Aircraft Workers Save for Trips

Fraut and Whitely Aircraft will have its vacation shutdown, during which inventory is taken, from July 26 through Aug. 8.

Many of the employees are planning to travel on their vacation trips on commercial airlines, 80 per cent of which are powered by PWA engines.

The Credit Union has sent out vacation checks to 1,989 Aircraft-ers totaling $188,176.

Among the many PWA employees are Alfred Hennig, tool crib leader who lives at 843 Main St., Manchester, and his wife, Mrs. Hennig.

They plan to fly to Corpus Christi, Texas, and about 100 other workers who are planning to visit their families during the vacation.

Manchester Evening Herald Heard Along Main Street

A high-toned communique from Park Avenue—the one in New York—arrived in the office the other day and a mighty impressionable holiday will have an attendance at the American Legion today Monday and in years to come.

One thing is certain, if everyone drops the contribution boxes Monday the money he would have spent on private fireworks, the Legion will make enough to carry on its worthwhile civic program.

All in all, Independence Day has and will continue to be a much more enjoyable holiday in Manchester than it once was.

Spiritual Blessing A minister was known by a few of his parishioners to be in the church building, and one of them, a machinist of frame of mind, called on him to see him.

Right on the heels of our story the bicycle riding boys, riding their bicycles through the streets, and later the officer checked out the car and decided to make a visit.

With millions of dollars being spent on the car, it is not surprising that the practice be eliminated each day.

Required Qualifications The perfect nursing supervisor must be a certified nurse, in the opinion of one nurse. At the American Nurses' Assn. Convention recently held in Chicago, Mrs. Helen Goodale Florence, special representative of the American Nurses' Assn., listed these ten qualities needed by a nursing supervisor.

Attack From Above From our lofty perch in the Editorial Room on the second floor of the Herald we have a good view of the youngsters as they sometimes try to pry into the storage shack for trash on the north side of the State Theater building.

Second Meeting Today Butner told newsmen he would have a second meeting with the Czechs at the border near here later today.

U. S. authorities said earlier at Heidelberg that they were preparing for the release of the seven American prisoners held in the hands of the Czechs.

Justice Clark Hit On Testimony Balk In Disputed Report

Washington, July 6 (AP)—A House Judiciary subcommittee in a disputed report today criticized Justice Tom C. Clark for declining to testify after he joined the Supreme Court.

The document, a 10-page report, was prepared by the subcommittee members in its major sections. At various points "minority views" were included.

Report Not Approved Rogers defended Clark, a Republican, in a report which he said was not approved by the subcommittee.

Clark could not be reached for comment. But Rogers said Clark was "unfortunate" because he was deprived of the benefit of any light which might have been shed by a former member of President Truman's cabinet.

U. S. authorities said earlier at Heidelberg that they were preparing for the release of the seven American prisoners held in the hands of the Czechs.

Second Meeting Today Butner told newsmen he would have a second meeting with the Czechs at the border near here later today.

U. S. Policy Reappraisal 'Agonizing'

Washington, July 6 (AP)—The council said it was beginning a reappraisal of its foreign policy which may prove to be much more "agonizing" than Secretary of State Dulles foresaw.

Dulles was talking about a reappraisal of U. S. policy in Europe when he served notice on France that this country might undertake an "agonizing reappraisal." But now-Senate Republican leader Knowland of California has raised a far more sweeping issue.

The issue essentially is: At what point should the United States be asked to re-examine its policy in Europe? What Knowland has proposed is that if United Nations members bring Red China in one U. N. door, the United States should walk out the other.

He has not claimed that this is a revolutionary new proposal. He has said that he would resign the majority leadership and crusade for a new proposal. He has asserted, further, that he is getting popular extensions of popular support.

Barrenau, Germany, July 6 (AP)—German border police said today that Czech authorities have offered to transfer seven U. S. soldiers they arrested Sunday for three members of a Czech labor gang who fled to the West over the weekend.

