect that. "My Life as a Dog," which earned director Lasse Hallstrom a nomination, is a Swedish import.

Acting nominees Sally Kirkland, Marcello Mastroianni, Norma Aleandro, Morgan Freeman and Ann Southern ("The Whales of August") all appeared in independent films.

Some things don't change, though. There is some resentment here for Sally Kirkland's nomination as Best Actress for "Anna," on the grounds that she bought it. The advertising campaign in the Hollywood trade papers for Kirkland was, some say, the most blatant since the infamous campaign for Chill Willis' nomination for "The Alamo" in 1961.

There is always some of that. But, otherwise, this does seem to be a year that marks a change for Oscar. In 1988, he will be going to the most deserving — not necessarily the most famous.

Remake isn't D.O.A., but it's close

D.O.A. (R) This remake of a 1949 thriller begins promisingly as an English lit prof (Dennis Quaid) in Texas stumbles into a police station and gasps that he's been slipped a fatal dose of poison. The rest of the picture tells how Quaid got to this desperate point, and who got him there. The built-in black joke is that the prof — a once-successful, now heavy-drinking author who's lost his nerve and whose wife (Jane Kaczmarek) is leaving him — rediscovers his vitality and integrity only when it's too late, and he's about to die.

Viewers in the mood for a high-style film noir will be encouraged by the presence of Quaid, a good down-to-earth actor who doesn't make a false move, and by the baroque cinematography of Yuri Neyman (who shot the dazzling cult hit "Liquid Sky"). Meg Ryan, Quaid's co-star in "Innerspace," brings a fresh blend of cuddliness and spunk to the role of one of Quaid's students, whose adoration of her profits her more than she bargained for.

But the movie, over-directed by "Max Headroom"/musical video creators Rocky Morton and Annabel Jankel, disintegrates in an onslaught of poorly motivated violence, murky plot mechanics, laughably self-conscious dialogue, and a terrible supporting performance by ghouliah-looking Charlotte Rampling. The picture's not dead on arrival, but it does expire long before the true poisoner is predictably revealed. GRADE: **

MASQUERADE (R) Here's a B-movie that delivers — the kind of small-scale, slightly hokey, yet enjoyable romantic thriller that makes perfect Saturday matinee viewing. Set in the picturesque Hamptons, among the moneyed beach set, this Bob Swain-directed picture gives us lovely, ladylike Meg Tilly as a rich heiress wooed by an enigmatic prettybody yachting captain (Rob Lowe).

As the movie spins its web of deceit and passion, we come to see that the yachtman is not the innocent charmer he at first appears to be, and that two other men in the heiress's life are equally slippery — her dead mother's creepy last husband (John Glover), and the heiress's childhood friend, now a policeman. The rest of the plot is best discovered in the viewing, as Dick Wolf's tricky screenplay keeps us

Miniskirts

On the first time around, there were some problems

My Side
Nancy Pappas

In a rare attempt at closet cleaning the other day, I came across a very attractive black, scoop-necked blouse — one which I didn't remember having seen before.

After a minute or two of ruminating, I realized that this was not a blouse at all — it was a dress I'd bought for a concert, my first year in college.

The truth is, I've no objection to miniskirts, as long as the leg on exhibit is not my own.

Even when my frame was carrying around a mere 108 pounds, these legs were nothing to rave about. I always envied the girls whose leg silhouettes meandered in and out at the ankle, calf and knee, then made a straight run for the hip.

But my legs take an elaborate detour bump at the hip-and-saddlebag area, then make a straight bee-line down to the ankle, without so much as a hill or curve in the way.

I've always felt that my body was probably designed by a preschool kid with a sawnaway crayon.

THE FIRST TIME that miniskirts made the scene, I had no choice in the matter. I had to wear them. There simply wasn't any female in junior high school who'd have been caught wearing below-the-knee skirts back in 1963.

Even those unfortunates whose parents objected to the 20-inch skirt would roll their waistbands around several times as soon as they'd left the house. Side-seam pockets shrunk to half their proper length, or disappeared entirely, in an effort to turn a "Little Goodie Two-shoes" outfit (remember those heather sweaters and their dyed-to-match skirts?) into something quite a bit more jazzy.

These jerry-rigged minis were made all the more unflattering by the addition of one of those wide belts that were de rigueur at the time. Your level of sophistication was judged, in part, by whether you wore the bright, brassy buckle in the front or off to one side.

But the crowning blow to all of us who suffered through this Mini Mania was the garter belt.

An entire generation of women has grown up taking pantyhose for granted. Thus they are blissfully unaware that the garter belt was once something more than a boudoir accessory.

THE GARTER BELT — or its counterpart, the panty girdle — was a necessity of life, in that bygone era when dinosaurs roamed the earth and stockings were only thigh-high.

Wearing a mini meant that you were waging a constant battle, even after your parents let you out of the house.

The battle was with your own skirt, and the tendency it had to ride up above the tops of your stockings. While it was desirable to show a great deal of leg, no one wanted their garters to show.

So the trick was to yank hard on your skirt when sliding into a classroom desk, then cross your legs very carefully. Even if you managed to keep your skirt smoothed down over the garters in front, you were only halfway home.

You then had to surreptitiously peek down to see if the underneath surface of your thigh was modestly covered, as well.

Safely seated at last? Great! But sometimes your cropped skirt would begin to creep upwards while your attention was fogged on some distraction — such as the teacher and the subject matter.

If so, a friend might whisper a discreet comment — in our school it was usually "You're sky high" — to warn of impending disaster.

SO IT'S NOT terribly surprising that the return of the mini is greeted with something less than overwhelming enthusiasm by those of us who've been down this road before.

Even with the help of a good pair of lightly tinted, supportive hose — the kind which promise to beautify and energize the gams — I don't think I'm ready to reveal the "splendor" of my legs to the scrutiny of the masses.

Not that I'm tossing out that black scoop-necked job. It will look wonderful over my white flannel pants.

And my psychedelic mini-dress with the pointed, wizard sleeves makes a great Halloween costume.

But the long, full skirts that followed the mini are much more my style. And I know that, before long, the hemlines will follow the adage — what goes up must come down.

