O'Neill admits tax hikes may be over $600 million

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill acknowledged Friday that the state will need hundreds of millions of dollars in new and increased taxes to balance next year's budget, but he insisted that taxpayers would prefer that to crippling cuts in state programs. Asked by reporters how taxpayers would react to his reported plans to call for $600 million to $700 million in increased taxes, the governor said: "Certainly no one wants to pay more taxes than they presently are paying... but there's also the responsibility of running government. If people want the services provided, they have to pay for the requesting of them to do."

Two-year budget plan gaining new support

HARTFORD (AP) — State Senate leaders of both parties appear to agree on at least one matter this session: the wisdom of returning Connecticut to a two-year budget cycle to provide greater fiscal accountability and planning. Although reverting to a biennial budget is far from a new idea, it appears to have more support than usual this session, when lawmakers are grappling with a projected budget shortfall in 1989-90 of $882 million. Three proposals — two sponsored by influential Democrats and one by Republicans — have been filed.

Mall

For comment Friday evening, DEP officials were also unavailable for comment. In its complaint, the Mall at Buckland Hills Partnership charges that the DEP failed to show that inland wetlands and watercourses were altered, destroyed or polluted because of site work. The DEP on Oct. 13 investigated measures at the site as a result of a complaint from Cathy Lankford of 853 Tolland Turnpike, who said runoff from the mall site was turning a pond near her home red. Attempts by the developers to stop the runoff were unsuccessful. An inspection by the town also revealed some erosion control problems at the site, but a Dec. 7 inspection showed that improvements had been made. The DEP also did not show that the installation and maintenance of erosion control devices were inadequate, the complaint said. Armstrong has said that the company has tried to maintain devices and correct problems, but the site is hilly, making it difficult to control runoff.

Bush says pay hike 'overdue' for Congress

WASHINGTON — President Bush defended a widely criticized pay raise for Congress on Friday as unquestionably "overdue." Making his debut in the fast-paced but easygoing news conference, Bush also said "prudence is the order of the day" in dealing with the Soviet Union. Rounding out the first week of his presidency, Bush put himself at arms length with a controversial plan from the Treasury Department to rescue the beleaguered savings and loan industry by imposing a fee on savings accounts. He called it "an option, not a proposal."

Road project foes undecided about lawsuit

Manchester Herald
The head of a group opposed to the reconstruction of Main Street says opponents would be doing the town a "real favor" by filing a lawsuit to block the project. But Dr. Robert H. Fish, a Main Street dentist and head of ADAPT, a Downtown Association to Preserve the Thoroughfare, said on Friday that group members have not decided yet whether to sue. Utilities District is working with the town and Eighth District to correct problems at the site resulting from the installation of sewer lines without sewer permits and construction of water and sewer lines without town inspection. The town and District have issued stop-work orders to begin work only after tests of the utilities required by both governments are complete.

Heart administrator dies awaiting heart

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A man who helped develop New Mexico's only heart transplant program died Friday after his own heart was stricken suddenly by a viral infection and a donor organ could not be found, officials said. Robert Shafer, 46, assistant administrator for medical staff affairs at Presbyterian Hospital, suffered the attack last week, and his condition rapidly deteriorated. "The feeling of helplessness gripped us all," said hospital spokeswoman Lynn Vilella. "The donor program has done everything humanly possible." Shafer left work Jan. 19 with flu-like symptoms and was admitted to the hospital Monday. He was put on a list of transplant candidates Tuesday and placed on a heart-lung machine Wednesday after his heart failed. On Friday morning, his family requested he be taken off the machine after all his organs began to deteriorate, she said. Shafer, an administrator at the hospital for 20 years, oversaw its heart program when it began in 1989 and helped direct its development since then, Ms. Vilella said. The program began transplants in 1986 and since then has done 32, plus one heart-lung transplant.

Geography ace didn't even like subject

By Maureen Leavitt
Manchester Herald

It took 45 minutes of head-to-head competition to determine the local winner of the National Geography Bee at the Keeney Street Elementary School Friday.

In the end, it was sixth-grader Jeff Damon, 11, of 79 Saddle Hill Road, who emerged the winner over fifth-grader Matt Adinolfi, 10, of 91 Ralph Road. The deciding question asked on what continent the country of Somalia is found.

The answer is Africa. Damon gave the correct response after Adinolfi could not answer.

To clinch the win, Damon also correctly answered a question about the scale to which items on a map are drawn.

The competition was developed by the National Geographic Society in response to a growing concern about the lack of geographic knowledge among youngsters in the United States.

Francis J. Amara, Keeney School principal, played mediator, asking questions furnished by the National Geographic Society, and quieting the sometimes anxious crowd of fifth-and sixth-graders who were cheering their peers on.

The contest began Thursday with 12 competitors: six fifth-graders and six sixth-graders, who answered questions on the broad subject of geography. The field of contestants was narrowed down to Adinolfi and Damon.

JoAn Troncoso, a teacher for the gifted and talented at Keeney Street and Nathan Hale schools, coordinated the Bee. She said Thursday's competition went on for about an hour, when she and Amara decided to continue it Friday.

"They were doing so well yesterday but they were getting tired so we decided to continue today," Troncoso said.

Amara read 42 difficult questions to the two pupils Friday. Troncoso said the questions were meant to increase in difficulty as the contest proceeded. In fact, 10 questions went by without a correct answer from the competitors.

Sometimes the seemingly easy questions stump both students ever. Amara asked both students what country was home to the platypus. When neither could answer, he turned to the audience, most of who shouted simultaneously, "Australia!"

Damon received a book on the natural wonders of North America, and an inflatable globe for his victory. Adinolfi received a book on Geography for being the runner-up.

Damon now has a chance to participate in the state finals and possibly the national finals held in Washington in May. The first-, second- and third-place winners of the national finals can win substantial college scholarships.

But first, Troncoso said Damon must take a written geography test next Monday, which will be sent to Washington where it will be scored with all finalists across the nation. The top scorer in each state will compete in Washington.

Both youngsters said they were surprised they made it to the school's final competition.

Damon said geography was never one of his favorite subjects. "I didn't really like it at all. It just seemed kind of boring to me," Damon said.

Adinolfi said he went home from school Thursday night and studied his encyclopedias, while Damon said he studied from a globe he has.

Amara heartily congratulated the pair and joked about the difficulty of the questions.

"Are your brains tired? My brain was tired just from asking the questions," Amara said.

Amara praised the contest for stimulating pupils to learn more about geography. In that respect, the contest had already achieved its objective.

"If anyone goes home and looks at a map, it's worth it," Amara said.

Investigators question men on burglaries

By Maureen Leavitt
Manchester Herald

Two Hartford men charged Thursday in connection with five burglaries in the South End of Manchester are also being questioned in connection with burglaries in surrounding communities, police said.

State police and police from surrounding communities are investigating whether the men have any links to the other robberies, according to Manchester police. No details were available on the number of other robberies and the communities in which they occurred.

Jose M. Robles, 24, of 359 Zion St., and his brother, Luis Garcia, 18, of 533 Ann St., were arrested by Manchester police Thursday and charged with first-degree conspiracy to commit burglary in connection with the burglaries in the South End of town. Police said the car the two were driving fit the description of a vehicle seen in the area at the time of one of the burglaries.

Robles also was charged with carrying a dangerous weapon, criminal use of a revolver and possession of burglar's tools.

Robles is being held on $10,000 bond in Hartford Correction Center and is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court Feb. 3. Garcia was released on $2,500 bond and is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court Feb. 1.

The two were arrested in connection with burglaries at homes on South Main and Spring streets during this week.

Police began surveilling the South End of town during the day this week after two burglaries occurred on South Main Street, two on Spring Street, and one on Dartmouth Street, since last Saturday, police said.

It is the same area where a rash of burglaries occurred last summer, according to Gary Wood, spokesman for the Manchester Police Department.

After the two men were arrested last night, police obtained a search warrant for their homes and found a .38 caliber handgun, which was reported stolen from one of the homes, and several items like stereos, VCRs, televisions and microwaves, the types of items reported as stolen from the homes, Wood said.

An estimate of the value of all stolen items in the South End incidents is not yet available, Wood said.

When police searched the vehicle the suspects were driving, they said they discovered a large silver ingot and four small silver ingots on the front seats of the car. The ingots — bars of metal with some value — were in clear plastic envelopes, police said.

One of the ingots was inscribed with initials which did not match the initials of the suspects, according to police.

Police said they also found a revolver and several other items reported stolen from several households in the trunk of the suspect's car.

SAT exams set today

The Scholastic Aptitude Test will be held at Manchester High School today.

Anyone registered to take the examination should report to the school cafeteria at 7:50 a.m. with admission ticket and positive identification such as a driver's license, passport or photo identification card.

No one will be admitted without proper identification.

Parking will be in the student parking lot adjacent to Brookfield Street.

Developers get no penalties for razing century-old home

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — Town officials have decided not to levy penalties against developers who demolished a century-old house on High Street without a permit and later began to build at the site without approval.

The 19th century farmhouse was destroyed by employees for Lawrence Brophy, John Ahern and Frank Perrotti Jr. last week without a permit, according to town officials. On Monday, Building Inspector Robert Bach issued a stop-work order to the developers after discovering that footings for a new foundation had been installed at the site without a permit.

Bach and Sarah England, a town intern working on zoning matters, met Friday with the developers and their attorney, Robert Letze of New Haven. England said it was decided that no penalties would be levied.

"They did take out a demolition permit. It was after the fact, but they did," England said.

She said the developers would remove the foundation footing that had been put in place without a permit and they would submit a new building plan next week.

Town Manager John Eliesesser said prior to the Friday meeting that the session was called "to outline exactly what they need to begin work again and clear the air."

Martin Staur, the architect for the project, said from the developers' West Haven office Thursday he had no knowledge of the plan to demolish the house.

"As an architect, I am aware a demolition permit is needed to demolish a building but I had no participation in this," said Staur.

Frank Purvis of Columbia was acting town building official until Jan. 13. The demolition probably took place around Jan. 16. Each became building inspector on Jan. 17.

Purvis said he told Brophy and Staur on Jan. 13 that the demolition permit was needed. He said he advised the two to seek the permit when Bach started.

"I told them to come back when the new building official began," said Purvis.

Bach confirmed the developers have since received the demolition permit.

England said the developers also violated zoning regulations by putting the foundation footings in less than 50 feet from the front of the street.

The incident angered resident Judy LeDay. She said she spoke with Rosa Johnson Highter, whose family had once owned the farm. LeDay has asked the Town Council to propose an ordinance requiring the posting of intentions to demolish old houses.

The house was built for Francis Spaulding in the 1860s. In 1900, Frank Spaulding turned it into a dairy farm. Eventually it was left to Highter, Spaulding's niece. She said she sold it to the Abbot family in the 1940s.

After the Abbot couple died, the farm went into probate court proceedings and was sold in 1988 to Brophy, Ahern and Perrotti for $240,000, according to local realtor Mercedes Wells, whose husband Thomas also a realtor, handled the transaction.

Spy ends 5-day hunger fast

MARION, Ill. (AP) — Convicted spy Jonathan Pollard ate Friday, a federal prison official said, but Pollard's father-in-law said he had no reason to believe Pollard would end a five-day hunger strike early.

Pollard began a five-day fast Monday to protest what he considered mistreatment of his ailing and imprisoned wife, said his father-in-law, Bernard Henderson. The fast was to end today.

On Monday, Henderson said Pollard would take only water for the next five days to protest his wife's treatment, adding that prison officials had threatened to force-feed Pollard if he embarked on an indefinite hunger strike.

Gregory Bogdan, a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, said Mrs. Pollard was moved "for medical reasons" and denied that she was being mistreated. He said privacy rules prevented him from commenting on specific aspects of Mrs. Pollard's medical treatment.

At that time, Davis offered extensive information about the inmate's condition.

Foundation chief resigns

STORRS (AP) — The president of the UConn Foundation, a private fund-raising corporation at the center of a controversy last year over use of money it raised for the University of Connecticut Health Center, resigned Friday.

New Haven to ax housing

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A blighted housing project will be destroyed and apartments scattered throughout the city to replace the lost units, under plans unveiled by New Haven and federal officials.

"High-rises won't work for single moms with children and that's what we used them for," said Douglas Roe, a Yale University political science professor who chaired the New Haven Poverty Commission five years ago.

HARTFORD (AP) — The state Bond Commission on Friday approved $4 million for the state's down payment assistance program for first-time homebuyers.

BETHANY (AP) — A New Haven woman has been charged with negligent homicide in connection with a fiery crash on Interstate 91 in November that killed a 47-year-old West Haven man, state police said.

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — A school maintenance department carpenter, accused of misusing city materials and labor to remodel a bar he was buying, was fired Thursday, Bridgeport officials said.

Two held for making bombs

NEW YORK (AP) — Two men were arrested Friday on charges they made the pipe bomb an animal rights activist is accused of planting outside a surgical supply company.