Holiday Traffic Total 248, 82 Below Estimate for U.S.

Final figures on accidental deaths showed the July 4th weekend to be far sorer and sadder than expected. Traffic fatalities especially were well below indications, the total of 348 comparing with the forecast of 430 made by the National Safety Council.

Ned H. Dearborn, president of the council, said the comparatively low traffic toll was "spectacular evidence of a trend which has been apparent all this year. The year-month has shown a decrease in traffic deaths from the corresponding month last year.

Political and legal experts of the United States and Britain pushed ahead today with plans to give West Germany almost full sovereignty—including rearmament powers—in their two occupation zones if France does not ratify the European Army plan.

State's Traffic Toll at Three Over Weekend By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Three traffic accidents combined with 12 hours of rain during the early Sunday gave Connecticut a death toll of three and during the 72-hour Independence Day weekend.

S. Policy Reappraisal 'Agonizing'

ation would dare attack. Russia rendered the U.N. ineffective with its expansion in eastern Europe, and its ready use of the veto. The United States will back up the U.N. defense systems authorized by the U.N. charter.

Defense Treaties The principle systems are those for the western hemisphere and the North Atlantic and European areas. But defense treaties also link the United States and Japan, Korea, and Australia-New Zealand.

In all these compacts and in its foreign aid programs the United States has sought to build a world strength so that it would not stand alone in the world. It has suffered setbacks, the most serious being the loss of China to the Reds.

But the whole purpose of U. S. aid is to help friendly nations in expectation of greater security through collective strength.

In the past year the process has become increasingly difficult. France has persistently delayed action on a European Defense Treaty which would unite West Germany independent and rearm it. It was not until the end of the year that the United States action that Dulles spoke of a possible armistice.

Now the U. S. impending danger of a break with Britain over Red China is becoming much more acute. This coupled with the probability that the U. S. will recognize the Chinese Reds as part of an Indo-China peace deal, has forced the U. S. to re-evaluate its membership in the force.

Opposed to Red China There is great opposition to the Eisenhower administration and in Congress to letting Communist China into the U. N. The question arises: What should the United States do about the U. N. nations force it anyway?

The present answer to that question in the State Dept., so far as it can be pieced down, is that the United States should continue to work with the U. N. and its allies while the situation develops.

But knowledge, by giving an answer of an entirely different nature, has been given. The U. S. Red China policy may not mark the breaking point with the allied governments, which in connection with Dulles' restudy of European policy, which is being restudied, and which has been quiet a while for some time, this raises a fundamental question.

There have been enough recent debates on foreign policy to make it clear that the U. S. is in a direction as limited to about four possibilities.

1. Preventive war.—The Truman administration repudiated this as a possibility when it was widely talked about several years ago. The Eisenhower administration committed itself to a policy of peace. Yet in some official papers the idea of making a war on Russia occasionally pops up, the argument being that the U. S. assembly holds an edge. But the idea is foreign to all U. S. traditions.

2. Western hemisphere fortress.—This concept was pushed about in the early days of the Truman administration. The idea was that the United States had ample power and resources for its own defense, that it is not too dependent on any ally, and that it should not stand on their feet. They cannot however be prepared up. This notion was displaced by those who contend that the U. S. is dependent on the military power of other nations.

3. Island strategy.—This concept is based on the fact that the U. S. is a powerful nation. It holds that America's best allies are those on islands—Japan, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand and Britain. By extension it would include such anti-Communist nations like Spain and South Korea.

The better you know America, the better the future looks!

Great changes are taking place in America today. And each one of these changes brings with it an equally great opportunity for all of us—businessmen and farmers, factory workers, office workers and housewives. Here are just a few of the changes that, directly or indirectly, will make your future brighter.

THE CHANGE: America's booming birth rate! Every day we add 11,000 new babies, enough in a month to populate a city the size of Richmond, Va.
THE OPPORTUNITY: Babies are good customers—for baby foods and safety pins right now, eventually for all products that make our factories hum.