FOCUS / Books & Hobbies

After mighty peculiar March, April is slow for philatelists

This airborne pheasant will debut in living color on April 29. We are springing it now because it is slated to be the only new issue for the whole month. No, it is not another pesky undenominated stamp. Linn's for April 11 shows it with a large "25" right above the "USA."

The ring-necked pheasant is the state bird of South Dakota and the first-day ceremonies will take place in Rapid City in that state. Mr. Ringo has appeared before, only perching, not winging, on the stamp for South Dakota in the 1982 State Birds and Flowers sheet (Scott No. 1993, 20 cents).

This avian gem will be issued only in a booklet with two panes of 10 stamps each. This presents us with a $2.50 blivit if we should choose to order Postal Service-affixed stamps for first-day cancellations. You have to take the whole schmeer as the "Service" will not trifle with singles.

This April will never be famous as a philatelic month, but there were some mighty peculiar goings-on in March.

The ceremonies for the 22-cent Knute Rockne commem on the 9th had no less than President Ronald "Gipper" Reagan as the speaker.

Then on the 22nd we saw a deluge of non-denominated issues.

There were the "E" (for Earth) series stamps (at 25 cents each), appearing in sheet, coil and booklet forms. The design was a globe in colors with the word "EARTH" showing above "Domestic USA." We were thus off-handedly warned that we cannot use them beyond our borders.

Collectors' Corner

Then on the same day came a couple of non-denom "penalty" mail issues, a coil and an official envelope. Scary at first — Will I rot in jail if they catch me with one? But the penalty is only money ($300), to be forestalled by just not using one on a private mailing.

These pieces will not be sold at post offices, but they will be offered by the Philatelic Sales Division. Try a member of the local stamp club for a way to order without being hit by the front-end load.

Escaping the morass of the 22nd, we come to the release of the "Stars" envelope on the 26th. The design shows 13 stars on a blue base, encircling "USA" with a "25" off to one side, in red.

On the 28th there was a 15-cent "America the Beautiful" postal card. The color pic shows a couple of buffalo on a roam through a grassy plain with a mountain range in the far-off vista.

The month wound up with a USDA-Sweden-Finland joint issue on the 29th, the first triple-joint caper ever to involve the U.S.

COMING EVENTS:

More women sell — and do it well

NORWALK (AP) — Despite turning in superior performances, women in sales forces tend to represent a strong portion of housewares, publishing and food products industries, but few women are selling tools, hardware and general machinery, a study shows.

"Over the past decade, the most significant advances for women in sales have been in banking, financial services, utilities and publishing," said William O'Connell, head of sales management practice for the company who conducted the study, Personnel Corporation of America.

"In these industries, where there is no apparent gender-related consumer bias, in sheer numbers women have equalled or surpassed their male counterparts on the sales force," he said Friday.

The data for the study, conducted earlier this year, came from 12,000 salespeople employed by nearly 350 companies representing 40 industries, according to Personnel Corporation, a Norwalk-based human resource management consulting company that deals with Fortune 500 companies.

THE STUDY also indicated that women accounted for 17.64 percent of the nation's total sales force in 1987. This is more than twice the number (7.3 percent) reported in 1981.

According to the study, the industries with the greatest percentage of women in their sales forces are textile and apparel, banks and financial services, housewares, publishing and food products.

The industries with the smallest percentage of women in their sales forces are general machinery, aerospace, transportation equipment, tools and hardware, automotive parts and fabricated metal products, the study found.

The highest percentage of women sales people is in the textile and apparel field, with 61 percent, according to the study. By contrast, only 3 percent of the people selling fabricated metal products were women, and there were no women selling general machinery and aerospace products.

"OUR HYPOTHESIS is that selling such technical items as tools and hardware requires some engineering and technical background, which statistics have shown, women have not gotten into," O'Connell said.

But, he said, the sales managers he surveyed indicated that women tend to be better performers in the industries where they are selling.

Another trend O'Connell said he noticed was the sales staffs are better educated.

"We still have the impression of the blue suede shoes and plaid jackets phenomena. ... But of the sales personnel hired over the last five years, 81 percent have college experience," he said. "In the general population, 28 percent have college experience."

Discount real estate firm out of business in 8 months

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A real estate firm that tried to be a maverick by selling homes for fees well below the prevailing rate is going out of business eight months after opening.

Barclay & Stubbs is being forced to close its doors mainly because it could not attract top agents, said Elizabeth F. Kinzly, the agency's president and spokeswoman.

The firm was offering to sell homes for a 3 1/2 percent commission, as opposed to the going rate of 6 percent. Buyers were also being offered a 1 percent bonus for purchasing a home listed by Barclay & Stubbs.

Agents for the firm were offered a salary instead of the standard commission — a factor that others in the real estate business had predicted would hinder Barclay & Stubbs' recruitment efforts.

Kinzly said Thursday she believed agents were reluctant to join the firm because of a fear of something new and concern about how they would be viewed by others in the business.

If Barclay represented both the buyer and the seller, the agency would net a 2 1/2 percent commission. Other brokerages were offered a 2 percent shared commission, so Barclay's net commission could be as little as half a percent.

Although commissions are negotiable, most are 6 percent, shared equally between the listing and selling brokers.

The firm had sold about four or five houses, and had deposits on another six, Kinzly said, adding many of the sales had been on a shared-commission basis.

A few dozen homeowners had listed their houses with the agency, and "things were picking up a lot," said Kinzly.

Kinzly said she disagreed with board chairman Benjamin Morris' decision to quit now. She said she would have liked to have seen the company remain in business at least through the spring selling season.

"That could have made it go," she said.

The firm had been at the center of a controversy in the real estate community after it sued four area brokers in February, charging unfair trade practices and conspiracy to restrain trade.

The other brokers had offered Barclay a lower shared-brokerage commission than that offered to other agencies.

A judge last month granted a motion by two of the defendants to have the case referred to the Greater New Haven Board of Realtors for arbitration. One of the other firms reached a settlement with Barclay.

Strike over, some laid off

EVENDALE, Ohio (AP) — Some of the approximately 6,700 production workers returning from a 50-day strike at General Electric Co.'s jet engine-building plant are subject for immediate two-week layoffs, GE officials said Friday.

Several hundred employees volunteered to be laid off for up to two weeks as union workers began returning from the strike that ended Friday, General Electric spokesman Ron Hess said.