They were identified as the woman, Fran Stephanie Trutt, who is accused of planting the device in the parking lot of U.S. Surgical Corp. in Norwalk, Conn., on Nov. 11, authorities said. The bomb was not detonated.

The remote-controlled, nail-packed explosive device was delivered to Trutt in November for $450, authorities said.

Police and FBI agents arrested Darrell Benvenuto, 20, and Marc Anagnos, 21, at their homes in Queens, said Joseph Valiquette, an FBI spokesman.

Benvenuto, a student at Queens College, and Anagnos, a bank teller, were charged with illegally making and selling explosive devices. The charge carries up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

They apparently had no connection to U.S. Surgical or any animal rights groups, authorities said.

Trutt, 33, is being held on $300,000 bail on an attempted murder charge. Authorities said she opposed the company's use of live, anesthetized dogs to demonstrate surgical staplers, which close incisions without stitches.

The complaint said Anagnos told investigators that he and Benvenuto made three bombs for Trutt in 1987, as well as a pipe gun, a silencer and ammunition for Trutt, who said she wanted to use them to kill a former friend.

Trutt paid undisclosed amounts of money for the merchandise, the federal complaint said.

teller, were charged with illegally making and selling explosive devices. The charge carries up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Cops say wife killed husband

MIDDLEBURY (AP) — A woman was readmitted to a hospital psychiatric unit after she was presented in court on a charge that she killed her husband, whom she claimed pressured her to have sexual relations with several men while he watched.

Diane L. Bartholomew, 42, surrendered to police on Thursday and was charged with the murder of her husband, Harry Bartholomew, also 42, on Jan. 19.

Bartholomew was found in his bed about 3 a.m., shot in the right temple.

Mrs. Bartholomew told police that three days before the shooting, her husband asked her to have sexual relations with other men as he watched, according to court papers.

She found a tape her husband made of her talking about a sexual relationship she had with another man and a copy of a magazine called Local Swingers, which he had used to find her a partner, court papers say.

"She believed the tape and things her husband asked her to do could be used against her in a divorce proceeding," says the affidavit police prepared to obtain an arrest warrant.

After appearing in court Thursday, Mrs. Bartholomew was returned to the psychiatric ward of Waterbury Hospital after her oldest daughter, Melinda Kindulas of Waterbury, posted $150,000 bail. Mrs. Bartholomew had been staying at the hospital since the shooting.

Mary Bartholomew, one of the couple's three daughters, told police she saw her parents in bed around 11:30 p.m. on Jan. 18 when she took her father a glass of water.

She told police she went to bed around 1 a.m. Later, she said, her mother woke her up, saying, "I killed your father. I don't know how. I thought I was dreaming."

The affidavit says double-gauge shotgun was lying against the bed and blood was splattered on the floor and walls.

Court records show that Mrs. Bartholomew called police at 2:48 a.m.

"I don't know what happened. I don't know what happened. I don't know what I did, but my husband, I think I shot him," she said, according to court papers.

She gave police the wrong address, the street in Naugatuck where the family lived last summer, but a man called back about 10 minutes later to report the shooting, according to court papers.

State's Attorney John Connelly said the man isn't a suspect in the shooting.

Harry Bartholomew was a technician at M.J. Daly and Sons in Waterbury. The family moved to Middlebury last year after living in Naugatuck for 15 years.

Mrs. Bartholomew is scheduled to appear again in court Feb. 6.

SENTENCED — Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr., wearing cap, arrives at U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Va., Friday, where he was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

LaRouche gets 15-year term

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Defiantly declaring his innocence, political cult leader Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr. was sentenced to 15 years in prison Friday for scheming to defraud the Internal Revenue Service and deliberately defaulting on more than $30 million in loans from his supporters.

Chief U.S. District Judge Albert V. Bryan also imposed lesser prison terms and fines on six LaRouche aides who were convicted last month on 35 counts of mail fraud and conspiracy for their roles in the fund-raising effort.

While Bryan was handing down the sentences in Alexandria, government prosecutors dropped all charges in a related case against LaRouche, six associates and five political organizations in U.S. District Court in Boston.

That case, involving charges that LaRouche's 1984 presidential campaign had raised more than $2 million through credit card and loan fraud, ended in a mistrial last May. A new trial had been slated to begin Feb. 23.

In a petition filed in the Boston court Friday, the U.S. attorney's office said the criminal convictions against LaRouche and others on Dec. 16 had served the government's interests "from the point of view of both deterrence and punishment," and that further prosecution was not warranted.

While about 60 followers sang, chanted and picketed outside the Alexandria courthouse, LaRouche told Bryan in a presentencing appeal that he was the victim of a government campaign to "eliminate me from the political scene."

But the judge scoffed at such claims by LaRouche, a three-time fringe candidate for president and the other defendants. "I reject that as errant nonsense," Bryan said.

Undaunted, LaRouche said "the vital interests of the United States have been put in jeopardy" by his trial and conviction, and that "it is time for this evil and reckless prosecution to be brought to a halt before further damage is done."

Snow snags search in Utah for remains of Bundy victim

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Searchers used metal detectors Friday to scour snow-covered sagebrush for the remains of a 15-year-old girl whose grave Ted Bundy pinpointed 45 minutes before he died in the electric chair.

The search for Sue Curtis, who vanished in 1975 from the Brigham Young University campus in Provo, was focused on three dirt roads about 10 miles southeast of the city of Price, said Sheriff's Chief Deputy Jerry Cowan.

Searchers used metal detectors because the victim wore braces and in case she was wearing jewelry.

The detectors picked up faint signals, said Joe Ward, a member of the search team, but the frozen ground covered with 10 inches of snow was too hard to dig.

"The search will continue until the remains are found, but until the snow melts it is doubtful we will have any success," said Sheriff Barry Bryner.

Ward also said he had remembered hunting in the area years ago — possibly around the time of Curtis' disappearance — and finding a bloody pair of women's underwear. He said he didn't think much of it at the time, but recalled it Friday and led searchers to a spot about a quarter-mile from a dirt road.

In the days before his execution Tuesday for the murder of a 12-year-old Florida girl, Bundy confessed to at least 23 murders interviewed Bundy. Police probably will decide Monday whether to search for the body, he said.

The FBI said Friday that law-enforcement agents are being invited to a meeting in Quantico, Va., in of clearing up murders Bundy is believed to have committed.

"It's easier to answer if everybody is in one place so we can discuss the peculiarities in each case," said Terry Green, an FBI major case specialist.

Using a page torn from an atlas, he directed investigators to look for Curtis' grave between Price and Green River. "About 200 yards in on the dirt road... and to the left, maybe 50 yards, there's the remains of a young woman who disappeared from Brigham Young University in June of 1975," he said.

In his tape-recorded, eleventh-hour confession, Bundy also said he dumped another body into the Colorado River, identifying the victim as Denise Oliverson, 24, who was last seen riding her bicycle in April 1975 near her home in Grand Junction, Colo.

Sgt. Greg Kuhn of the Grand Junction Police Department said that officials will listen to the tape and talk to the investigator who interviewed Bundy. Police probably will decide Monday whether to search for the body, he said.

In Idaho, authorities said they do not have enough information to search for bodies in two killings Bundy said he committed.

Russ Reneau, the Idaho investigator who interviewed Bundy over the weekend in Florida, said Bundy confessed to killing Lynette Culver, 12, and throwing her body into a river but could not provide an exact location.

Reneau said Bundy also confessed that in 1974 he picked up a young woman at a freeway exit near Boise, killed her and threw the body into a river. The victim's identity is unknown.

Meanwhile, authorities in Wayne County, Utah, planned to scout a site 10 miles east of Capital Reef National Park, where Bundy claimed to have buried the body of Nancy Wilcox, 17, of Holladay, who disappeared Oct. 2, 1974.

A rancher told authorities that in 1974, he saw a man in a suit standing along the road near the area Bundy detailed, and when he drove by the man turned his back.

Dead man got parking tickets

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A meter maid discovered a dead man Friday slumped in a parked van near City Hall, where it had collected several parking tickets since the man's death days before, police said.

The man was slumped against the door in the front passenger's seat, with some medication on the seat next to him, Sgt. Steve Pacheco said. There was no sign of foul play, and the man, who was in his 60s, was the registered owner of the van.

The man, whose identity was withheld until relatives were notified, had been dead several days, Pacheco said. On the van's windshield were parking tickets dating back to Tuesday.

Lt. Charles Owen said an internal inquiry of methods and procedures would be conducted.

"Again, the meter maids are not commissioned police officers," Owen said. "They are civilians and that too will be considered. Outside of being a trained observer, we don't really expect them to make any type of investigations."

Army grounds choppers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army on Friday ordered its fleet of CH-47 Chinook helicopters temporarily grounded for the one-time installation of safety equipment that service officials say will help protect flight control tubes against fire.

The Army said the "safety of flight message" ordering the grounding stemmed from a continuing review of accidents involving the twin-rotor chopper over the past year.

In two of those accidents that resulted in loss of life, a fire was able to spread from the rear of the aircraft to the front along a hollow tunnel that runs the length of the fuselage carrying aluminum "control tubes."

The control tubes provide the linkage between the flight controls in the cockpit and the helicopter's two rotor blades.

Black senators protest 'Dixie'

ATLANTA (AP) — Three black legislators abruptly left the Senate chamber Friday when a beauty queen sang "Dixie."

Sens. Arthur Langford, Horace Tate and Gary Parker quickly filed out a side door at the beginning of the performance by Lisa Ray, niece of Sen. Walter Ray and winner of the Miss Georgia Sweet Potato Queen contest.

Ray said there was no political significance to his niece's choice of songs. "It was just the song she sang in the talent contest," he said.

North trial starts Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The judge for Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial, now set to begin Tuesday, said Friday that judicial authority to force President Bush or former President Reagan to testify is "indisputable."

U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell delayed making a decision until Monday on North's subpoenas for presidential testimony and for presidential records, including Reagan's personal diary.

Government lawyers argued in court Friday that efforts by former White House aide North to bring Reagan or Bush to the stand should be rejected. Gesell also heard arguments from lawyers for the House seeking to quash portions of subpoenas from North seeking a wide range of documents from three House committees.

Meanwhile, an interagency administration task force of intelligence experts apparently cleared the way for North's trial to begin, concluding that classified documents to be presented in the case don't pose a serious national security risk.

Chair fight led to shooting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police arrested a suspect Friday in the shooting of four high school students that a victim said erupted because of an argument over a chair in the school cafeteria.

Rodney Reardon, 18, of Washington, was charged with four counts of assault with intent to murder in the incident that occurred Thursday as shots were fired into a crowd of students outside Woodrow Wilson High School in an affluent Washington neighborhood.

Police said the search for additional suspects was continuing. Lázario Santa Cruz, 16, a student wounded in the shooting, said a non-student who had taken a friend's seat during the lunch break challenged the friend to a fight.

Santa Cruz said in an interview with WUSA-TV that the Wilson students were ambushed in front of the building after school.

"Some boys turned around and started shooting at us — just started shooting into the crowd," he said. "The first shot hit me right in my face, and I was just laying down, and they were just shooting people in their legs."

MICHAEL JACKSON ... no more tours

His last tour, says Jackson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Jackson, the androgynous whirlwind of pop music, is packing away his traveling clothes and parking the tour bus.

The reclusive creator of the moonwalk has said through surrogates that his 16-month international "Bad" tour, set to wind up Friday night with a sold-out show at the Sports Arena, will be his last.

The 30-year-old Jackson, celebrated as widely for his eccentricities as for his stunningly original songs, vocals and choreography, intends to keep recording and is considering film roles.

"I'm not saying he's not going to perform live again, but I don't think we'll ever go out on tour like this," said Jackson's manager, Frank Dileo.

Jackson, who hasn't granted an interview since 1984, is said to be interested in movies because of the transience of live performance.

"He wants a medium that is more permanent," said concert spokeswoman Maureen O'Connor. "You do a show and after you do it, it's over."

Friday night's concert comes exactly five years after the singer's hair caught fire while he made a Pepsi commercial at the nearby Shrine Auditorium. The accident, caused by an errant smoke bomb, caused scalp burns.

The concert was the last of four scheduled this month in Los Angeles to make up for December dates Jackson canceled because of strained vocal cords, apparently brought on by the rigors of the tour.

Catapulted into the public eye at age 5 with the Jackson Five family pop group, Jackson has left his brothers behind to become a one-man phenomenon.

Fans and the tabloid press breathlessly follow the eccentricities: his repeated cosmetic surgery, his menagerie of exotic pets, his failed attempt to buy the bones of "Elephant Man" John Merrick.

He won an unprecedented eight Grammy Awards for his "Thriller" album.

New guilty pleas in corruption case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two men pleaded guilty Friday to making illegal campaign contributions to members of Congress in the latest development in the government's wide-ranging investigation of Pentagon corruption.

Robert D. Barrett, a former executive at Unisys Corp., a giant computer company that does work for the Defense Department, and Joseph E. Hill, a consultant paid by Unisys, agreed to cooperate with prosecutors as part of the plea arrangement.