THE CHANGE: Even though employment in some areas has fallen off, we still have twenty million more jobs than we had in 1939. And the long-range trend is up.
THE OPPORTUNITY: A flow of purchasing power that keeps our economic machine running smoothly and steadily.

THE CHANGE: Nine times as many Americans now enjoy a $5,000-plus income as in 1941. Savings are at an all-time high.
THE OPPORTUNITY: Saved money is for spending—for homes and automobiles and washing machines and whatever else enterprising businessmen have to sell.

THE CHANGE: By rapidly mechanizing our farms, we have increased agricultural output 52% per man-hour since 1940.
THE OPPORTUNITY: Increased farm production makes the American farmer a better customer for all kinds of merchandise.

THE CHANGE: More and more of our young people attend high school and college; 2,377,000 are in college right now.
THE OPPORTUNITY: An intelligent, informed public is a great assurance of future prosperity and stability for any nation.

THE CHANGE: Our industrial genius increases America's factory output every year. Today, 98% of our work is done by machinery.
THE OPPORTUNITY: Increased productivity creates higher living standards and leads to more general prosperity.

THE CHANGE: More leisure. Forty million Americans get paid vacations, and they're not spending their free time in the old rocking chair.
THE OPPORTUNITY: More and more dollars for the hotel and transportation business, and for the sports, hobby and entertainment fields.

THE CHANGE: Our growing knowledge of atomic energy and how to harness it for constructive peacetime uses.
THE OPPORTUNITY: This opens up fabulous new fields. Sooner or later, atomic energy will run our farms, factories and mines.

THE CHANGE: Membership in religious congregations has increased at twice the rate of our population gain.
THE OPPORTUNITY: Our spiritual gains will help us to lead richer, fuller lives, and to make the best use of our material gains.

Justice Clark Hit On Testimony Bar In Activity Check

Full judicial committee last Aug. 6, another letter by Rep. Chauncey W. Reed (R-Ill.), chairman of the full committee, said that with the exception of one of the eight points, the subcommittee report "has not received the consideration of the committee... and does not necessarily reflect the judgment or conclusions of this committee."

Clear Agreement
Rogers, in a separate statement, cited these circumstances and noted that one of the rules which Keating proposed and the subcommittee adopted—and which is reprinted in the document—reads: "No report shall be made or released to the public without the approval of a majority of the full committee on the judiciary."

Rogers declared that release of the report, which he attributed to Keating, "utterly disregards orderly and ethical procedure by attempting to mislead the public for political purposes." He termed the release "both unauthorized and unscrupulous."

Rogers also said he had evidence that there had been "flagrant instances of suppression of vital documents and evidence during the course of this investigation, either by Mr. Keating or by members of his staff," and that he would ask the full committee to look into the matter.

Keating, in a statement accompanying the report, termed "unfortunate" the Clark episode, and he added:

"There is little hope that the situation which remains unobscured by the Supreme Court Justice who refused to throw any light on his years of service in the department... will ever be revived or effectively punished."

Submitted Memo
In a minority report printed with the report, Rogers commented: "Just what evidence Justice Clark was expected to give to this committee that it did not already possess is not made clear."

There were many references to Clark in the group's hearings, and Keating wrote him, on June 15, 1953, citing some of them and inviting him to testify. The Justice replied two days later that "the courts must be kept free from public controversy," and that therefore he would not follow a "personal inclination" to testify. He submitted a memo commenting on some of the cases investigated.

The subcommittee report said these comments "do not meet the hour, or resolve the questions raised initially, but further analysis seems fruitful."

The report also said the subcommittee was convinced it could have subpoenaed Clark, but decided not to do so. Rogers said that Keating "well knows that when he attempted to subpoena Justice Clark the full committee voted overwhelmingly to deny this request."