Hess did not have a specific number of workers affected, but said it would involve several hundred of those who went on strike Feb. 16.

The temporary layoffs will be required until GE can return work to the Evendale plant that was moved to other company plants and outside vendors during the strike, Hess said. The suburban Cincinnati plant produces engines for military fighter jets and commercial jetliners.

Steve Crawford of United Auto Workers Local 647, one of the two unions that walked out, said no worker was forcibly laid off, but that some workers voluntarily accepted layoff and will receive 60 percent of their normal pre-strike pay.

Al O'Connor, president of International Association of Machinists & Aerospace Workers Local 912, said 37 of his union members chose to accept temporary layoff.

Pursuant to Sections 7-148b, through 7-148f, of the General Statutes of Connecticut and Sections 2-2 and 3-1 of the Charter of the Town, there is hereby created a Fair Rent Commission, which shall be composed of seven (7) electors of the Town who shall be appointed by the Board of Directors. The membership of the Commission shall include an equal number of landlords and tenants with a minimum of two (2) each. Of the members first appointed, two (2) shall be designated to serve for a term ending November 30, 1989; two (2) shall be designated to serve for a term ending November 30, 1990; and three (3) shall be designated to serve for a term ending November 30, 1991. Thereafter, members shall be appointed to serve for a term of three (3) years ending in the month of November. In the event of death or resignation of any member of the Commission, a successor shall be appointed by the Board of Directors to serve the unexpired portion of the term of which such member had been appointed. The Board of Directors may remove any member for cause and thereafter fill such vacancy. In addition to the seven (7) regular members of the Commission, the Director of Health shall serve without vote as an ex officio member of the Commission. The number of Commission members who shall be of the same political party shall be in accordance with that of the Connecticut general electorate. The Commission shall select from among its members, a Chairperson and Vice-Chairperson. The members of the Commission shall serve without compensation but may be reimbursed for necessary and actual expenses incurred in the performance of their official duties.

Section 2-107. Meetings; Rules and Regulations.
The Chairperson or any three (3) members of the Fair Rent Commission may call a meeting provided that at least three (3) days advance notice of the meeting is given. The Commission shall, with the assistance and advice of the Town Attorney, adopt rules and regulations for putting into effect the provisions of this article, which rules and regulations shall not be inconsistent with the provisions hereof. The General Manager of the Town shall, at the request of the Commission, provide the services of a Secretary and other such employees of the Town, technical consultants, and legal counsel as it may require. The Commission shall hold at least two (2) meetings each calendar year.

Section 2-108. Powers and Duties
a) The Fair Rent Commission may make studies and investigations, conduct hearings and receive complaints relative to rental charges on housing accommodations, except those accommodations rented on a seasonal basis, within its jurisdiction, which term shall include mobile home and mobile home park lots. In order to control and eliminate excessive rental charges on housing accommodations, the Commission shall carry out the provisions of Sections 7-148b to 7-148f inclusive, Section 47a-20 and subsection (b) of Section 47a-22c of the Connecticut General Statutes. The Commission for such purposes, may compel the attendance of persons at hearings, issue subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum, issue orders and continue, amend, terminate or suspend any of its orders and decisions.
b) For purposes of this article "seasonal basis" means housing accommodations rented for a period or periods aggregating not more than one hundred twenty (120) days in any one (1) calendar year.

Section 2-109. Hearings; Complaints.
Any tenant residing in the Town of Manchester shall be eligible to file a complaint with the Commission. A complaint shall be filed with the Town Health Department on forms provided. A hearing on the complaint shall be scheduled within thirty (30) days of the filing of a complaint. Written notice of the date, time and place of the hearing shall be given by mailing a notice thereof, by certified mail to the landlord and the tenant at least ten (10) days prior to said hearing. In the event that the complaint involves a matter within the jurisdiction of the Town Health Department or any other public agency, the matter may be referred to the appropriate agency for action and the Commission may concurrently exercise its powers hereunder.

Section 2-104. Conciliation.
The Chairperson of the Fair Rent Commission, may request that the Town Attorney, or designee, or any suitable person meet with the parties, if the parties consent, in a session closed to the public, to attempt to reconcile differences between the parties prior to initiating the formal hearing process. Any agreement between the parties as a result of said meeting must be in writing signed by the parties and witnessed by the conciliator.

Section 2-105. Consideration in Determining Fair Rental Charge.

a) In determining whether a rental charge or a proposed increase in a rental charge is so excessive, with due regard to all the circumstances, as to be harsh and unconscionable, the fair rent commission shall consider such of the following circumstances as are applicable to the type of accommodation: (1) The rents charged for the same number of rooms in other housing accommodations in the same and in other areas of the municipality; (2) The sanitary conditions existing in the housing accommodation in question; (3) The number of bathrooms or showers, flush water closets and lavatory basins available to the occupants thereof; (4) The services, furniture, furnishings and equipment supplied therein; (5) The size and number of bedrooms contained therein; (6) Repairs necessary to make such accommodations reasonably livable in the accommodations; (7) The amount of taxes and overhead expenses, including debt service, thereon; (8) Whether the accommodations are in compliance with the ordinances of the municipality and the general statutes relating to health and safety; (9) The income of the tenant and the availability of accommodations; (10) The availability of utilities; (11) Damages done to the premises by the tenant, caused by other than ordinary wear and tear; (12) The amount and frequency of increases in rental charges; (13) Whether, and the extent to which, the income from an increase in rental charges has been or will be reinvested in improvements to the accommodations, if the Commission determines, after hearing, that the rental charge or proposed increase in the rental charge for the housing accommodation is so excessive, based on the standards and criteria set forth, herein, as to be harsh and unconscionable. It may order that the rent be limited to such an amount as it determines to be fair and equitable. Any such order shall not become effective until the first day of the next rental payment period following the filing of the complaint.
b) If the Commission determines, after hearing, that a landlord has retaliated in any manner against a tenant because the tenant has complained to the Commission, the Commission may order the landlord to cease and desist from such conduct.