Also pleading guilty before U.S. District Judge Claude A. Hilton was Jack Sherman, a civilian purchasing official with the Marine Corps. Sherman, 52, admitted he accepted bribes in exchange for providing confidential information on pending contracts to consultants and companies.

The pleas are part of the federal government's two-year-old investigation into the Pentagon's $150-billion-a-year procurement practices. The case includes allegations that private consultants, hired by defense contractors, bribed Pentagon officials to obtain inside information that gave companies an edge in securing contracts.

Earlier this month, a federal grand jury here indicted a Navy employee, five other individuals and the defense contractor Tele-dyne Electronics on a variety of charges including conspiracy, racketeering and bribery. The same day, Hazeltine Corp. and five men pleaded guilty to a different set of charges.

Barrett, 55, pleaded guilty Friday to conspiracy to defraud the United States and to aiding and abetting in making false statements to the government. He could face up to 10 years in prison and a $500,000 fine.

The government charged that Barrett, who first worked for Unisys' predecessor, Sperry Corp., in the Washington suburbs, was involved in a complicated scheme in which $2,900 was funneled to the election campaign of former Rep. Bill Chappell, House defense appropriations subcommittee until his defeat last November.

Prosecutors said the contractor collected two undated checks of $1,000 each from two men and steered them to the "Bill Chappell Campaign Committee."

Federal election law stipulates that individuals may give $1,000 in general and primary campaigns, but corporations are prohibited from donating money.

Barrett "knew and believed" that the contributions were not from individuals but "had been made by Unisys Corp. in violation of the prohibition against corporate contributions," prosecutors rate contributions.

Chappell has repeatedly denied doing anything wrong while in Congress.

Hill, 76, of Mineola, N.Y., pleaded guilty to four misdemeanor counts of making political contributions in the name of another. He could face up to four years in prison and a fine of $400,000.

Mandela may be released

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government is holding talks with Nelson Mandela that could lead to his release from life imprisonment, a Cabinet minister said Friday.

In a statement carried by the independent South African Press Association, Minister of Information Stoffel van der Merwe said, "The situation that could lead to Mr. Mandela's release is being discussed with him, and it is being discussed in government circles."

But he said Mandela would not be freed "if this would lead to bloodshed" and denied the government was actually discussing conditions for the release.

Mandela, 70, South Africa's best-known activist and leader of the African National Congress, has been jailed for 26 years for sabotage and plotting to overthrow the government. The congress, which is banned, is the leading group fighting white minority rule.

Solidarity, government talk

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa and other Solidarity leaders met with officials Friday to begin a process they hope will make the union legal again and give it a voice in Poland's future.

They conferred in a secluded house in the woods of Magdalenka, a Warsaw suburb, to lay the ground work for more elaborate negotiations between the government and opposition on such topics as political and economic freedom and union pluralism.

The last category will address the future of Solidarity, which Walesa founded at the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk during the labor turmoil of August 1980.

Infant born during fire dies

PASCAGOULA, Miss. (AP) — A baby born during a blaze was killed along with the parents Friday in the fire that gutted their mobile home, the coroner said.

The bodies of Mitchell and Terry Pierce, both 27, were found in a bedroom, the newborn beside the mother, said Jackson County Coroner David Miller.

The couple's 21-month-old child, James Dillon Pierce, was rescued by his grandfather, who lived next door, and was in critical condition at the University of South Alabama Medical Center, authorities said.

Relatives said that Mrs. Pierce had been expecting her second child any day and that her husband, a fisherman, had been working in Alaska but had returned home to await the birth.

The cause of the fire was under investigation.

Embassy staff locking up; 'psychological warfare' hit

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The few remaining staff members locked the U.S. Embassy's gray steel doors Friday and plan to evacuate before the Red Army leaves the ragtag Afghan army to a showdown with Moslem guerrillas.

One Western diplomat said the decision to close the embassy was a surprise and indicated lack of confidence in both the Soviet-sponsored government and the insurgents, to whom the United States provides arms.

A Soviet official called it "psychological warfare" intended to undermine the government and get other nations to do the same.

Britain and Japan announced Friday they also would shut their Kabul missions. France said its embassy would be closed "provisionally."

In Washington, President Bush said there was "uncertainty about what follows" the Soviet departure and the embassy was being closed to protect American lives.

When asked when the embassy would be formally closed, Jon D. Glassman, U.S. charge d'affaires, said: "That's not information we are giving out."

The State Department said Thursday the remaining Americans would leave in a few days. Dependents and all but 11 diplomats and security guards already had been evacuated.

A battle for Kabul, which is surrounded by insurgents, is expected after the last Soviet forces withdraw Feb. 15 under a U.N.-mediated agreement. The capital next to the state radio and across from secret police headquarters, both prime targets for the guerrillas.

A dispatch from Kabul by official Soviet news agency Tass said five rockets fired by "extremists from among the intrasigent opposition" hit residential areas of Kabul on Friday, killing a child and damaging several buildings.

Moslem guerrillas have rejected Soviet and government proposals for a political settlement. They began fighting after a communist coup 11 years ago and Soviet soldiers entered Afghanistan in December 1979.

An estimated 115,000 Soviet troops were here when the withdrawal began May 15 and the last 50,000 are to be gone by Feb. 15.

They leave behind a conscript Afghan army plagued by desertion, with compulsory service young men fleeing the country to avoid. Diplomats say the army has been driven to dragging teen-agers from their homes and pressing them into service; the military calls them volunteers.

U.N. officials said Friday in New York that Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar would not accept an invitation to visit Afghanistan before the Soviets are gone. President Najib had asked him to Kabul to explore ways of preventing more bloodshed after the departure.

Dmitri Yazov, the Soviet defense minister, was in Kabul and met with Najib on Friday, Tass, the official Soviet news agency, called the trip "a working visit."

Insurgents control the Panjshir Valley north of Kabul, through which the Salang Highway runs 250 miles north to the Soviet border.

Scared to death of death

By William A. Rusher

In an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association, doctors at the Medical College of Georgia argue that the warnings of the U.S. surgeon general, printed on every cigarette pack and in every cigarette advertisement, are ineffective in bringing home the dangers of smoking. Many smokers don't even notice the warnings; many who notice them don't read them; and even those who read them often can't remember what they say.

I find myself wondering, though, whether the tobacco industry's foes aren't making some highly gratuitous assumptions about human nature. Does it follow, as the night the day, that if everybody read and absorbed the surgeon general's warnings cigarette smoking in the United States would drop to zero, or something close to it?

However much Americans may disregard the specific warnings, there can't be many of us left to whom the fact that smoking is bad for you would come as news. Yet even Surgeon General C. Everett Koop admits that, in the 24 years since government warnings began in 1965, the percentage of adults who smoke has only declined from 46 to 39, or slightly over a quarter — a substantial reduction, to be sure, but far from sensational.

American women still second class

By Chuck Stone

Two Supreme Court decisions in the same week boldly highlight the persistent status of American women as second-class citizens: The court rejected a woman surgeon's appeal of a contempt charge that has kept her imprisoned since August 1987 (she had refused to permit her daughter's unsupervised visits with her ex-husband, also a surgeon).

On the controversy over a woman's right to abortion, the Supreme Court could uphold the veracity of Dr. Morgan's allegations, but the court stubbornly avoids it. Neither the Roe vs. Wade decision nor the Missouri law are based on scientific fact, but on the power of a judicial or legislative majority. Right-to-lifers, many of whom have become dangerously anti-life with their violent acts, contend that life begins at conception. That's possible. But, as my mother, my sisters, my wife and my daughters have all contended, only a woman has the right to make the choice about any growth inside her body.

Public comments by her judicial nemesis, D.C. Superior Court Judge Herbert Dixon, appear to reflect a deep personal animus toward Dr. Morgan. The results are the same as those when Susan B. Anthony, Gandhi and Martin Luther King Jr. were arrested for disobeying what they considered an unjust law. History vindicated them. One day, history will vindicate Dr. Morgan. Unarguably, the law must be obeyed. But history has been graced with courageous dissidents who suffered the consequences of their disobedience by obeying a higher moral law. Judge Dixon seems to be crippled

Boats and trucks hiding places for drugs

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — Anything that sails or drives into the United States, particularly from Central America or the Caribbean, is potential carrier of drugs.

When drug enforcement agents look at a boat or a truck, they don't see chrome or sails or tires. They see marijuana and cocaine. The El Paso Intelligence Center in Texas is a federal information-gathering agency that keeps tabs on the enemy in the war on drugs, the allies — various federal law enforcement agencies — count on El Paso to tell them what strategy the other side is using.

A confidential EPIC report, which we have seen, devotes many pages and pictures to the ways in which drugs are hidden on boats and trucks. Small sailboats might conceal drugs in their buoyancy compartments, as was the case with a boat named "Pam" that authorities stopped as it was being towed from Mexico into Arizona. Border agents tapped the sides of "Pam" and instead of hearing a hollow sound, they heard a dull thud. They drilled a hole and found marijuana where dead airspace was supposed to be.

Some sailors-traffickers use watertight boxes that they strap to the hulls of their boats below the waterline. The first to discover this method were authorities in Australia, who warned American drug enforcement agents to be on the lookout for the boxes. When it comes to trucks, marijuana traffickers favor 18-wheelers with false compartments. Inspectors use two techniques to beat dealers at this game — measuring and tapping. They measure interior and exterior walls of the truck to see if they are the same. And one inspector will tap on the outside wall of the truck, while another inspector touches the inside wall feeling for the resulting vibration. If there is no vibration, it's a sure bet that something is hidden between the inner and outer walls.

One of the key jobs of the agency is to approve the layout of mines before the excavation on them begins. But the agency's process for approving mines is hopelessly informal and lacks the internal controls to ensure that only safe mines get the green light.

The agency admits it has problems and is already hard at work correcting them. A committee has been formed to figure out the best way to nail the mine operators who repeatedly violate federal mine regulations.

When a worker is injured or killed on the job because of the criminal negligence of his or her employer, that employer should go to jail. Now the Justice Department has cleared the way to make that possible, and all it took was a letter, Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., wrote to the Justice Department asking if states could prosecute employers under state murder and manslaughter laws. The department said yes. The next step that Congress should take is to strengthen federal criminal penalties for occupational health and safety violations. They are crimes and deserve to be treated as such.

EACH DEPENDENT IS WORTH $1950

Each dependency exemption that you are able to claim on your 1988 tax return is equivalent to a $1,950 deduction. You are able to claim a dependency deduction on any individual that is related to you or is a member of your household and you have provided more than half of their support during the year.

Relationship - Your dependent can be a relative or a member of your household. The relative can be a linear descendant (father, son, grandson), relations by blood (brothers, cousins), relations by marriage (mother-in-law), and legally adopted children. If the person is not a relative, then that individual, for the entire year, must have made your home as his principal home.

Citizenship or residency - Your dependent must be a U.S. citizen or a resident of the U.S., Canada or Mexico.

Support - You must have furnished over one half of the total support of that person.

Joint Return - If the dependent is married, he or she cannot file a joint return with his or her spouse.

Gross Income - Your dependent's gross income must be less than $1,950. This rule does not apply to any child under the age of 19 or if the child is a full-time student.

If you are ever in doubt, consult your tax preparer.

Church has its centennial party
137 years old

By Nancy Pappas
Manchester Herald

The white church that's known far and wide as the Red Church is celebrating its 100th anniversary after 137 years on North Main Street.

That building, erected from red sandstone, gave rise to the nickname of the Red Church. But white siding covered the stone in 1960, so many who are new to the town never saw the structure in its original color.

The party this evening will bring together members, friends and former pastors of the church. It is one of the closing events of a year-long Centennial Celebration, which has involved a capital funds drive to refurbish the church building and its organ, among other things.

In addition, the church has been examining its place in its members' lives, and its role in the community at large, according to the Rev. Joe Milton, who has been pastor there since 1982.

Manchester was a far different community in 1851, when the Second Congregational Church was established in the north end of town.

The Union Mills, long closed and largely forgotten, was a major employer in the region. Apol's Opera House was a popular spot for diversion and culture. And churches functioned as community centers and social hubs for all those within walking distance.

The nearest congregational church was Center Church, close to two miles away. "People seemed to have thought that was too far to go to church," said Marion Taggart, a lifelong member of Second

Patrick Flynn/Manchester Herald

THE SECOND CENTURY — The Second Congregational Church on North Main Street is celebrating its centennial tonight with a party at the Manchester Country Club. The congregation, 137 years old, has been in its present building for 100 years.

Congregational, and one of the centennial organizers. "They may also may have been looking for a more liberal theological environment."

Largely a working class congregation, the Second Congregational membership also included a number of industrialists, said Vonie Irvine, who has been the church historian for 22 years.

"This was one place where employers and employees could get together," said Irvine, who is working on a history of the publication.

A small building housed the congregation for 37 years, before the current building was erected. The church, with its distinctive, asymmetrical exterior, was patterned after Hope Church in Springfield, Mass., said Irvine.