Among the recommendations which the subcommittee made:

1. A revision of laws dealing with conflicts of interest between service to the government and private interests by present or former government employees.

2. A re-examination of bribery laws with relations to gifts between public officials and citizens.

3. Greater uniformity in the handling of federal grand juries. Here are the cases about which the committee wanted to question Clark:

James A. Malinly, a criminal division attorney during Clark's tenure as attorney general, was involved in an investigation concerning his work for a private client while still in the hire of the government. Clark advised the committee he received no derogatory reports about the attorney.

Normal E. Miller and Associates, Inc., a Michigan contractor, was involved in a suit by the government to recover alleged false charges under a post-ops Navy contract, which was dismissed in 1947. Clark said he had no independent recollection of the case and took no action regarding the prosecution.

T. C. Cain, a North Carolina businessman, was charged with violating office of price administration regulations but never prosecuted after Justice Clark said he made no commitments regarding the criminal case and added that the civil settlement came after he left the department.

By Alast O. Olson, a St. Paul, Minn., physician who was convicted of tax fraud in 1932. The committee criticized the department's failure to investigate Olson's membership for New Hartford, Norfolk and Hartford.

The vote was illegal, the court ruled that the board of Barhamsted and Colebrook are the only legal members of the district even though their voters approved membership for New Hartford, Norfolk and Hartford.

The court said there is nothing to bar Barhamsted and Colebrook from voting again on the question of admitting Norfolk and Hartford to the district, since they imposed no conditions.

The case involving the deputy sheriff requested a claim for rent for restaurant property in New Haven during a four-month period five years ago when it was in possession of the county sheriff of a bankruptcy trustee, a claim which the common pleas court allowed but which the Supreme Court denied.

Former Deputy Sheriff Anselmo Cavaliero, acting on orders from the late George C. Rogers, then New Haven County Sheriff, attached a restaurant whose operation thereupon left the property, which they had leased, and did not return it to the sheriff.

The Chapel-High Corp., owner of the property, sued and won from Cavaliero and the administrator of Rogers' estate. The corporation said Cavaliero's attachment was illegal because he did not file an inventory of the property he attached, and also that there was a contractual obligation on the part of the deputy and the sheriff to pay rent while the property was padlocked and under attachment.

The insurance company sought the advice of the court as to whether it was liable for the loss of a trespasser and liable for the rent. Nor was there any contractual obligation on the sheriff's part to pay the rent, the court added, stating that the lease still obligated the restaurant operators even though they had abandoned the property.

The court became involved in the definition of unloading a truck as the result of a case in which a Bristol store paid $35,000 to the parents of a 10-year-old Farmington girl, Priscilla Rindfleisch, who suffered permanent injuries when a roll of linoleum weighing more than 200 pounds, fell on her. A truck driver employed by the store had delivered the goods to the Rindfleisch home and had left the roll of linoleum standing on and near the front door.

The store sought to recover its $35,000 loss from the Travelers Indemnity Co., which had insured the truck against liability arising out of the truck's ownership, maintenance or use. The insurance contract stated that use included loading and unloading.

State Court Bars Conditions On Joining Regional School

Hartford, July 6.—A batch of decisions handed down yesterday by the United States Supreme Court included rulings that:

1. A town cannot impose conditions on the sheriff for joining a regional school district.

2. A deputy sheriff is not necessarily trespassing when he seizes attached property when his attachment does not follow the letter of the law.

The spot of unloading a truck does not end when the cargo has been removed from the vehicle. In a case involving Regional School District No. 7, the court ruled that the towns of Barhamsted and Colebrook are the only legal members of the district even though their voters approved membership for New Hartford, Norfolk and Hartford.

The vote was illegal, the court ruled that the board of Barhamsted and Colebrook are the only legal members of the district even though their voters approved membership for New Hartford, Norfolk and Hartford.