Section 2-106. Rent Paid to the Commission.
(a) If the Commission determines, after hearing, that the housing accommodation in question fails to comply with State Statute or regulations or Town of Manchester regulations or ordinances relating to health and safety, the Commission may order the tenant to pay the fair and equitable rent, as determined by the Commission, to the Commission.
(b) The Commission shall hold such rent in an escrow account, as hereinafter provided, until the landlord makes the necessary changes, repairs or installations so as to bring the housing accommodation into compliance with such statute, regulation and ordinance.
(c) If the landlord shall have failed to make such repairs, the landlord may petition the Commission for reinstatement of the original rent and for the payment to him of the rent held in escrow.
(d) If the landlord shall have corrected such violations after the order reducing the rent, but the rent had not been reduced solely because of such violations, the landlord may petition the Commission for an order fixing a fair and equitable rent for such housing accommodation in light of its condition at the time of the landlord's petition, and for the payment to him of the rent held in the escrow account.

(e) In any case arising under this section, upon reasonable determination of the Commission, the original rent or such fair and equitable rent as determined by the Commission, may be ordered into effect retroactively, at the discretion of the Commission, to the date of the petition for reinstatement. No such reinstatement shall be effective until after a hearing is held by the Commission in accordance with the provisions of Section 2-107 hereof.
Section 2-107. Escrow Account.
(a) The Fair Rent Commission shall establish an escrow account with a local bank into which it shall deposit all rents or other funds paid to it pursuant to this Article. Such funds shall be released to the landlord if:
(1) The landlord shall be successful in an appeal to the court; or
(2) The Commission shall order such release after a petition in accordance with this article, the date of the petition for reinstatement. No such reinstatement shall be effective until after a hearing is held by the Commission in accordance with the provisions of Section 2-107 hereof.
(b) The Commission shall deposit into the escrow account rent paid to the Commission by tenants whose landlord has refused to accept the rent after the tenant has filed a complaint. Said rent shall be withdrawn from the escrow account and paid to the landlord upon written request from the landlord.
(c) The Commission shall deposit into the escrow account rent paid to the Commission by tenants if the landlord is unwilling that the Commission hold the rent until the complaint can be resolved either by conciliation or hearing. Said rent shall be withdrawn from the escrow account and paid to the landlord upon written request from the landlord. Insurance and the cost of heat, water, electricity and essential utilities as such expenses become due and payable pending the resolution of a complaint.

Section 2-108. Appeal.
Any person aggrieved by any order of the Commission may appeal to the Superior Court within twenty (20) days following the mailing of said order by certified mail. Any such appeal shall be considered a privileged matter with respect to the order of trial as provided in Section 7-148e, of the Connecticut General Statutes.
Section 2-109. Penalty for Violation.
Any person who violates any order of rent reduction or rent suspension by demanding, accepting or receiving an amount in excess thereof while such ordinance remains in effect, no appeal pursuant to Section 2-108 of the Article is pending or violates any other provisions of this Ordinance, or Connecticut General Statutes, Section 47a-20; or who refuses to obey any subpoena, order or decision of the Commission pursuant thereto shall be fined not less than twenty-five ($25.00) dollars nor more than one hundred dollars ($100.00) for each offense, if such offense continues for more than five (5) days, it shall constitute a new offense for each day it continues to exist thereafter.

Section 2-110. Evaluation of Fair Rent Commission.
The Chairperson of the Commission shall provide to the Board of Directors in January, an annual report of the Commission's operations. The Board of Directors of the Town may request also that the Town Director of Health provide a review of the Commission's operations.
Section 2-111. Definitions.

Sandy Lyle leads controversy-filled Masters

By Bob Green
The Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Sandy Lyle shot a 5-under-par 67 to take a two-stroke

BIRDIE FOR LYLE — Sandy Lyle gestures after sinking a birdie putt during second-round play at the Masters golf tournament Friday. Lyle shot a second-round 5-under-par 67 to lead by two strokes.

lead after the second round of the Masters on Friday as controversy swirled instead of the wind.

Lyle, a burly Scot who won last week in Greensboro, reached the halfway point of the tournament in 138, six strokes under par on the Augusta National Golf Club course that has been hailed as a cathedral of golf.

But the course, one of golf's most famous, came in for some extremely critical comments by Fuzzy Zoeller.

Fuzzy, usually a happy-go-lucky guy, stepped out of character and stirred up a storm with remarks aimed at the golf's officials and what he called "the tricks they put to golf courses like they've done out there."

"I'm mad. I'm flat out mad. I'm upset at what they're doing to the game of golf."

"Golf is supposed to be fun, an enjoyable thing. But when they put the tricks to it like they've done out there, it's like war, total war."

"It's no fun at all," Zoeller said after finishing a fine 6-under-par 66, the best round of the tournament.

"I'm a little surprised," Masters chairman Hord Hardin said. "I would expect it from someone not shooting a 66... I'm sorry he feels that way."

Zoeller's effort, which included seven birdies, lifted him into a tie with Gary Hallberg for third at 142, four off the pace.

Hallberg also criticized the hard, fast Augusta greens following his 69. "They're not greens. They're browns," Hallberg said. "They're like a pool table with potato-chip crumbs on it."

Mark Calcavecchia came on with a bogey-free 68 and moved into second place at 140.

Tom Watson, twice a winner of this title and a five-time British Open champion, had a 71 that gave him a 143 total and a tie with Fred Couples, Don Pooley, West German Bernhard Langer and Chip Beck.

Couples had a 68, Pooley matched par 72 and Beck birdied the 18th for a 70. Langer, a former winner here, had five birdies and an eagle in an round of 72 that also included five bogeys and a double bogey. First round co-leaders Robert Wrenn and PGA champion Larry Nelson drifted back.

Nelson stumbled to a 78 and was at 147. Wrenn, a Masters rookie, shot 75 for 144.

Jack Nicklaus, 48, the only six-time winner of this title, could not overcome an erratic putter. He took 73 strokes and completed 36 holes at 148, 10 shots off the pace.

Australian Greg Norman, a runner-up in the last two Masters, was two strokes higher after a frustrating 73.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain, a two-time Masters champion and one of the pre-tournament favorites this year, matched par 72 and was at 145.

U.S. Open champ Scott Simpson, four-time Masters champion Arnold Palmer, Lee Trevino, Ian Woosnam of Wales and Paul Azinger, the 1987 Player of the Year, all failed to qualify for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Curtis Strange scored a hole in one, only the 11th in Masters history and the first in 16 years in this tournament, with a 7-iron on the 155-yard 12th hole.