One of the wealthier members of the church, James Campbell, joined with John Ford to donate half the cost of construction. Unfortunately, said Irvine, Campbell died on a journey to Europe, so he never saw the building when it was completed.

In its earlier days, Second Congregational Church members worked closely with North United Methodist Church members, who then gathered in the building at 447 N. Main St., now occupied by First Church of Christ Scientist. Programs for youth groups and summer religious education classes were conducted together, said Taggart. Choir members from both churches seem to have attended the same singing schools, said Irvine.

Much of this early history is difficult to piece together, Irvine explained, because there are few records. Until 1959, church members presented annual reports orally. That was the year that the church established an office and hired a secretary, Irvine said.

Fortunately, there are good membership and pastoral records, she said. The leads she gets from these records help in putting together a complete history.

If the work on the history and celebration are to pay off, said Milton, the church will need to step forward into the future with the same vigor which apparently characterized its early years.

OLD TIMES — A view of the old church sanctuary will be displayed at tonight's presentation. The church known widely as the Red Church was once red.

WEARING SEVERAL HATS — The Rev. Joseph Milton, pastor of Second Congregational Church, dons a hat of the type worn 100 years ago. He is joined by Vonie Irvine, church historian, and Marion Taggart, chairman of the church's centennial celebration.

Here's the Answer

QUESTION: A large tree near our house has caused the nearby sidewalk to crack. In one place, the concrete has lifted several inches. Do I have to remove all the concrete and how is it done?

ANSWER: Use a cold chisel and a sledgehammer to break the sidewalk into several pieces. They can be removed more easily if the concrete is left in one or two pieces. Cutting the roots with an axe will not kill the tree.

QUESTION: The gates at two places along our fence need replacing. In making them, can I

A ranch for your family?

By Andy Long The Associated Press Elderly persons and/or those with heart or respiratory problems usually seek out one-story houses when it comes time to change residences.

Even if that were not so, the chances are one-story or ranch houses would continue to be the best-selling places to live in the country. A ranch has more attributes than the fact that there are no stairs to climb, making it easier to get from one place to another.

Tax Adviser

By George W. Smith QUESTION: My New Year's resolution was to file my tax return early this year. I did but I just now realized that I could have itemized deductions and saved money. Is it too late?

ANSWER: It's never too late to amend a return. If you did not itemize your deductions and should have, you may change your return simply by filing Form 1040X, Amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return.

QUESTION: I use my car for business. In 1987 I deducted 22 1/2 cents a mile for the first 15,000 business miles and 11 cents thereafter. Are the rates the same for 1988?

ANSWER: The standard mileage rate increased for 1988. You can deduct 24 cents a mile for the first 15,000 miles of business use of your automobile. However, you can still only deduct 11 cents a mile for each business mile driven beyond the first 15,000 miles.

QUESTION: My husband died last year. Can I still take an exemption for him on my income tax return for 1988?

ANSWER: If your husband died in 1988, you do not get a deduction for his death on your 1988 return. However, you can still claim an exemption for him on your 1988 return if he was eligible to do so on the date of his

Buying a house this year? Get an adjustable mortgage

By the Editors of Changing Times Are you thinking of buying a home this year? Get ready for tight money in 1989, which means higher mortgage interest rates for home buyers. Rates should drift up to 11 percent to 11.3 percent by July, then decline by the end of the year roughly to current levels — 10 percent.

The best advice for the '89 home market: Get an adjustable-rate mortgage. An ARM will let you focus on good home value, not on grabbing a low loan rate before mortgages begin climbing.

With an ARM, you won't be badly hurt in the short, up-down year. Say that fixed rates move up to 11.3 percent by July, then drop to 10.3 percent by December. If you select an 11.3 percent fixed-rate mortgage at the top of the market, you're stuck with it. If instead you pick a 9 percent ARM (what you'd expect the comparable rate to be then) with a 2 percentage point annual cap, you could be paying at or close to the lower prevailing rate at the end of the year.

What will the mortgage situation be like in the 1990s? Lower inflation (in the 4-5 percent range) in the coming years should mean cheaper mortgages: 30-year fixed-rate mortgages should stay in a slowly moving 8-10 percent loop throughout the '90s. The home mortgage of the '90s will be faster to get, cheaper and more flexible, too. Some predictions:

The 30-year fixed mortgage is a bit outmoded, says John E. Hemschoot, director of home-mortgage standards for Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. (Freddie Mac). That's because few borrowers buy a house and live in it for a lifetime; the average stay is seven years. So there may be more adjustable-rate instruments that match loans to real life—the old 30-year, fixed standby replaced by a loan with interest rates adjusted every seven years, for example.

Also watch out for elastic mortgages that expand or shrink based on economic factors. Lenders are tinkering with "price-level-adjusted mortgages," sensitive to cost-of-living changes but potentially risky to borrowers. With those your monthly loan balance would fluctuate with the inflation rate.

For example, if inflation increased by 1 percent, your loan balance might increase by 1 percent, too. The idea is to structure a loan that matches your purchasing power both now and in the future.

By the 1990s, electronic lending and credit information networks will make it convenient to get a loan over the telephone or through the mail rather than face-to-face with a lender. It'll be more like applying for a credit card and less like a visit to the principal's office, says Changing Times magazine.

You might end up dealing with the same old corner savings and loan when it comes time to borrow for a home, but the marketing of loan money to borrowers and the number-crunching of loan applications could be done by national organizations working with lenders — MasterCard and Visa now have member banks when it comes to your credit card borrowing.

Loans will be approved up to four times faster than they are now over the coming decade, as credit-reporting services and home appraisers continue to automate. More frequent updating of credit files, plus electronic transmission of credit reports to lenders, will cut the current two-week time to receive a report on your credit rating to as little as a day.

Similarly, home appraisers working with computers will be able to file reports electronically with lenders instead of mailing them. Research will be via computer data base and not multiple-listing volumes or courthouse documents. That will reduce the appraisal process that now takes an average of 45 days should be complete in a week or less.

The upshot of the increased speed and sophistication could be a stunning 50 percent reduction in your up-front loan costs, says Changing Times magazine.

Example: If you typically pay two points to get a loan now (each point is 1 percent of the loan amount paid in advance), this cost could be slashed to just one point, Hemschoot predicts. So someone borrowing $200,000 for a starter home in 1988 may pay $2,000 rather than $4,000 up front for the loan.

Sorting out Retin-A facts

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is this miracle anti-aging formula for skin called Retin-A? Is it as good as claimed?

Dr. Gott Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: Retin-A, a derivative of vitamin A, is effective in reducing wrinkles, age spots and skin damage caused by exposure to sunlight. It is applied as a cream of a gel under a doctor's supervision. Although Retin-A is not a fountain of youth and is not appropriate for everyone, it can help many people if used cautiously. Overuse leads to rash, peeling and discoloration.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've read your column for three years now and have noticed a disturbing trend in your readers' inquiries about their children. Parents who would flip out if their children drank or smoked dope see no contradiction in feeding their active 2-year-olds Retin-A and their pre-adolescent girls hormones. Small children are given drugs to make them taller, and tall kids take medicine to slow their growth. Don't these parents (and the pediatricians) realize that there are many variants within the definition of normal?

DEAR READER: You raise a good point. The miracles of modern medicine have given us all hope and enthusiasm. We tend to believe that there is a pill or a potion to answer our every need. Comments such as yours serve as reminders that medicine has its limits: not every health problem — perceived or real — can be pediatrics understand and accept this concept. Nonetheless, parents often feel pressured to "do something."

I agree that people would be happier accepting the normal variations in health. We need to be more realistic in our expectations — even relatively safe ones — have complications and side effects. What seem to be simple "cures" can turn into horrendous consequences. For example, body-building anabolic steroids can cause liver and heart damage, hardly a reasonable trade-off for the temporary benefits of increased strength.

Parents would probably serve their children better if the growth-up would help the youngsters accept minor complaints and health variations, without encouraging them to take drugs for everything. Thank you for writing.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My brother-in-law is has uncontrollable high blood pressure. It ranges around 220-120 despite all the medicines he's tried over the past 25 years. Is there anything else he can try?

DEAR READER: I can't answer your question without knowing which medicines your brother-in-law has been given for his hypertension.

However, I can say this: In the past few years, many anti-hypertension drugs have been developed and marketed. Ten or 15 years ago, there were far fewer. Today, new compounds — such as beta-blockers, calcium channel blockers and angiotensin-converting-enzyme inhibitors — are almost always effective in lowering blood pressure.

Your brother-in-law — whose blood pressure is dangerously high — should ask his doctor about these drugs and, in my opinion, should be given one of them before his hypertension causes a stroke or heart attack. High blood pressure can be effectively controlled with modern medicine.

Fitness favored

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) Men more than women are resolved to improve their physical fitness in 1989, according to a New Year's survey.

Get in shape, lose weight and change appearance ranked first, fourth and fifth among men, while save more money and improve love life were second and third.

For women, saving money came first, followed by more exercise, weight loss, improved church attendance and improved love life.

Horror of beating revealed in photos

DEAR ABBY: TheYWCA of Walla Walla, Wash., is putting together a pamphlet on a battered women. This pamphlet will be used to solicit funds for our women's shelter and residence. We want to use some pictures of women who have been beaten, but have great difficulty finding any. (Most battered women are afraid to have their pictures published especially if they are trying to get away from their abuser.)

In March 1986, you ran a letter from "Rae B. in Idaho," a battered woman who had sent you some pictures of herself after she had been badly beaten. (She asked you to publish those pictures. You did not publish them, but I hope you will permit theYWCA to use those pictures if you still have them on file.)

Helping battered women is one of ourYWCA's main projects. DONNA JONES

DEAR DONNA JONES: I have not seen those pictures since I showed them to the Phi Donahue show my fault, not theirs, but because she used them as evidence in court. Unfortunately, I have been unable to locate her, but if she reads this, I hope she contacts you. Meanwhile, thank you for sending your family violence report. I think Rae's letter is worth repeating. And here it is.

DEAR ABBY: In March I read a letter in your column from a parent whose daughter had been sexually abused by a friend. I am enclosing photos of myself after the brutal beating I received from my husband of 13 years. It was the first time he had physically harmed me, although he had threatened me with a knife several times. These past five years I lived in terror of him, but I didn't know how to get away without getting myself and my three children killed.

The assault occurred in a public place at 3:30 p.m. I asked him if he would kill me, but he said he would. I am enclosing a "booklet" titled "How to Be Popular" for people of all ages. To order, send money order for $2.99 to: Dear Abby's Mount Morris, P.O. Box 47, Postage is included.

Talking with... Diane Lane

By Frank Sanello

Diane Lane is only 23, but she's been working as an actress since she was 6. At the age of 13, the Manhattan native landed on the cover of Time magazine for her role in the 1979 film "A Little Romance" opposite Laurence Olivier.

After that, her career slowed down until director Francis Coppola rediscovered Lane and cast her in "Rumble Fish" and "The Outsiders" (both 1983), followed by "The Cotton Club" (1984).

After a four-year courtship, Lane married actor Christopher Lambert ("Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan," 1984) last October.

On Feb. 5 to 8, Lane plays a prostitute in the eight-hour CBS-TV miniseries "Lonesome Dove," based on the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel about an epic cattle drive in the Old West. Robert Duval and Anjelica Huston co-star.

Here, the actress talks about life as a 6-year-old performer, her alleged teen-age romance with Coppola and why she turned down juicy roles in "Pretty Baby" (1978) and "The Blue Lagoon" (1980).

QUESTION: You and director Francis Coppola were romantically linked, as they say, during the shooting of "The Cotton Club."

ANSWER: Only the tabloids. But it's amazing the people who believe what they read in those rags. After three months of a close working relationship with Robert Duval, he says, "So tell me the truth, Diane. Did you really have a thing with Francis? I couldn't believe it. No wonder he was so serious with me during shooting. He probably had this really wild image of me."

QUESTION: Robert Duval is a one of the most admired actors in the business. How did you get along?

ANSWER: Except for the Coppola thing, I had the best rapport with him of any leading man I've worked with. But we both made an effort not to socialize off the set because our relationship on screen was larger than life, and we wanted to keep it that way.

DIANE LANE ... started at age 6

QUESTION: For "Lonesome Dove," was it hard getting into the mind of a woman who lived more than 100 years ago?

ANSWER: I read "Lonesome Dove" before shooting—all the homework an actor needs to do for a role was in the book. There was hardly a question left to ask, because there were all these interior monologues in the book about how her mind works.

QUESTION: There's a very graphic gang-rape scene in "Lonesome Dove." That must have been very emotionally painful to shoot.

ANSWER: Physically, too. I was in the dirt for three days. All these men sitting on me. One actor was supposed to kick another actor off me, but he missed and kicked me in the elbow instead. My arm swelled up like a balloon. He felt so guilty he sent flowers.

QUESTION: Did you hesitate to do TV, which is considered a step down by many film actors?