The court said there is nothing to bar Barhamsted and Colebrook from voting again on the question of admitting Norfolk and Hartford to the district, since they imposed no conditions.

The case involving the deputy sheriff requested a claim for rent for restaurant property in New Haven during a four-month period five years ago when it was in possession of the county sheriff of a bankruptcy trustee, a claim which the common pleas court allowed but which the Supreme Court denied.

Full judicial committee last Aug. 6, another letter by Rep. Chauncey W. Reed (R-Ill.), chairman of the full committee, said that with the exception of one of the eight points, the subcommittee report "has not received the consideration of the committee... and does not necessarily reflect the judgment or conclusions of this committee."

Clear Agreement
Rogers, in a separate statement, cited these circumstances and noted that one of the rules which Keating proposed and the subcommittee adopted—and which is reprinted in the document—reads: "No report shall be made or released to the public without the approval of a majority of the full committee on the judiciary."

Rogers declared that release of the report, which he attributed to Keating, "utterly disregards orderly and ethical procedure by attempting to mislead the public for political purposes." He termed the release "both unauthorized and unscrupulous."

Rogers also said he had evidence that there had been "flagrant instances of suppression of vital documents and evidence during the course of this investigation, either by Mr. Keating or by members of his staff," and that he would ask the full committee to look into the matter.

Keating, in a statement accompanying the report, termed "unfortunate" the Clark episode, and he added:

"There is little hope that the situation which remains unobscured by the Supreme Court Justice who refused to throw any light on his years of service in the department... will ever be revived or effectively punished."

Submitted Memo
In a minority report printed with the report, Rogers commented: "Just what evidence Justice Clark was expected to give to this committee that it did not already possess is not made clear."

There were many references to Clark in the group's hearings, and Keating wrote him, on June 15, 1953, citing some of them and inviting him to testify. The Justice replied two days later that "the courts must be kept free from public controversy," and that therefore he would not follow a "personal inclination" to testify. He submitted a memo commenting on some of the cases investigated.

The subcommittee report said these comments "do not meet the hour, or resolve the questions raised initially, but further analysis seems fruitful."

The report also said the subcommittee was convinced it could have subpoenaed Clark, but decided not to do so. Rogers said that Keating "well knows that when he attempted to subpoena Justice Clark the full committee voted overwhelmingly to deny this request."

Among the recommendations which the subcommittee made:

1. A revision of laws dealing with conflicts of interest between service to the government and private interests by present or former government employees.

2. A re-examination of bribery laws with relations to gifts between public officials and citizens.

3. Greater uniformity in the handling of federal grand juries. Here are the cases about which the committee wanted to question Clark:

James A. Malinly, a criminal division attorney during Clark's tenure as attorney general, was involved in an investigation concerning his work for a private client while still in the hire of the government. Clark advised the committee he received no derogatory reports about the attorney.

Normal E. Miller and Associates, Inc., a Michigan contractor, was involved in a suit by the government to recover alleged false charges under a post-ops Navy contract, which was dismissed in 1947. Clark said he had no independent recollection of the case and took no action regarding the prosecution.

T. C. Cain, a North Carolina businessman, was charged with violating office of price administration regulations but never prosecuted after Justice Clark said he made no commitments regarding the criminal case and added that the civil settlement came after he left the department.

By Alast O. Olson, a St. Paul, Minn., physician who was convicted of tax fraud in 1932. The committee criticized the department's failure to investigate Olson's membership for New Hartford, Norfolk and Hartford.

The vote was illegal, the court ruled that the board of Barhamsted and Colebrook are the only legal members of the district even though their voters approved membership for New Hartford, Norfolk and Hartford.

The court said there is nothing to bar Barhamsted and Colebrook from voting again on the question of admitting Norfolk and Hartford to the district, since they imposed no conditions.

Nor was there any contractual obligation on the sheriff's part to pay the rent, the court added, stating that the lease still obligated the restaurant operators even though they had abandoned the property.