But Zoeller's outspoken criticism of the major golf championships in the United States — he made it clear he included the U.S. Open and the PGA as well as the Masters — upstaged the on-course action.

Zoeller, a former winner of both the Masters and the U.S. Open, directed his ire at extremely hard, very fast greens.

"It's no fun at all," he said. "It's all the majors," Zoeller said. "It's Johnny Miller's fault," he said. "Ever since he shot that great score in a U.S. Open on a great golf course, egos have gotten in the way and everybody thinks they have to grow rough up to the knees and have greens as hard as this table."

Brown reverses his field, to stay at Kansas

By Doug Tucker
The Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Larry Brown shocked Kansas and UCLA with the ultimate change of heart Friday, rejecting an offer to return as the Bruins' basketball coach and staying with the national champion Jayhawks.

"Although I visited UCLA last night, I came back and after thinking about it, I've decided to stay at the University of Kansas," said Brown, reading a one-paragraph statement then leaving without taking questions.

It was a stunning turnaround even for Brown, basketball's most famous vagabond who left previous jobs with the Carolina Cougars and the Denver Nuggets of the old American Basketball Association, the NBA Nuggets and New Jersey Nets and, after just two seasons, UCLA.

This time, according to the scenario sketched by UCLA and Kansas officials, Brown went to Kansas to UCLA back to Kansas in less than 24 hours.

UCLA officials were so sure it was a done deal that they had scheduled a news conference Saturday to announce that Brown would replace the fired Walt Hazzard. Instead, he became the second coach in a week to turn down the job, following North Carolina State's Jim Valvano.

"When Coach Brown left Los Angeles this morning, we had every reason to believe that he had accepted UCLA's offer," UCLA athletic director Peter Dallis said.

"We have since learned from the media that Coach Brown has decided to remain at Kansas, but we have not heard this directly from Coach Brown."

His change of mind was so sudden that most Kansas officials didn't know about it, either.

"When we left our staff meeting at noon, we were all quite sure we'd lost our coach," said Floyd Temple, Kansas' assistant athletic director who had told The Associated Press shortly before Brown's announcement that "he's gone. It's definite."

"I don't want to mention any names, but we were told it was a lost cause," Temple said.

In fact, Temple said that even as Brown sat at a table in Allen Fieldhouse to reveal his decision to about 200 students and fans and reporters, "We all thought we were going to lose our basketball coach. We thought it was all over."

When Brown said he was staying, Temple and assistant athletic directors Doug Vance and Gary Hunter "looked at each other in amazement," Temple said. "It was an absolute shock. It was tremendous shock to all of us."

More than 200 students and boosters burst into cheers and chanted, "Larry, Larry," so loud that

Brown had to pause and gesture for quiet so he could read his statement.

The Kansas campus is still euphoric following the NCAA championship Brown's unranked team won Monday night with 83-79 upset of Oklahoma.

"I apologize at this time for these things to be coming out," Brown said. "I think it's a time everybody ought to be celebrating the accomplishments of our team. Right now I'm just going to meet with our team and leave it at that."

With that, he left. UCLA officials met Thursday evening and Friday morning in Los Angeles with Brown regarding the basketball job.

Brown had coached at UCLA beginning in 1979 and took the Bruins to the 1980 title game, losing to Louisville, before abruptly leaving for the NBA Nets. When he took the Kansas job five years ago, he was asked by the Nets to leave before the end of the season to avoid further disruption as the team prepared for the league playoffs.

UCLA first learned of Brown's decision when an AP reporter called for reaction.

"We had the room, we were ready with the release," said Bill Bennett, UCLA's associate sports information director. "I think the atmosphere here is one of shock and extreme disappointment."

Winfield, Pagliarulo power Yanks to victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Winfield hit two home runs, Mike Pagliarulo had a two-run homer and struggling Richard Dotson won his debut for New York as the Yankees defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 6-4 Friday night for their first 3-0 start in 14 years.

Winfield, still getting a standing ovation every time he comes to bat as a result of his feud with owner George Steinbrenner over the right fielder's recently published autobiography, hit his first home run of the season in the second inning. The homer followed a leadoff walk to Gary Ward by Juan Nieves, 0-1, who was 0-3 with an 8.53 ERA against the Yankees last year.

Winfield connected for a solo shot in the eighth against Mark Clear.

The Brewers scored an unearned run in the third but Winfield opened the Yankees' fourth with a single and one out later Pagliarulo homered to make it 4-1. Both of Pagliarulo's home runs this season have come off left-handed pitchers. Only six of his 60 homers in 1986 and 1987 were against left-handers.