ANSWER: I didn't hesitate to do TV of this caliber. I always thought I'd do a miniseries, but I didn't want to do a Judith Krantz-type production. Nothing against Judith, but I didn't want it to be high glamour. This is much more gritty, I like that.

QUESTION: You've been acting since you were 6 years old. Did you miss not having a normal childhood?

ANSWER: It was awkward to grow up from pre-puberty to an adult married woman in front of everybody. But you might as well do it what way instead of in a closet.

QUESTION: How did you feel when Laurence Olivier compared you to Grace Kelly and predicted great success for you as an actress?

ANSWER: He never said that to me. I read about it in the paper. The first thing he ever said to me was, "Call me Larry."

QUESTION: How did you feel about having your face on the cover of Time magazine when you were all of 13 years old?

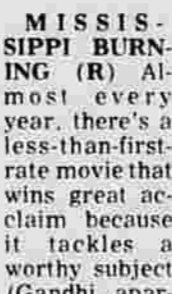

ANSWER: Dwarfed. But that was 19 years ago. Who cares now? That's the thing with media (attention). You don't stay in the spotlight forever. It's all so temporary. And the cover of Time was a fluke. It was an article about young actresses. I was one of six profiled inside, and they could have chosen any one of the others for the cover photo.

QUESTION: Why did you turn down "Pretty Baby" and "The Blue Lagoon," which made Brook Shields a star?

ANSWER: I was only 14 at the time, and I wasn't ready to play a 12-year hooker in "Pretty Baby." And I wasn't crazy about all the nudity in "The Blue Lagoon." Now I'd be happy to do those movies, but I'm too old.

Hackman, Dafoe play FBI heroes

Filometer Robert DiMatteo

MISSISSIPPI BURNING (R) Almost every year, there's a less-than-first-rate movie that wins great acclaim because it tackles a worthy subject (Gandhi, apartheid etc.). This year's director Alan Parker's classy-looking but manipulative treatment of the 1964 murder of three civil-rights workers by the Ku Klux Klan in Mississippi. In Parker's hands the story becomes a typically contrived detective tale with whites as heroes.

The heroes are FBI men Gene Hackman and Willem Dafoe, contrasting types whose differing approaches to the murders form the movie's real kernel of drama. There is a variation on the standard buddy-movie conflict, graced by Hackman's excellent performance as a tough Old Southern bird and marred by Dafoe's lackluster rendition of a slick new-generation agent. (To play this bland-on-the-surface character, the daring Dafoe mistakenly dims his natural powers as an actor, hiding behind unattractive glasses.)

One of the movie's main conceits is the image of burning of a small community being literally incinerated by racial conflict. But, characteristic of Parker's penchant for overstatement and sensationalism, we see more black churches being burned than even a city the size of Atlanta would have. And the way Hackman and Dafoe solve the case puts them on the level of no-pussfooting-around Rambos, when the beauty of the civil rights movement was how it transcended such tactics.

In between clues, Hackman questions the town beautician (Frances McDormand), one of those plain, good-hearted movie wives who are always married to brutes — and who are put in movies like this to give aging stars (in this case Hackman) a love interest. GRADE: ++

Souvenir spoons retain popularity

The real gain time for souvenir spoons was during the 1930s when everybody seemed to be bringing one back from somewhere. The mania tapered sharply in 1915 and was kupt after World War I.

The spoons survived as collectibles today and among the most sought-after types are the Indian designs. Here is a chief in full headdress gazing toward the rising sun. He carries a bow, quiver and arrows. Beneath his feet are some stalks with plump-kernelled corn. The back of the handle has a view of Niagara Falls.

We can see two dozen more figurative Indians on souvenir spoons in an Antique Trader article of last July. It shows a buffalo hunter, a warm-climate loin-cloth brave and a tribute to Sacajawea, the heroine of the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

Making her fourth movie appearance of the year, Michelle Pfeiffer is very good as the pure beauty whom Malkovich wooed. All in all, this is a quietly compelling and erotic black comedy — one that doesn't, however, quite validate its tragic and bloody conclusion. GRADE: +

'Photographic eye' is vital to success

By Sandy Cotton The Associated Press

Someone might use the best cameras and lenses and still not be a good photographer! More important than the equipment you use is the development of what I call your "photographic eye."

Many years ago, one of the major photo magazines gave simple, inexpensive box cameras to a number of professional photographers and asked them to take some "great" pictures.

They succeeded by taking advantage of their photographic eyes and by using various types of films — a high-speed film for a low-light situation, for example — to overcome some of the camera's shortcomings.

Anyone interested in taking better pictures should try to develop his photographic eye. You don't even need a camera to do it — just a vivid imagination.

Do it while riding or walking to and from work. Seek out pictures and better vantage points for taking them. Learn to see everything. Think of your eye as the camera.

One eye is roughly the equivalent of a 17mm lens covering a 15-degree vertical and 120-degree horizontal field. The binocular vision of both eyes creates a 180-degree angular field. That's a lot of territory, so you have to learn to isolate your subject matter — sort of like using a telephoto lens.

A simple way to do this is to make a rectangular frame with your hands, or use a piece of cardboard with a rectangular hole cut into it. Held close to your eye, it gives you a wide-angle view. Held farther away it crops out things that might distract from the picture.

Getting close to your subject is important. Fill the viewfinder with only the things you want in the picture. When photographing people, have them do something besides staring into the camera.

Always check the background and foreground for anything that might distract the eye from the main subject. Are there any telephone poles or wires "growing" out of your subject's head? If so, move yourself or your subject until the distraction is gone.

When photographing children or animals, remember that the best pictures are usually taken from eye level, and preferably at their level. And, while you're down there, why not try something new? How about getting flat on your back to shoot a group standing in a huddle over you?

Later, you might have an opportunity to shoot a larger group looking up or down the well of a circular staircase. You never know when you're going to happen across some unique and exciting stairwell in your travels unless you keep on the lookout with that photographic eye!

But it's not just stairwells you should look for. How about unusual frames, such as a doorway that frames an interesting building across the way, or a window with a magnificent view of a mountain or lonely tree?

The most successful wedding photographers are always scouting out interesting backgrounds in local parks or the countryside for wedding portraits. Commercial photographers always look for different sites for photographing models or products. They're always using their photographic eyes.

When driving through the country, I keep one eye on the road while my photographic eye looks for interesting scenes. I'll try to imagine where the sun will set or rise, since the most beautiful light appears early in the morning and late in the day. I use my photographic eye to try to select the spot from where I'd shoot a photo to get the best composition, and the best time of day to come back and shoot it.

I'm always looking for oddball shapes, a lazy S-curve in a river or road, interesting frames and different perspectives. I'm always shooting pictures with that photographic eye. It's a habit I developed years ago and one I hope I never lose.

I don't always manage to get back to shoot the pictures I see. Sometimes when I return, things have changed; a ground fog I admired didn't develop, or instead of a sunrise, there's a dull, gray sky. But the picture is still in my mind, and someday, I might just get lucky enough to get it on film, too.

I suppose it's sort of daydreaming, but it's fun, and I find that it really helps improve my shooting.

Try it — you'll like it!

Photo exhibitions WASHINGTON (AP) — To observe the 150th anniversary of the invention of photography the Smithsonian Institution is sponsoring special exhibitions, publications and programs in 1989 celebrating the medium.

The anniversary is being marked with group and individual shows of the works of both professionals and amateurs, to be seen at seven of the major Smithsonian museums. The anniversary will also be marked by the publication of "Images of America" by Smithsonian Books.

Special care needed in winter

Some tips on winter care for your pets:

- Outdoor pets need more calories to withstand the cold as well as bedding and housing to withstand the cold.

Older pets may be especially susceptible to cold and need the extra protection as do newborn pets especially when the mother isn't present. Aged pets affected by arthritis especially need to be protected from rigidity.

A complete diet provides for the increased hair growth to provide warmth and the muscle mass and fat necessary for body insulation. Pets with short shag coats especially if old need a sweater when outside this winter or just be exposed for a short time.

Call your veterinarian quickly for instructions.

'The Pledge' recalls McCarthy terror

By Hillel Halkin
The Associated Press
NEW YORK — When George Bush labeled campaign rival Michael Dukakis a "card-carrying" member of the American Civil Liberties Union, frightening memories flooded back to Howard Fast.

In the 1950s, Sen. Joseph McCarthy achieved notoriety for his purges of suspected Communists, brandishing a piece of paper in his hand and charging that he had a list of "card-carrying" members of the Communist Party.

Letters tell tales of Appalachia

By Dawn Mendez
The Associated Press
CHARLESTON, W. Va. — Appalachian author Lee Smith says there's nothing unusual in using a series of letters to tell the story in her new novel, "Fair and Tender Ladies."

The single-person narrative has long been used by the women of West Virginia, Virginia and Kentucky, says Smith, a faculty member at North Carolina State University. Many of those Appalachian women, although uneducated, wrote throughout their lives, she says.

Louisiana State University published some of those stories in a volume titled "Stories From Sweet Holler."

Smith also tells of a large packet of letters she bought for 75 cents at a garage sale.

Newman won't play Long

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Paul Newman has decided not to play Earl K. Long in "Blaze," a movie about the stripper to whom the late Louisiana governor took a fancy. "It was never an official agreement. It was always dependent on what he thought of the movie," Newman spokesman Warren Cowan said Friday. "He had doubts about doing the movie for many months. For whatever reasons, he's withdrawing."

Director-writer Ron Shelton, who has not cast the part of stripper Blaze Starr, now also has to find a new leading man.

First chess game a draw

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — John Donaldson and Elena Akhmedovskaya, the American and Soviet chess players who eloped in November, met across a huge playing board at a shopping center exhibition match, and played to a draw. For their marriage, that might have been bad. Donaldson admitted after the match Thursday night. "It's too dangerous," he said. "I felt it in my heart. Maybe married couples shouldn't play against one another."

They played their first game against one another Thursday on an 8-foot chessboard. During the game, the couple smiled repeatedly at one another.

Porn star won't give up

ROME (AP) — Ilona Staller, Italy's porn-star parliamentarian known as Cicciolina, bared her breasts in front of the U.S. Consulate on Friday after failing to obtain a visa to perform in San Francisco. "We've had a few questions to it," said Ruth Lack, spokeswoman for First Gibraltar, FSB in Houston. "We have not had any action on it. Most of our depositors realize that this is nothing more than a trial at this point."

George Barclay, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas, said publicly about the proposal caused "no measurable increase" in withdrawals because consumers are confident the government will uphold the safety of their deposits.

Arrest didn't stop show

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Dirty dancing got rhythm and blues singer Bobby Brown in trouble with the police but didn't stop the show. Brown, arrested during a performance Wednesday for violating Columbus' anti-lewdness ordinance, paid a $52 fine and returned to finish his show. "He brought a woman up from the audience and was dancing around her. Then he got right up to her" and moved in a simulation of sexual intercourse, said police Maj. John Wood. When Brown left the stage, Sgt. Bobby Horne, head of security at the Municipal Auditorium, arrested him.

BUSINESS

MARKET REPORT

Savers on fee: 'preposterous'

DALLAS (AP) — Savings and loans are on alert for withdrawals by jittery customers fearing a tax on deposits to help bail out the thrift industry, and a regulator said the proposal is scaring depositors away. A spot check of Dallas savings and loans depositors on Friday suggested that most customers would wait and see if the proposed fee was adopted before taking any action. But many people had questions about the idea.

Judy Rollerson, a Metropolitan Savings teller, said several customers mentioned the proposal but none said they would close their accounts. "They're just talking about how preposterous it really is."

S&L officials have been watching for reaction since the Bush administration hinted that one way to finance a bailout of troubled thrifts would be to charge S&L bank and credit union customers 25 cents on every $100 they had deposited. The measure would require Congressional approval.

M. Danny Wall, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said Thursday that the proposal was making savings and loan depositors nervous and had led some to withdraw their money.

Since Wednesday, Wall said, "There have been cases where they say, 'I don't like what I heard on TV. I'm taking my money out.'"

Depositors' reaction to the proposal had not put any savings and loans in jeopardy, he said. Financial industry officials in Dallas and other cities said there have been few account closings as a result of the deposit tax trial balloon.

"We've had a few questions to it," said Ruth Lack, spokeswoman for First Gibraltar, FSB in Houston. "We have not had any action on it. Most of our depositors realize that this is nothing more than a trial at this point."

George Barclay, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas, said publicly about the proposal caused "no measurable increase" in withdrawals because consumers are confident the government will uphold the safety of their deposits.

Some customers said they probably would withdraw their money if the deposit fee was implemented, but several customers said they had not heard about the proposal.

One Dallas man promptly withdrew his money from Sunbelt Savings after hearing of the fee proposal, said account representative Tim Palla.

"He came in with a smile on his face and said, 'I can't handle this any more. It isn't you people, it's the government,'" Palla said. Palla said that was the only withdrawal he knew of. Other customers have called with questions about the proposed fee, he said.

