Fouracres or Forest House

Notes by Susan Barlow and Dick Jenkins.

Forgotten by most people: the old boarding house on Cooper Street, near the West Side Oval (a sports field that measured about four acres and had a cinder oval-shaped running track). It was once a pleasant boarding house, according to a January 30, 1921 Hartford Courant, article "Fouracres' Departure in Working Girls' Homes: Inn at South Manchester Solves Living Problem for Many Women Employees at Cheney Mills and Laughs Old High Cost of Living From the Door." The article notes: "...the inn idea prevails. There is no latchstring on the door, yet in the evening the sound of music and laughter seem to assure a hearty welcome to guests even before one has crossed the threshold. The lights that twinkle through the dozens of windows lend a cheerful atmosphere that is not broken by passing into the living room, patterned a bit after the style of an old New England tavern. There is the traditional fireplace, the straight-backed chairs; only the polished hearth, the electric lighting and the modern decorating destroy the old fashioned touch. In appearance, it might be an inn, of any beautiful little town in the East, or by stretching the point, a college dormitory..."

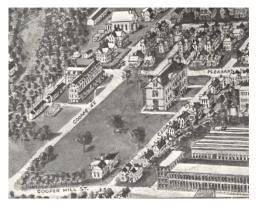

The Cheneys had other boarding houses for employees – Edgewood on the north side of Center Street, near Broad, and another on Chestnut Street. Fouracres was built before 1894, and it was expanded at least twice, in 1907 and 1916.

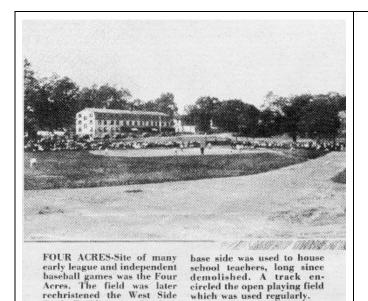

January 30, 1921 Hartford Courant article, quoted in text above; very hard to read.

Property card showing ownership by Thomas and Isabella Ford, who bought the property in 1938. After the 1948 sale of the old boarding house, it was demolished to make way for single-family houses. Boarding houses were not as popular as they had been in the early part of the 20th century, when many, many people "boarded." See listings in old directories.

Will Add to Forest House.

Owing to the increased number of to oung women who are coming to innehester to work and the lack of pace in the Forest House, a boarding ouse owned by Cheney Brothers for irls, it is planned to increase the uniber of rooms. Plans are under my for the adding of forty more comis to the house and it is hoped to have the work completed before ite fall.

Newspaper article about the 1916 expansion, adding "forty more rooms,".