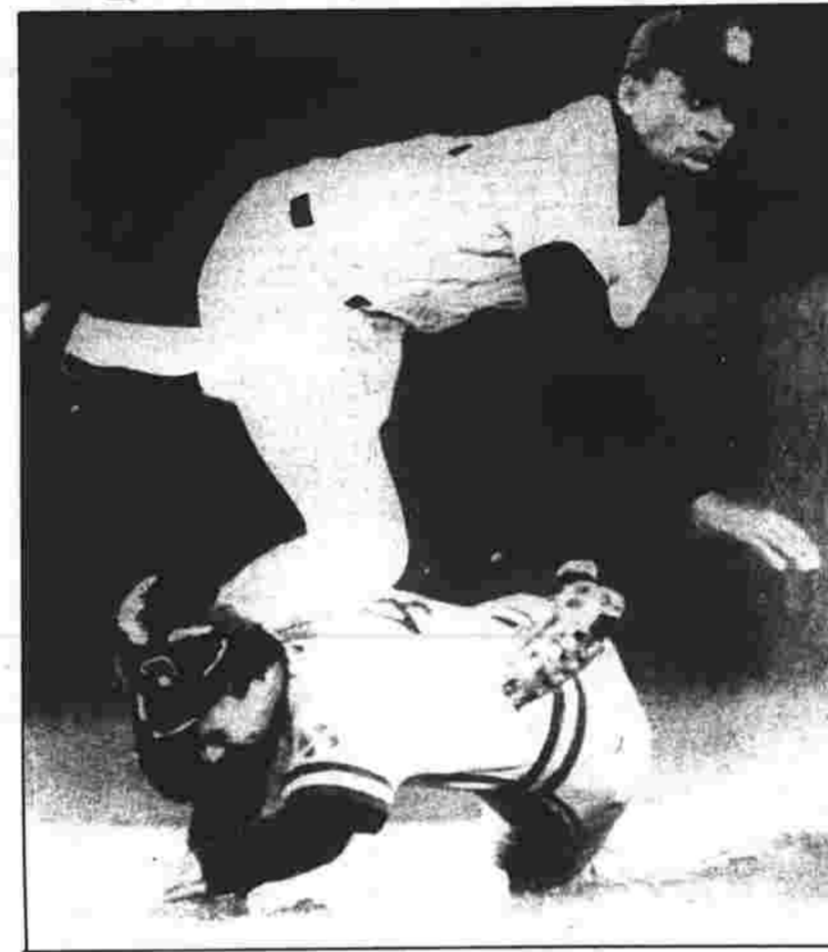

Dotson, acquired from the Chicago White Sox in an off-season trade, lasted 5 2-3 innings and yielded three runs — one unearned — and four hits while walking five and striking out two. The Brewers stranded five runners in scoring position in the first five innings.

Rickey Henderson's leadoff double in the fifth chased Nieves. Henderson stole third and scored on Willie Randolph's sacrifice fly off Odell Jones.

Indians 3, Orioles 0
CLEVELAND (AP) — Scott Bailes pitched a three-hitter and Andy Allanson drew a bases-loaded walk to snap a scoreless tie in the seventh inning Friday as Cleveland beat the Baltimore Orioles 3-0 in the Indians' home opener before 53,738 fans.

The 25-year-old Bailes, 1-0, walked three and struck out four in his first career complete game. The Indians won for the third time in four games and reduced their team ERA to 1.03.

Last season, Cleveland's 5.28 ERA was the highest in the major leagues in 31 years.

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Bruce Ruffin pitched a six-hitter and Lance Parrish hit a two-run homer Friday night, triggering the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-1 victory over the New York Mets.

Ruffin, 1-0, who slumped last year after an excellent rookie season, struck out five in his first start of 1988.

Left-hander Sid Fernandez, 0-1, took the loss, working six innings, allowing five hits and four runs.

The Phillies went ahead 2-1 in the third on a one-out single by Ruffin, who reached third on Juan Samuel's second double of the game and scored as Bob Dernier hit into a fielder's choice.

Philadelphia boosted its lead to 4-1 in the fourth when Mike Schmidt opened with a walk and Parrish hit his first home run of the season.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in a first inning that featured Dernier's futile attempt to steal home.

Samuel led off with a double, took third on a balk and, after Dernier was hit by a pitch, Phil Bradley beat out a swinging bunt for a single, scoring Samuel.

Dernier, who had taken second on Bradley's hit and third as Schmidt hit into a double play, tried to steal home, but was tagged out by catcher Gary Carter.

The Mets tied it in the second when Carter hit his third home run of the season. It was his 25th in Veterans Stadium, the most by a visiting player. Carter also had a single and a double.

Dodgers 6, Braves 3

ATLANTA (AP) — Alfredo Griffin capped a five-run sixth inning with a three-run triple Friday night, sending the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 6-3 victory over the winless Atlanta Braves.

The Dodgers trailed 3-1 going into the sixth, which Pedro Guerrero led off with a walk against starter Kevin Coffman, 0-1. Singles by Mike Marshall and Mike Davis and a grounder by John Shelby scored Guerrero. A sacrifice fly by Mike Scioscia sent home Shelby with the tying run.

Danny Heep, batting for pitcher Tim Leary, 1-0, and Steve Sax followed with walks, chasing Coffman. Griffin then sent a drive into the left-center field alley against reliever Chuck Cary, scoring all three runners and dooming the Braves to their fourth defeat.

Leary yielded five hits in five innings. Tim Belcher finished with four innings of one-hit relief for his first major league save.

A single by Leary opening the third inning led to the game's first run. Leary went to second on a wild pitch and scored when Kirk Gibson doubled.

The Braves tied the score when Ozzie Virgil, Ken Oberkfell and Andres Thomas hit consecutive singles with one out in the fifth. After a sacrifice by Coffman put Oberkfell and Thomas in scoring position, Dion James singled them home, giving the Braves a 3-1 lead.

Cubs 6, Expos 4

MONTREAL (AP) — Dave Martinez hit his first career grand slam in a five-run second inning Friday night and the Chicago Cubs beat the Montreal Expos 6-4 for their third straight victory.

Martinez went 4-for-5 as the Cubs started the season 3-0 for the first time since 1969.

Chicago sent 10 batters to the plate in the second against Floyd Youmans, making his first start of the season. Youmans is coming off a trouble-plagued 1987 season that included a stay in an alcohol rehabilitation center during the winter.

Pirates 4, Cardinals 3

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Barry Bonds doubled twice and scored two runs and Bobby Bonilla homered, leading the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-3 victory Friday night over St. Louis in the Cardinals' home opener.

Pittsburgh's Brian Fisher, 1-0, Bob Kipper, Barry Jones and Jeff Robinson combined on an eight-hitter to keep St. Louis winless in three games. Kipper and Jones spelled Fisher with none out and the bases loaded in the sixth and worked out of the jam, permitting St. Louis only one run.

Bonds' first double and Andy Van Slyke's sacrifice fly one out later preceded Bonilla's home run, his third of the season, in the first.

Royals 3, Tigers 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Floyd Bannister pitched two-hit ball for seven innings in his Kansas City debut and Gene Garber finished with hitless relief Friday night, leading the Royals over the Detroit Tigers 3-2.

Bannister, acquired in an off-season trade with the Chicago White Sox, gave up two singles and a walk in the third inning and wound up with three strikeouts. He benefitted from stand-out defensive plays by left fielder Bo Jackson, second baseman Frank White and third baseman Kevin Seitzer.

Garber closed for his first save.

Trailing 2-1, George Brett opened the Royals' sixth with a single off Jeff Robinson. Brett went to second on a wild pitch, continued to third on a throwing error by catcher Mike Heath and scored on Danny Tartabull's double.