Intrastate telecommunications competition gets a limited OK

SNET vows to improve

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — State utility regulators on Friday indicated that they're poised to open intrastate telecommunications services to limited competition, but they stopped short of approving competition in pay telephone service, saying it would spell the end of the 10-cent phone call. If the draft decision issued by the Department of Public Utility Control is made final, it would end the monopoly in some intrastate telephone services presently held by Southern New England Telephone Co., which serves most of the state with 1.5 million customers. New York Telephone, which serves part of Greenwich, and Woodbury Telephone Co., which serves three towns.

Telecommunications giant American Telephone & Telegraph Co. applauded the DPUC decision, saying it would greatly benefit customers, particularly businesses that need sophisticated telecommunications services. "Meanwhile, a SNET spokesman expressed "concerns" and said the company was "skeptical" that competition, once launched, could be limited in the ways the DPUC envisioned.

The DPUC draft decision would authorize competition in three types of services: Nonswitched private lines, which provide communication between two or more fixed points for the exclusive use of one customer. Louise Rickard, a spokeswoman for the DPUC, said lines to hotels and rental car companies found at airports are an example of nonswitched private lines. Many computer networks also use such lines, she said.

"Pure resale" of local-exchange company lines and services for the purpose of providing intrastate toll calling and WATS service. Companies that wanted to provide such services would have to pay for the use of lines owned by the local telephone companies, under the DPUC decision. They would be prohibited from using facilities already owned by interexchange carriers, such as US Sprint and MCI.

Specialized services already provided on an interstate basis. Rickard said an example offered by one carrier is a service that hastens transmission of computer data. The DPUC said that because of the wide range of possible services that could be competitive, it proposes to consider them on a case-by-case basis.

The DPUC is expected to decide by March 1 whether to make the draft a final decision. Oral arguments before the commissioners are scheduled for Feb. 22. "The DPUC draft decision

SNET vows to improve

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — Southern New England Telecommunications Corp., criticized last year for inadequate service in some areas of the state, said Friday it would modernize equipment in parts of four rural towns during the next 18 months, two years ahead of schedule. The areas affected are Durham, the Higganum section of Haddam, the Moodus section of East Haddam and Washington. The four are among 30 areas of the state that state regulators said had the worst phone service in 1988 as measured by trouble reports.

Complaints about service in Durham prompted the state Department of Public Utility Control to launch an investigation into SNET service. SNET technicians will install new switching equipment in the Durham office in August, in the Higganum and Moodus sections in December and in Washington in June 1990. Each new switching center costs more than $2 million.

"We're also skeptical that competition, once you introduce it, can be limited to the areas limited by the DPUC," Seekamp said.

He said five years of national telephone deregulation showed that the "limited specialized competition authorized by the (Federal Communications Commission) got beyond their control and it has grown beyond their control."

"Specifically, if SNET loses revenue because of increased competition, residential telephone customers could feel the pinch," Seekamp warned. He said the cost of basic residential service "is now subsidized by the more lucrative, non-competitive business."

Competition is permitted in interstate telecommunications services and some states also allow intrastate competition, but Connecticut hasn't permitted it so far, primarily because of concerns about the potential impact of competition on universal service.

In 1987, state law was changed to permit intrastate competition if the DPUC found that it would meet the needs of customers and not reduce the availability or increase the price of local telephone service.

"We're talking about very significant companies with very significant resources" that would be "treated with flexibility," Seekamp said. "We're concerned that that would put us at a disadvantage."

He said SNET was also worried that powerful new competitors

Bull market coming back?

By Chef Currier The Associated Press

NEW YORK — To the surprise of almost everybody, and the consternation of more than a few, Wall Street is starting to look as though the great bull market of the mid-1980s is back.

Over the past few trading days, stock prices have staged a runaway rise on heavy volume that evokes vivid images of January two years ago.

In the heady atmosphere that prevailed then, the Dow Jones industrial average broke 2,000 for the first time and finished the month with a net gain of 282 points.

If the market is going to match that performance this month, it will have to get even hotter than it has been in the two January sessions that remain. Some analysts think it is overdue for a breather.

Still, it has been an impressive performance, especially when you consider the uncertainty and skepticism that predominated in the financial world as the new year began.

To many investors, of course, the news is exhilarating, helping to wipe out both the dollars-and-cents losses and the unpleasant memories created by the crash in the fall of 1987.

To others who had been cautiously waiting for "better" investment opportunities, however, it has been a nasty surprise.

Consider the position in which many money managers at investing institutions such as pension funds find themselves.

In the chastened atmosphere that followed the crash, they carefully marshaled cash reserves as a cushion against further trouble ahead. Thus a lot of people were under-represented in stocks when prices took off again.

When your clients have suffered a drubbing in the market collapse, how are they going to take it when you tell them they missed out on the recovery?

That kind of thinking, analysts say, has prompted a rush to get into the market, and helped keep the rally going.

There have been other favorable forces as well, including recent talk in Washington of restoring a tax break for capital gains and giving dividends better tax treatment as well.

But the stocks that would benefit most directly from tax changes, the smaller issues many individual investors like to buy, haven't been the standout gainers in recent weeks.

Instead, the top performers have been the blue chips and big-name technology issues that are the common currency in which the institutions deal.

In the past week the Dow Jones average of 30 blue-chip industrials jumped 87.50 points to 2,222.86 for its best weekly showing so far in the rally dating back to late November.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index climbed 3.62 to 164.78, the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 6.34 to 397.96, and the American Stock Exchange market value index rose 2.05 to 321.57.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 196.40 million shares a day, up from 161.40 million the week before.

Robert Stovall, president of Stovall-Twenty-First Advisors Inc., said catch-up buying by investing institutions has been a predominant force in the market of late.

"The train is leaving the station and they have to get on," Stovall said. "It's just a case of raw supply and demand."

The current resemblance to the early days of 1987 is a bit spooky, he acknowledged, given the vulnerable position the market reached that year and the debacle that followed.

Tax breaks for dividends could cool buyout borrowing

By Bart Ziegler The Associated Press

NEW YORK — If Congress goes through with its plan to eliminate the double taxation of corporate dividends, the result could be a boost in prices on Wall Street and a reduction in the massive borrowing that has bankrolled the wave of corporate buyouts.

But it is questionable whether the lawmakers will have the nerve to go through with any plan that could reduce federal revenue at the same time they are grappling with the huge federal deficit.

Proponents of the two-pronged plan say tightening the corporate interest-deduction provision could balance revenue lost from eliminating the double taxation of dividends. But both remain contentious issues.

While Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan told the Senate Finance Committee he was concerned about the level of corporate borrowing stemming from takeovers, he said he was opposed to any restrictions on the deductibility of corporate interest from loans and bonds.

He said such limits could have unintended consequences that could actually reduce tax revenue, and that companies and financiers would find a way around any restrictions.

Earlier in the week, David S. Ruder, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, also said he was opposed to any change in the interest deductibility. He warned that any tinkering with the tax laws to curb takeovers could cause panic in a stock market he called "skittish and nervous."

That caution was echoed Friday by President Bush, who said at a news conference that he didn't think it was the government's place to restrict the level of corporate borrowing.

As for the other proposal, eliminating the double taxation on dividends most likely would lead to price rises in stocks that pay dividends because the dividends would be more valuable.

That, in turn, could have another beneficial effect: making it more attractive for corporations to raise funds for buyouts and restructurings through sales of stock instead of through borrowing.

Greenspan, Brady and Ruder all welcomed the plan to ease the tax burden on dividends. But none offered any magic formula to do so without worsening the federal deficit.

SPORTS Carson gets the head job with Browns

By Chuck Melvin
The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Bud Carson, the architect of Pittsburgh's "Steel Curtain" defense during the late 1970s, was named Friday as head coach of the Cleveland Browns, replacing Marty Schottenheimer.

Carson, 57, signed a three-year contract for his first NFL head coaching job and said he welcomed the pressure that comes with taking charge of a winning team. The Browns were 16-6 this season and have been to the playoffs four straight years.

"I think this is a very choice job," Carson said. "There aren't many people lucky enough to step into a situation like this."

The Browns did not disclose terms of his contract, though a source said the first year would pay Carson about $400,000 — the same as Schottenheimer made this season. Raises and incentive bonuses are included in subsequent years.

Schottenheimer quit the Browns on Dec. 27 after refusing owner Art Modell's demands that he relinquish his duties as offensive coordinator and fire some of his assistants. He was hired as head coach by Kansas City on Tuesday.

Carson said he had no qualms about accepting a job upon which Modell had placed certain strict conditions, including the promotion of quarterbacks coach Marc Trestman to offensive coordinator and little or no input in the Browns' draft.

"I'm not going in with all my hands tied behind me," Carson said. "Art has hired an offensive coordinator I can live with. My role will be to set the philosophy. And I'm going to stay very close to the defense. I'm not going to throw away all the things I've learned."

Carson said he would hire a defensive coordinator. The Browns plan to interview former Pittsburgh defensive coordinator Tony Dungy for that job next week.

Carson was one of five defensive coordinators who received serious consideration for the head coaching job. Also interviewed were Fritz Shurmur of the Los Angeles Rams, Vince Tobin of the Chicago Bears and Floyd Peters of the Minnesota Vikings, while San Francisco defensive coordinator George Selbert was on his way to Cleveland for an interview before being called back and hired as the 49ers' head coach.

Tobin had dropped out of the running by last week and Peters withdrew his name even earlier, leaving Carson and Shurmur as the finalists. Carson apparently won the job because of his experience in the Browns' conference, the AFC.

Balk rule is coming to a discernible stop

By Ben Walker
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The balk rule that bogged down baseball last season have come to a discernible stop.

The changes that led to a record 824 balks — up from 356 the previous year — are being dropped, baseball announced Friday. From now on, balks will be called as they were before 1988.

No longer will pitchers be required to make a "discernible" stop in the set position, although they still must come to a complete halt. Also, pitchers no longer must have "both" feet on the ground when they set.

The clarifications were adopted in December 1987 on a one-year trial basis. The Major League Baseball Players Association, which has the right to approve or veto such changes, opposed the newer language. Baseball's rules committee made it official Thursday.

"We thought that the change, both in enforcement and language, was inappropriate and likely to force changes in the game that nobody wanted," Don Fehr, executive director of the union, said.

"The balk rule is to be enforced in 1988 as it was in 1987 and in earlier years," Fehr said. "I expect that to be

Boston dinner features Yaz

By Paul Orlia
Special to the Herald

BOSTON — The Boston Chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America gathered Thursday night for their 50th Annual Awards Dinner at the Hynes Auditorium.

It was an evening to honor past, present and future major league players, but most of all, it was as master of ceremonies Dick Stockton said, "a centerpiece for once in a lifetime player."

The player of course, is the man called Yaz, newly elected Hall of Famer Carl Michael Yastrzemski.

"All you need to know is 3,000 hits and 400 home runs," Stockton said. "Yaz not only reached but shattered those milestones."

Yastrzemski finished his 23-year career on Oct. 2, 1983 with 452 home runs and 3,419 hits. He is the only American League player to reach both plateaus. He also holds the AL mark for games played (3,300), three batting titles (1963, 1967, and 1968) and seven gold gloves for his fielding prowess.

Yaz, who turns 50 years old on Aug. 9 and looks as if he could still turn on a fastball, won the triple crown (.326 batting average, 44 homers and 121 RBI) in leading the Sox to the Impossible Dream pennant in 1967.

Other former players recognized by the BBWAA were Johnny Pesky with the Judge Emil Fuchs Memorial Award For Long and Meritorious Service to Baseball, Sam Mele with the Tommy McCarthy Memorial Award, Eddie Pellagrini for contributions to amateur and professional baseball and Earl Wilson with the former Red Sox Award.

The 1988 Major League Executive of the Year Award, usually reserved for general managers, was given to Red Sox vice-president for player development Ed Kenney. All nine regular Red Sox players plus five starting pitchers from the 1988 Eastern Division champions came up through Kenney's farm system.

The Red Sox minor league system also produced the Carolina League MVP, Bridgewater, Mass., native Mickey Pina. Pina was awarded the Annual Minor League Award for his 21-homer, 108-RBI season in 1988.

Named to the panel were Phil Carlton, a former associate justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, Dr. D.W. Colvard, former chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, William Kloppman, former chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Burlington Industries, and Samuel Poole, vice chairman of the UNC Board of Governors and chairman of the board's special committee on intercollegiate athletics.

Poole will chair the commission. "Chairman Jones and I regret the necessity for taking this course of action," Spangler said. "We are convinced, however, that it is the right thing to do for North Carolina State University."

The investigation stems from the publication of allegations appearing on the dust jacket of the forthcoming book, "Personal Fouls." The book focuses on the 1986-87 N.C. State basketball team.

"I think at the end of the season, they were all pretty much coming to a stop. That's the way it was meant to be anyway," he said. "I think that the umpires were all pretty much coming to a stop. That's the way it was meant to be anyway," he said. "I think that the umpires were all pretty much coming to a stop. That's the way it was meant to be anyway," he said.