Twins 6, Blue Jays 3
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Dan Gladden homered twice, drove in four runs and stole home as the World Series champion Minnesota Twins, baseball's best home team last year, opened their 1988 Metrodome season with a 6-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays after an 0-2 start on the road.

Gladden went 4-for-5, including a double, and is 8-for-14 this season. Gary Gaetti's sixth-inning homer broke a 2-2 tie and Bert Blyleven posted his 245th career victory in his first appearance of the year.

Jeff Reardon got the final four outs for his first save.

Dave Stieb was the loser in his 1988 debut. He gave up eight hits in six-plus innings, including Gaetti's first homer of the year.

The Twins were 56-25 at the Metrodome during the 1987 regular season but 29-52 on the road.

U.S. takes 1-0 lead

LIMA, Peru — American Jay Berger ousted Peru's Pablo Arraya in a five-set marathon Friday to give the U.S. a 1-0 lead in their Davis Cup American Zone semifinal match.

Berger, ranked 37th in the world, outlasted Arraya, ranked 134th, 7-5, 6-1, 5-7, 1-6, 7-5 in a match that took 5 hours, 45 minutes.

The second singles match, between American Andre Agassi and Peru's Jaime Izaga, was suspended by darkness after the two players split the first 10 games. It will resume Saturday morning prior to the scheduled doubles match.

Jordan, Bulls reach agreement

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls reportedly have reached agreement on a new eight-year contract worth $28 million that would make the star guard the highest paid athlete in team sports.

But Bulls officials would not confirm the deal, described in Friday's Chicago Tribune, and Jordan said he didn't know if his agent and attorney had negotiated a new pact.

The Tribune reported that the tentative agreement would pay Jordan an average yearly income of $3.5 million over the life of the contract. If the contract takes effect, Jordan would surpass New York Knicks center Patrick Ewing as the highest-paid player in professional team sports.

Holyfield out to unify title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Unbeaten Evander Holyfield attempts to unify a title he doesn't intend to keep when he faces World Boxing Council cruiserweight champion Carlos DeLeon Saturday night for the undisputed cruiserweight title.

Holyfield, who holds the International Boxing Federation and World Boxing Association versions of the 190-pound crown, is fighting in the division for the last time before moving to the heavyweight ranks for what he hopes will be an eventual big-money fight against champion Mike Tyson.

NBA suspends pair

NEW YORK — James Donaldson of the Dallas Mavericks and Mark West of the Phoenix Suns were suspended for one game and fined $4,000 each Friday for fighting during an NBA game.

The players exchanged punches after jostling for position under the Dallas basket during the Mavericks' 119-93 victory over the Suns last Wednesday.

"We do not accept the apology given by former Governor Happy Chandler. He had to be influenced by someone else (Governor Wallace Wilkinson)," said Steve Taylor, one of the student leaders of the protest. "We felt he could have come to us and spoke from his own heart."

Devils confident of victory against Islanders

By The Associated Press

After winning their first playoff game ever, the New Jersey Devils are confident they can pull off another first — making the second round of the NHL playoffs.

The Devils return home to Byrne Arena Saturday, where they will try to take a 2-1 lead in their opening-round series against the New York Islanders.

"We have the home-ice advantage now," Devils Coach Jim Schoenfeld said. "It means we have a real good chance of winning the series."

New Jersey evened the best-of-seven series Thursday night with a 3-2 victory over the Islanders at Nassau Coliseum. The franchise had won there only once before in 40 games.

"We're breaking a lot of barriers this year, and this is just another one of them," goaltender Bob Sauve said. "When the barriers start falling, they keep falling."

The sites will also switch in the other opening-round series Saturday night — Washington at Philadelphia, Montreal at Hartford, Boston at Buffalo, Detroit at Toronto, St. Louis at Chicago, Edmonton at Winnipeg and Calgary at Los Angeles. Montreal, Boston, St. Louis, Edmonton and Calgary lead their series 2-0, while the others are tied at 1-1.

Rookie Sean Burke helped the Devils clinch their playoff spot with sensational goaltending down the stretch. But Schoenfeld decided to rest him Thursday night and go with Sauve, who responded with 24 saves.

"It's too much to ask one guy to carry the load," Schoenfeld said. "But I didn't put the guy (Sauve) in just to rest Burke. I put him in to win. It could have backfired, but you have to go with your instincts."

Despite the loss in Game 2, the Islanders remain confident.

"We won't fall apart because of one loss," defenseman Ken Morrow said. "We've been through enough to know that one game doesn't turn a series around."

Montreal at Hartford: Rookie Gilles Thibaudeau figures to see more action in this Adams Division series, and with more advance notice.

Thibaudeau, called up from the minors six weeks ago, was added to the lineup Thursday night because Shayne Corson sprained his knee in Game 1. He learned about his assignment earlier in the day from Coach Jean Perron, and scored two goals to lead the Canadiens to a 7-3 victory.

"All he said was 'Be ready,'" Thibaudeau said. "You don't need an explanation for something like that."

Washington at Philadelphia: The Capitals will be ready to again capitalize on the wandering tactics of Flyers goalie Ron Hextall in their Patrick Division series. Peter Sundstrom scored the deciding goal in Washington's 5-3 victory after checking Hextall behind the Flyers' net.

Hextall likes to leave the goal crease to chase the puck. The Capitals are determined to make him pay for his aggressive style.

"If he's going to play like a third defenseman, then you've got to treat him like a third defenseman," Sundstrom said. "If you get a chance to bump him, then you bump him. If he wants to play like that then he has to suffer the consequences."

Edmonton at Winnipeg: Craig Simpson concedes his game-winning goal for the Oilers in Game 2 was "a pretty lucky play."

A rebound deflected off Simpson's knee with 65 seconds left to give Edmonton a 3-2 victory over the Jets in their Smythe Division series.

Calgary at Los Angeles: Defenseman Gary Suter had three assists and an empty-net goal as the Flames beat the Kings 6-4 in Game 2 of their Smythe series.

Suter is tied for the playoff scoring lead with seven points. He ended the regular season on a 16-game point-scoring streak, during which he had eight goals and 17 assists.

"I've never had a roll like this," Suter said. "It's been unreal."