Overall, 558 balks were called in the AL and 366 in the NL.

WOMEN'S CHAMP — Steffi Graf of West Germany, ranked No. 1 in the world, opened her 1989 campaign Saturday by winning the Australian Open Tennis championships in Melbourne. She beat Helena Sukova in the final.

Graf wins grand slam title at Aussie Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Steffi Graf, overcoming her toughest test of the tournament, beat fifth-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-4 at the Australian Open Saturday to capture her fifth straight Grand Slam title.

Sukova jumped to a 4-3 lead in the opening set before Graf took control with her fierce forehand and won the next seven games. Sukova mounted another challenge in the second set, saving two match points to close within 4-5, but Graf held serve on a forehand pass to win the match.

The 71-minute contest, played in 100-degree heat at the National Tennis Center, was Graf's longest of the tournament. The 19-year-old West German also lost more games than in any of her previous matches during the two-week event.

Graf is only the fourth woman to win five consecutive Grand Slam titles. Martina Navratilova, Margaret Court and Maureen Connolly each won six Grand Slam events in a row.

Graf, playing in her eighth consecutive Grand Slam final, did not drop a set in the tournament for the second straight year. The world's top-ranked player has lost only two sets in Grand Slam competition since beginning her five-title string at last year's Australian Open.

Graf earned $135,000 for winning the championship. Sukova, who was also runner-up at the 1984 Australian Open, received $67,500.

It was Graf's sixth Grand Slam title overall. She also won the 1987 French Open.

On Friday, Ivan Lendl and Miloslav Mecir conquered a scorching sun and underdog opponents to set up an all-Czech men's final.

The Czech tennis stars conquered a scorching sun and underdog opponents Friday in reaching the Australian Open final. Lendl outdueled 11th-seeded Thomas Muster of Austria 6-2, 6-4, 5-7, 7-5 in a baseline battle, while Mecir dismantled unseeded Swede Jan Gunnarsson 7-5, 6-2, 6-2 with quickness and cunning groundstrokes.

The victories set up a rematch of the 1986 U.S. Open final, which Lendl won in straight sets. Lendl has won three U.S. Opens and three French Opens, but still is seeking his first Australian Open title.

BLACKSBURG, Va. — NCAA executive director Dick Schultz predicted Friday that controversial Proposition 42 will be brought up again at next year's NCAA convention, where some schools will try and delay it and others will try and kill it.

"I'm sure in 1990 there will be legislation there to either delay it or eliminate it," Schultz said at Virginia Tech. "But now, if people voted on it, I'm not sure if the result wouldn't be the same."

Proposition 42, scheduled to take effect in the fall of 1990, would not let freshmen receive athletic scholarships unless they had a 2.0 grade average in high school and an SAT score of at least 700.

After the NCAA adopted Proposition 42, Georgetown basketball coach John Thompson demonstrated his objection by staying off the bench for two games.

"I don't think it was a surprise that a number of people spoke out in opposition to it, but I think the fact that Thompson walked off the court, that really highlighted it and made a national issue out of it," Schultz said. "Had he not done that, you would have had some coaches make some negative comments about it. It would have been in the paper two or three days, and that's all you would have heard about it."

NCAA officials met last week with Thompson and officials of the Southeastern Conference to discuss the matter.

"I thought John Thompson handled everything very well," Schultz said. "He protested. He didn't protest on racial grounds. He protested on the basis of the fact that it was eliminating the opportunity for a certain group of people."

Critics of Proposition 42 have said it is most likely to affect minority student-athletes, but Schultz pointed out that some black leaders and black educators agree that the rule's academic requirements are good minimum standards that should be met.

HONOLULU (AP) — John Settle, who will be making his first appearance in the Pro Bowl Sunday, is looking forward to seeing how he stacks up against the NFL's best.

"It's a great opportunity," the second-year running back for the Atlanta Falcons said. "You get a chance to test your skills against the best linebackers, cornerbacks and defensive backs in the league."

"As I flew in here, I was thinking about all the players who are here and wondering whether I should even be here."

Rookie Tim Brown, the wide receiver-return specialist for the Los Angeles Raiders, is similarly awed by his first brush with the NFL all-star game.

Hartford upsets BU

HARTFORD (AP) — Larry Griffiths scored 16 points and Al Jones added 15 as Hartford defeated Boston University 69-60 Friday night.

Hartford, 7-10 and 3-3 in ECAC North Atlantic Conference, never trailed in the game. The Hawks took a 33-25 lead at halftime behind Jones' 10 points.

Nate Gaines' 10-foot jumper gave Hartford its biggest lead in the game, 45-31, with 16:04 left.

Boston, 10-6 and 5-2, fought back, and after a foul shot by Tony DaCosta, the Terriers pulled within one point, 55-54, with 6:04 left.

Astros after Boggs

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros have been turned over twice this week in efforts to make a deal with the Boston Red Sox for third baseman Wade Boggs.

The newspaper, quoting an unidentified source close to the Red Sox, said Boston on Monday rejected an Astro offer of pitcher Bob Knepper and outfielders Kevin Bass and Terry Puhl.

On Wednesday, the Astros revised the offer to include Knepper, Bass and third baseman Ken Caminiti, and again were turned down the source said.

Houston general manager Bill Wood confirmed he talked with the Red Sox but said he would not identify players involved in the discussions.

Final year for Evert

LONDON (AP) — Chris Evert says she will retire from women's tennis after this season and is considering an international farewell tour.

British newspapers reported Friday.

Evert, 34, who has won 18 Grand Slam singles titles, said she was concentrating on this year's Wimbledon championship, a tournament she has won three times.

She married for the second time last year, to former Olympic skier Andy Mill, and has said that she would like to have children.

In interviews in the British papers, Evert said she finally had decided to quit after 1989.

Daniel leads by two

BOCA RATON Fla. (AP) — Two Daniel, thriving on a golf course she normally finds unkind, shot 4-under-par 68 Friday to open a two-stroke advantage over Chris Johnson midway through the PGA Oldsmobile Classic.

The second-round leader had six birdies and two bogeys on the par-72, 6,333-yard Stonebridge Golf and Country Club course and finished with a 36-hole total of 7-under 137.

Johnson, coming off a disappointing season in which she won only $48,218, shot a 69, with four birdies and a bogey, that left her at 139. Five others trailed Daniel by three strokes, including defending champion Nancy Lopez and first-round leader Deb Gorman.

O'Meara takes golf lead

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Mark O'Meara coaxed a 68 out of Spyglass Hill Friday to take a one-stroke lead over Dave Stockton after the second round of the $1 million Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

O'Meara, who hasn't won on the American PGA Tour in almost four years, completed two rounds in 10-under-par 134.

Stockton, 47, a two-time PGA champion but a non-winner for 13 years, again used his putting wizardry in a round of 70 on Cypress Point and was at 135.

"It's not a spot I'd anticipated getting to, but now that I'm here, gear it," Stockton said.

Tom Kite moved into third at 137, after a 70 at Spyglass Hill, generally considered to be the most difficult of the three courses used for the first three rounds of this unique event.

Second quarter the key for Manchester boys

Scholastic Roundup

ENFIELD — With an excellent second quarter being the impetus, Manchester High took a comfortable halftime lead and was never threatened afterward in annexing an 82-67 verdict from host Enfield High Friday night in CCC East Division boys' basketball action.

The victory boosts the Indians over the 500 mark at 4-5 overall, 4-2 in the CCC East. The host Raiders fall to 1-5 in the division and 3-9 overall.

Manchester's next game is Tuesday night at 7:30 at East Hartford High.

The Indians had a 23-17 lead after one quarter before extending their margin to 48-30 at halftime. "We played a very good second quarter," Manchester Coach Frank Kinel said. "Our pressure defense created a lot of turnovers and we were able to score quickly. That's obvious by the 48 points at the half."

It was a balanced second-quarter attack for the Indians with Jason Goddard and Eric Widmer draining six points apiece and Erik Johnson and Darren Goddard four each.

Manchester's lead was 62-47 heading into the final eight minutes of play. "We were very good in the second quarter but again we were careless in the third quarter," Kinel said, "until we put them away," he added.

Enfield could come no closer than 13 points the fourth quarter.

Jason Goddard had 21 points and 16 rebounds to lead the Indians. Calvin Meggett chipped in 16 points. Cory Goldston 11 and Willie Burg had 12 rebounds, including eight big ones off the offensive glass. "(Burg) did a good job keeping the ball alive on the offensive end," Kinel said.

John Grace had 14 points to lead the Raiders.

Coventry cagers hit century mark

COVENTRY — School history was set Friday night as Coventry High surpassed the century mark for the first time ever in its 101-75 triumph over Rocky Hill High in Charter Oak Conference boys' basketball action.

Noel Dobier's 3-pointer with 1:10 left boosted the Patriots over the century mark. "The crowd was yelling for a hundred. The young kids played the whole period. Everybody played. My feeling (about hitting one hundred) was if we get there, we get there," said 22-year Patriot Coach Ron Badstueber, who earned his 300th career victory earlier in the campaign.

Coventry moves to 9-1 in the CCC East, sharing first place in the division with Bacon Academy. The Patriots are now 10-2 overall heading into Tuesday's road date at Bolton High.

Rocky Hill slides to 2-8, 3-9 with the loss.

Coventry's advantage was 24-9 after one period and 55-34 at the half. "It was real fast paced. Our kids like to play that way," Badstueber said.

Senior guard Jack Ayer poured home a game-high 36 points to move him within 17 points of the school career scoring mark held by Leslie Danahy at 1,390 points. He should break it Tuesday night against Bolton. Ayer, who had six 3-pointers, already owns the boys' career scoring record.

Scott Lucas added 23 points and Paul Strycharz 10 for the Patriots.

Pete Francis had a team-high 28 points to pace the Terriers.

Notre Dame turns tables on Eagles

WEST HAVEN — Three weeks ago, East Catholic pulled off a big upset (48-46) in the All Connecticut Conference when it bumped off highly regarded Notre Dame at the Eagles' gym. The Eagles, however, couldn't repeat that success Friday night with the host Green Knights an easy 60-33 winner in conference play.

The victory pushes Notre Dame to 3-2 in the ACC and 8-5 overall while the loss even's East's record at 3-3 in the conference and 6-6 overall.

East's next game is Tuesday night at 7 at home against Northwest Catholic.

A change in strategy made a big difference for the Knights. "The last time we played they played us man-to-man. Tonight they went to a zone, packed it in and dared us to shoot from the outside and no one had a good day for us from the field," East Coach Ray Page said.

Notre Dame had a 19-8 lead after one quarter and 30-13 bulge at halftime. It grew to 49-19 after three periods.

"They dared us to shoot from the outside and we got impatient and took some quick shot at times," Page continued. "(Keith) Bullock controlled the boards and held us to one shot."

The 6-foot-6 Bullock had 15 points and 16 rebounds to lead the Green Knights. Al Walania led the way for the winners with 24 points.

High at Clarke Arena, Manchester's Shelly Dieterle (24) looks on. The Indians bowed, 48-47.

REID GORMAN led East with eight points while freshman Rob Penders netted seven off the bench.

Jerman leads Bacon over Bolton five

COLCHESTER — With Derrick Jerman leading the way with 33 points, Bacon Academy toppled Bolton High, 58-43, Friday night in Charter Oak Conference boys' basketball action.

The win improves Bacon's mark in the CCC East to 9-1 and overall ledger to 10-2. Bolton, which is home Tuesday night against Coventry High, is now 0-9, 0-12.

Bacon had a slender 12-11 lead after one quarter and a 31-27 bulge at the half. "We played a good first half," Bolton Coach Craig Phillips said. "We shot well in the second half. The second half we went cold and also turned the ball over. The third quarter their pressure bothered us. That's when they played away a little bit."

Bacon's lead was 46-33 after three periods.

What bothered Bolton the most was the 6-foot-2 Jerman. "We couldn't stop him. He's one of if not the best player in the league," Phillips said of Jerman. Craig Winslow had a strong game for Bolton with 19 points.

Host East Hampton trips up Cheney Tech

EAST HAMPTON — After dictating the tempo in the first half, Cheney Tech fell apart in the third quarter and went on to lose, 64-55, to home-standing East Hampton in Charter Oak Conference action Friday night.

The loss drops the Beavers to 4-6 in the league and 4-4 overall. East Hampton improves to 5-5 in the CCC and 5-7 overall. Cheney will be at Rocky Hill Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

With key performers Sean Walsted and Chris Haves out with knee injuries and Kevin Toolan hurt, along with 6-7 center Terrance Phillip having acquired his fourth foul, the Beavers ran out of manpower in the third stanza.

"We had a lot of turnovers (in the third)," Cheney Coach Aaron Silvia said. "They put some pressure on us. We were playing without four of our key players. Things just went downhill from there."

Cheney, which led 20-11 and 34-28 after the first quarter and at halftime, were outscored 22-11 in the third and fell behind, 50-45, after three quarters. Junior Trevon Brooks (game-high 25 points) and Phillip (20 points) had 17 and 10 points, respectively, in the first half. "We played a pretty good first half," Silvia said.

Celtics bump off the Kings

NBA Roundup

BOSTON (AP) — Robert Parish scored 26 points, Reggie Lewis added 24 and the Boston Celtics added 74 points in the second half to come from behind for a 128-116 victory over the Sacramento Kings Friday night.

The Celtics trailed 62-34 at halftime before scoring the first seven points of the third quarter. They took the lead for good on a shot from the lane by Kevin McHale that made the score 75-73 with 5:51 left in the period.

Boston's 74 second-half points passed its previous season high of 68 achieved Nov. 30 against New Jersey and last Sunday against Detroit.

McHale's basket came during a 10-run that put the Celtics on top 79-73. A three-point play by Sacramento rookie Ricky Berry, who scored a career-high 28 points, made the score 81-78, but the Kings got no closer.

The Celtics then scored the next six points, led 92-87 after three quarters and opened the final period with an 8-2 spurt that gave them a 100-89 lead. The margin ranged from seven to 10 points the rest of the way.

McHale added 23 points for Boston and Danny Ainge 20, including 14 in the fourth quarter. LaSalle Thompson had 19 and Ed Pinckney 18 for Sacramento.

The victory was the Celtics' 10th in a row at Boston Garden over the Kings, who last won there on Jan. 17, 1979.

BLOCKED — Boston's Reggie Lewis, left, reaches in to slap the ball out of the hands of Sacramento's Jim Petersen in their NBA game Friday night at Boston Garden. The Celtics, won 128-116.

But Philadelphia's Ron Anderson drove to the basket to tie the score with 23 seconds left. Richmond then hit a 14-foot shot with nine seconds later for a 112-110 Golden State lead.

Cavaliers 80, Pistons 79: At Auburn Hills, Mich., Mark Price scored 22 points as the Cleveland Cavaliers hung on for a 80-79 victory over the Detroit Pistons Friday night in a game that saw Brad Daugherty and Bill Laimbeer ejected for fighting.

Price hit a pair of free throws with 51 seconds left to put the Cavaliers ahead 80-77, Thomas scored Detroit's last five points and missed a desperation shot at the buzzer as Cleveland, with the NBA's best record, won its second straight from last year's Eastern Conference champions.

Daugherty and Laimbeer were thrown out with 9:42 left in the third quarter after they exchanged blows under the Cleveland basket.

Mavericks 126, Spurs 82: At Dallas, Mark Aguirre scored nine of his 35 points during a 14-spurt to open the third quarter Friday night, sending the Dallas Mavericks to a 126-82 rout of the San Antonio Spurs.

The Devils raced to an early 3-0 lead on goals by Muller, Patrick Sundstrom and Doug Brown in the opening 10:14. Babych got the Whalers on the scoreboard with 10 seconds remaining in the period, scoring from the left circle during a power play.

Hartford tied the game in the opening 3:45 of the second period. Francis scored at the 45-second mark when he took Dineen's rebound, skated behind the net and tucked the puck into the corner before Burke could get there. Dineen got the equalizer on a slapshot from the top of the left circle, his 16th power-play goal of the season.

Sabres 4, Canadiens 2: At Buffalo, N.Y., Rick Vive's sixth goal in his last five games helped the Buffalo Sabres extend their unbeaten streak to nine games with a 4-2 victory over the Montreal Canadiens Friday night.

Vive, who has 15 points in his last 10 games, scored at 5:33 of the second period to give Buffalo a 2-1 lead after he drew a five-minute slashing penalty against Montreal's Steven Martinson.

Developers will comply despite suit

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

The developers of the $70 million mall in Buckland Hills plan to comply with a state order requiring erosion-control measures at the mall site even though they have filed a lawsuit asking that the order be modified or thrown out.

The suit was filed Friday in Hartford Superior Court against the state Department of Environmental Protection, Hartford attorney Elizabeth C. Barton, an attorney representing the developers, said today the suit was filed so the developers could preserve their right to appeal the order in the future if necessary.

The suit was filed on behalf of the Mall at Buckland Hills Partnership, which includes the Homart Development Co. of Chicago.

Barton said today Homart agrees with the intent of the Jan. 12 order from the DEP requiring improved erosion-control devices at the mall site. Homart is complying with the order, she said.

"It (the suit) is in no way an indication that Homart intends to do anything other than comply with the DEP," Barton said.

Barton said the legality of the order isn't being discussed now, but the developers had to file the complaint within 15 days of the issuance of the order to preserve their right to appeal if the legality is questioned later. The developers do not anticipate a dispute over the legality of the order, she said.

"I have every reason to believe the matter will be resolved," Barton said.

She said the developers discussed the complaint with the FIREHOUSE SITE — This is a state-owned parcel of land at Deming Street and Tolland Turnpike the town plans to buy as a site for a Town of Manchester Fire Department station to serve areas in northeast Manchester. It would replace the town-owned Buckland station that would be taken over by the Eighth Utilities District if an agreement between the town and the district is completed.

Town to buy DOT land for firehouse

By Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

The state Department of Transportation has agreed to sell land at Deming Street and Tolland Turnpike to the town for a new fire station.

J. William Burns, commissioner of the DOT, told the town in a Jan. 25 letter that he will recommend that the 1.6-acre parcel, now used to store road barriers, be sold to the town for $72,732.20. The land was originally purchased with federal funds and the state will have to repay the $72,732.20 to the Federal Highway Administration, Burns said in the letter to Mayor Peter P. Dirosa Jr.

Town Manager Robert B. Weiss said today the town will go forward with plans to acquire the land and will soon begin the process of selecting an architect to design the new fire station.

The fire station would replace one on Tolland Turnpike near North Main Street that would be taken over by the Eighth Utilities District if an agreement between the town and district is approved.

The district would use the station to serve the Buckland area for which it would retain responsibility under the agreement.

That agreement has been approved in principle by directors of the town and district, but needs approval by district voters. Some other conditions must also be met before it can become final.

The new firehouse would serve about the same area now served by the one on Tolland Turnpike, according to Town of Manchester Fire Chief John Rivosa.

But firefighters stationed there would also have first responsibility for areas farther south, on Parker Street, Vernon Street and West Vernon Street.

East Catholic High School and Howell Cheney Regional Vocational Technical School, now first-response areas for the Tolland Turnpike station, would be first-served from the central firehouse on Center Street, Rivosa said.

In the letter to DiRosa, Burns said a condition of the transfer is that the land be used for municipal purposes.

Burns said his department will recommend to the Office of Policy and Management and to the state Priorities Review Board that the land be conveyed to the town.

Under terms of the proposed agreement between the town and the district, the district would buy the existing town firehouse for $750,000. In exchange, the town would pay the district $450,000 for sewer assets and jurisdiction now held by the district and at least $250,000 more, depending on a formula for sharing sewer-connection charges to be paid by developers of land in a portion of Buckland.

In addition to the new station in the North End, the town is considering the construction of a small station to serve the south end of town, according to town Director Stephen T. Cassano.

Willington students may leave Bolton

By Andrew J. Davis and Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

The Willington Board of Education is considering a plan to withdraw its students from Bolton High School and send them to Coventry or other systems, a proposal the Bolton school superintendent says will be devastating.

Though Bolton's renegotiated three-year contract with the Willington Board of Education does not expire until the end of the 1990-91 school year, Willington is considering sending its 105 students elsewhere when the contract expires, said Michael L. McKee, Willington school superintendent.

The town of Willington has no high school and has been sending students to Bolton for eight years. It is costing Willington $3,866 for each of the students attending Bolton High School this school year. That cost will rise to more than $5,170 for each student next year, McKee said.

Bolton School Superintendent Richard E. Peckman said the loss of Willington students could possibly mean reorganizing the school system, attracting students from another town or closing the high school.

"It would be devastating. It would be very damaging to the high school," Packman said.

"We're going through a period now, as all high schools are, with low enrollment. It would mean we'd have to take a close look at our programs and staffing."

The high school may then have to be extended to include grades 7 and 8 instead of the current grades 9-12 system, Packman said. In addition to the Willington students, 305 of the students at Bolton High School are from Bolton, he said.

The Willington Board of Education is not unhappy with Bolton, Windham High School and E.O. Smith High School in Storrs, the three high schools Willington high school-age students attend.

McKee said he is studying whether a better arrangement can be made with other school districts.

A committee of the Willington school board sent letters out to six area school districts on Jan. 19 to inquire about sending students there, McKee said.

"The board is just wanting to look at the options," he said. "The board is looking into all the possibilities."

Besides the three schools currently under contract, letters were sent to Coventry, Tolland and Stafford, McKee said.

A malfunctioning circuit breaker left more than 3,000 electric customers in Manchester and Bolton without power early today and forced a two-hour delay in the opening of Bolton schools, officials said.

The malfunction, which affected a circuit breaker on Hartford Road at 4:58 a.m., left 2,079 Manchester customers and 1,099 in Bolton in the dark for hours, said Joe A. Chavez, regional community relations manager for Northeast Utilities. Residents in the southeast section of Manchester, including Hartford Road, Charter Oak Street, Spring Street and South Main Street, were affected, Chavez said. In Bolton, homes on Bolton Center Road lost power, he said.

Another 989 customers in Manchester lost power at 7:54 a.m., as the utility company worked to correct the malfunction, Chavez said. Power was restored completely at 7:58 a.m.

Traffic signals on Hartford Road, Charter Oak Street, Spruce Street and Keene Street stopped working because of the malfunction, he said.

Canada halts exercises as troop plane crashes

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — A C-130 crashed into a snowbank and split in two during a landing in a thick, icy fog, killing eight Canadian soldiers heading to a major U.S.-Canadian military exercise, officials said.

The Canadian Hercules C-130 was carrying eight crewmen and 10 special service paratroopers from Edmonton, Alberta, when it crashed just short of the runway at Fort Wainwright's airfield, said U.S. Army Capt. Jim Rodgers.

"The weather was quite bad," said Rodgers. At the time of the crash, he said, a thick, icy fog blanketed the runway and the temperature registered around 60 degrees below zero.

Six of the troops aboard were pronounced dead on arrival at Bassett Army Community Hospital on the base and two others died while receiving treatment at the hospital, Army Maj. Sherrel Mock said.

Three soldiers were in critical condition, one was listed as stable, and the remaining six had minor injuries but were being

ENFIELD GIRLS NIP MHS

So close, yet, so far away.

That was the unfortunate scenario surrounding the Manchester High girls' basketball team Friday night.

Enfield senior Sharon Leonard (game-high 24 points), who eclipsed the 1,000-point milestone in her career during the second quarter, sank the winning bucket with 18 seconds left in regulation as the Green Raiders held on for an exciting 48-47 victory over the Indians in CCC East action at Clarke Arena.

Indian junior Cheryl Fowler (season-high 10 points) managed to get off a semi-forced foul-line jumper with seven seconds left which went around the rim and out. Manchester was unable to foul any Raider after the miss.

"She (Leonard) killed us," Manchester Coach Joe DePasqua said. "She's tough because I thought Shelly Dieterle played a great game defensively (on her). She's had a great career. When she gets the ball in the low post, she's got so many moves. She worked hard."

Manchester, which saw a three-game win streak snapped, even off at 3-3 in the CCC East and is 8-4 overall. Enfield moves to 4-2 in the league and 8-3 overall. The Indians will host East Hartford Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

This was an even contest throughout with each side possessing no more than a six-point edge. Each time Enfield opened up any daylight, the Indians stormed right back.

After a 12-12 stalemate after one quarter, Leonard tossed in 10 second-quarter points to give Enfield some breathing room. Dieterle (team-high 17 points) tallied nine points in the second stanza. Manchester had seven turnovers in the quarter. Enfield led, 26-22, at halftime.

"We had a few turnovers and made a few mental errors (in the second)," DePasqua said. "She (Leonard) is almost automatic."

A 16-foot bankshot with 3:17 left in the third quarter which put the Raiders up, 34-28, put Leonard over 1,000 career points.

Manchester senior Tina Stone scored six of her eight points in the third as the Indians trailed, 36-34, heading into the final stanza. Behind Fowler's eight points, all from long range, Manchester rallied in the final eight minutes.

Kim Tyler (10 points) hit an eight-footer from the baseline to give Enfield a 42-36 advantage with 4:56 left in the game. A three-point play by senior Lisa Cartier trimmed the lead to 44-41 with 3:52 to go. After that, Fowler displayed her soft shooting touch.

Two consecutive jumpers, a 15-footer and a 17-footer, by Fowler gave Manchester a 45-44 lead with 2:34 left. After a turnover, the Indians spread the court, but gave the ball right back to Enfield. Leonard scored to put the Green Raiders back up, 46-45. Fowler countered with a 17-footer with 36 seconds left to push Manchester back in front, 47-46.

"We're starting to play better," DePasqua said. "She (Fowler) has been playing juvvy and varsity. It's going to be tough to keep her out of the lineup."