Boston at Buffalo: Rookie Bruce Shoebottom scored his first NHL goal as the Bruins beat the Sabres 4-1 in Game 2 of their Adams series.

Three of Boston's goals were scored by rookies, two of them defensemen. In the Bruins opening-game victory, defensemen scored four goals and rookies had two.

"I'm happy with the performance of everybody," Bruins Coach Terry O'Reilly said.

Detroit at Toronto: Toronto, which had the second-worst record in the NHL during the regular season, split the opening two games in Detroit with the division champion Red Wings.

"They've got to figure this was a successful road trip," Detroit center John Chabot said after the Red Wings' 6-2 victory Thursday night. "I'm sure they're satisfied with a split. They play well at home, but we have to win one there. It might as well be right away."

The Maple Leafs were 3-0-1 at home against Detroit this season.

St. Louis at Chicago: The Blues have managed to shut down high-scoring Chicago center Denis Savard in the first two games of their Norris series.

Savard, who had 131 points during the regular season, was held to one shot during the Blues' 3-2 victory in Game 2. St. Louis Coach Jacques Martin said veteran center Rick Meagher has done a great defensive job on Savard.

"In order for us to win the series, we have to shut down Savard," Martin said.

MCC triumphs

The Manchester Community College baseball team spotted visiting Tunxis Community College a 1-0 lead in the first inning. After that, the Cougars weren't gracious hosts as they ran off 13 unanswered runs to post an easy 13-1 win Friday afternoon at Cougar field.

MCC is now 2-1 and will entertain Avery Point in a double-header today beginning at noon. Tunxis drops to 1-6.

Steve Criscuolo led MCC with a 3-for-5 performance while Chuck Petchark had three RBIs, including a home run. The game was called after 7 1/2 innings due to cold and darkness.

Troy Thornton notched his second win for the Cougars. He went five innings, giving up two hits, striking out six, and walking three. Roberto Cruz gained the save with six strikeouts in three frames pitched.

Tunxis committed six errors while MCC had none.

East softball bests MHS

H.S. Roundup

The bats were overly silent at Fitzgerald Field Friday afternoon as East Catholic High took advantage of mistake-prone Manchester High to annex a 7-3 decision in non-conference girls' softball action.

This was the first time the crosstown schools had met in regular-season action. It was the '88 debut for the Indians while the Eagles, who were blanked Thursday by South Windsor (9-0), are now 1-1.

East is back in action Monday at 3:30 at Robertson Park against St. Thomas Aquinas while Manchester resumes play Tuesday at Windham High.

Manchester collected only two hits — both bunt singles — while East managed just four hits. But the Eagles took advantage of Manchester's porous defense.

It was 2-2 going into the bottom of the fifth inning where East scored five times, taking advantage of five of Manchester's eight errors. "It was a disastrous inning," Manchester Coach Mary Faignant said. "They had a double (by Brenda Bailey) and a bunt single later on but we shouldn't have been (still in the inning)."

Junior Sue Concannon, in relief of starter Krista Wisniewski, was the winning pitcher for East. She struck out eight.

"I was definitely pleased with the way Sue came back today after yesterday," East Coach Jay McConville said. "We needed it (the win) after yesterday. It meant a lot to the girls. This is the first time in my 12 years we've had them on the schedule."

Junior Maura McPadden paced East with two hits and scored two runs while senior Beth Leslie also played well for East.

"She (Concannon) was a strong pitcher but we made her look good," Faignant said. Lisa Moriconi, who struck out three, took the loss for Manchester.

caro said. "He really pounded the ball. Obviously, he's got some power."

Leading 7-1, Cheney exploded for nine runs in the fifth after Calla Rodriguez replaced Colon on the mound. The Beavers sent 13 men to the plate, had seven hits (including four doubles, a walk, a wild pitch, and three Falcon errors). Krone and Junior Ray Meneses each knocked in two runs during the frame while senior Mike Main added an RBI-single. Prince Tech's Sam Alejandro dropped a pop which allowed two more Beaver runs to come across. Eddie Ortiz relieved Rodriguez and ended the frame.

"We had started to hit the other guy (Colon). Then, one thing just seemed to lead to another," Baccaro said of the nine-run inning. Main chipped in with two hits for Cheney. Allen and Krone pitched the sixth and seventh frames, respectively, for the Beavers. Prince had a total of four hits.

Baccaro hopes these offensive exploits last for a while at Cheney.

TECH AN EASY WINNER

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

For a team entering the scholastic campaign with several offensive question marks, the Cheney Tech baseball team received a solid boost of confidence in its season opener Friday afternoon against non-conference foe Prince Tech.

The homestanding Beavers blew this game wide open with a nine-run outburst in the fifth inning and registered a convincing 16-3 victory over the Falcons.

Cheney, 1-0, will now travel to Colchester on Tuesday to take on Charter Oak Conference rival Bacon Academy at 3:30 p.m.

Senior Jim Krone (3-for-3, four runs scored, four RBIs) and junior Don Sauer (3-for-4, 2 RBIs) were the hitting stars for the Beavers while senior right-hander Glenn Parent took the mound decision. Parent went five innings, allowed two hits, struck out three, and walked none.

"I was very happy today," Cheney Coach Bill Baccaro said. "I think Glenn did what he had to do. He got on top of the batters. They (Prince Tech) earned what they got."

The Beavers utilized six Falcon miscues while committing only one themselves. Sauer played his first varsity game behind the plate and did a splendid job. "He (Sauer) did a great job," Baccaro lauded. "He's worked hard. We've been working hard on pitching and defense."

A fine example of the Beaver defense came in the fourth inning when Cheney shortstop Pat Maguire went deep in the hole to track down a grounder by Luis Velasquez. Maguire turned and threw a powerful strike to first baseman Jeff Allen for the out. "Maguire made a major league throw," Baccaro said.

Parent lofted a sacrifice fly to deep left to give Cheney a 1-0 lead after one inning and Sauer rocketed a two-run double to left in the second and the lead was 3-0. In the third frame, after a sacrifice fly off the bat of junior Bob Bidwell produced the fourth Beaver run, Krone blasted a two-run homer over the left field fence off starting and losing pitcher Julio Colon. Cheney now led, 6-0.

"Krone had a big day," Bac-
